HAVANA, Feb. 9.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's first day in Havana was a comparatively quiet one, and this evening he is spending at United States Ambassador Noble B. Judah's home, having refused an invitation to a dance at the Havana Yacht Club because of the many engagements which will tax his endurance in the next two days. He was smiling and completely rested from his trip from Haiti yesterday when he came down to breakfast this morning.

His first concern in the morning was for his plane, and he went to Columbia flying field, where it was in a hangar being overhauled under the supervision of American Army officers who are instructing the new Cuban flying unit. A mechanic from the Wright Motor Company was looking over the engine. Colonel Lindbergh seemed to think that it was in excellent condition after the many hops through the tropics.

The plane seemed in as good conditions as when it left Mexico City, although there were a few places where the fabric on the fuselage needed a little tightening up.

Colonel Lindbergh warned the mechanics to be careful of the flags which have been painted on the nose of the fuselage. The covering on which they are painted was removed while the engine was being examined, and the metal sheets were carefully wiped off. There are three rows of these flags now, one of every country in which the Spirit of St. Louis has landed, and they are probably the most unusual decoration ever bestowed upon an aviator.

When the plane is placed in the Smithsonian Institution these flags will form a record of its accomplishments which every one can read, for under each is the date of arrival in the country represented.

He Looks Over Other Planes.

When he left his own plane, Colonel Lindbergh went over to the hangar of the Pan-American Airways, which operates three-motored Fokkers between Havana and Key West, and looked over one of the big craft, which was being groomed for the afternoon flight across the straits. He also inspected a big three-motored Ford plane in which his attorney, Henry S. Breckinridge, flew to Havana. He was much interested in the new wheel tail skid on the Ford, and said he thought it was a good innovation, particularly as the plane had brakes.

After he left the airships Colonel Lindbergh stood for a time shading his eyes against the brilliant sun and looking over the flying field, from which he is to take off at dawn Monday for his flight to St. Louis.

He said it would be easy to get away on it because of the excellent work which had been done by the Cuban Government in grading it, and that he did not anticipate any trouble with the load of gasoline which he will carry. He will not need more than 220 gallons, he said, which is about half what he used on the flight to France, and he has a long runway, even though it is rolling, in which to get up speed.

He drove directly across the field when he left to the Officers' Club at Camp Columbia, where he was the guest of the officers of the Cuban Army at lunch. He was accompanied on his inspection of the plane by Ambassador Judah and Major James C. R. Schwenck, the Military Attaché, who also were with him at the luncheon.

Secretary of War Iturralde expressed for the Cuban Army the emotion of its officers and men when they saw Colonel Lindbergh land yesterday and praised his courage and skill on his previous flights. The flight of Colonel Lindbergh over the West Indies will equal in historical value the voyage of Columbus, he said.

Flag Is Presented to Him.

The flag of the Officers' Club was presented to the flier in a brief ceremony.

"I feel most honored at your reception," said Colonel Lindbergh in reply, "and will keep the flag which you have presented to me in memory of my visit to Cuba. It is unnecessary to carry anything away with me by which to recall this visit, for it is one of the pleasantest in my experience. I had intended to visit Cuba during the Pan-American Conference even before I left Washington and wish that I might spend more time here, for I saw many things on my flight over the island which I would like to see more closely. I hope some day I may return and spend more time here."

The luncheon was followed by a re-

President Makes Col. Latrobe, Black Hills Friend, His Aide

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Colonel Osmun Latrobe, who formerly was commander of the Fourth Cavalry at Fort Meade, S. D., and has a reputation for spinning yarns of army frontier life, was appointed today as military aide to the President.

Colonel Latrobe met the President last Summer in the Black Hills of South Dakota and his personality pleased Mr. Coolidge so much that he was invited back to dinner at the Summer White House after having had luncheon there. He was recently transferred to Washington from field duty and today he was installed on the Presidential staff to succeed Colonel Blanton Winship, who has been transferred to the Philippines.

The President was invited today to again spend his Summer vacation in the Black Hills. Paul Bellamy, representing Governor Bulow and the Associated Clubs of the Black Hills, presented the invitation.

FIND HICKMAN SANE, GUILTY OF MURDER

YOUTH REMAINS UNMOVED

Sentence, Which Will Be Death or Life in Prison, Will Be Pronounced Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9.—William Edward Hickman, kidnapper and slayer of Marian Parker, was found sane in exactly thirty-six minutes today by a jury of four women and eight men.

The verdict, which was reached on the first ballot, automatically established Hickman's guilt of the charges of kidnapping and murder, to which he had pleaded "not guilty by reason of insanity." The penalty is death or life imprisonment.

Hickman will appear for sentence before Judge Trabucco Saturday at 9:30 A. M., at which time efforts will be made by his counsel to obtain delays through legal technicalities.

Jerome Walsh, chief defense counsel, declared that he would take advantage of every opening afforded him under the California law. A motion for a new trial, a motion in arrest of judgment and notice of appeal will all be forthcoming from the defense.

Hickman, who retained his composure even while the verdict, which may send him to his death, was being read, walked from the court room surrounded by his guards with a jest on his lips.

"The die is cast and the State wins by a neck," he remarked to newspaper men. "I don't have much to live for. I don't know yet why I killed the Parker girl, but I did, and I'll take my punishment."

University Asks for Body.

While Hickman was philosophising in his cell, Chief Jailer Dewar informed him that the University of Chicago was requesting by long-distance telephone that he leave his body to that institution for scientific study.

"Perhaps I should have my body cut up into forty-eight pieces and send a piece to every State," he remarked.

Twenty minutes after the afternoon session began Judge Trabucco had completed his brief and very much to the point instructions to the jury and they retired for deliberation at exactly 2:24 P. M.

The bailiff's buzzer, indicating that the jury wished to return to the court room, sounded at just 3 P. M. The Judge and counsels returned to the court room five minutes later and the jury filed in at the same time.

J. K. Ruggles, the last juror to enter the room, marked himself as the foreman by bringing with him

CALL ROCKEFELLER IN THE OIL INQUIRY; STEWART MAY QUIT

BANKERS ARE SUMMONED

Committee Seeks Light on Osler's Continental Deposits—Clark Freed in Jury Shadowing.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—John D. Rockefeller Jr. will appear as a witness in the Senate inquiry into the Continental oil transaction when the committee resumes its sessions Saturday morning, it was announced today. Mr. Rockefeller telegraphed from New York, accepting a subpoena wired to him, but apparently he did not think the committee was called on to summon him by subpoena, for he added at the end of his message, "an invitation would have been equally effective."

In his telegraphic message, which was addressed to Senator Walsh, Mr. Rockefeller made it known that if the stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana desire the resignation of their board Chairman, Colonel Robert W. Stewart, they can have it for the asking and at any time they may care to have it become effective. This is the word Colonel Stewart himself has given Mr. Rockefeller, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation, which corporation is one of the principal owners of the Standard of Indiana.

Mr. Rockefeller also revealed that he had been in touch with Colonel Stewart since the latter's appearance before the committee, when he refused to answer questions about the Continental Trading Company deal, out of the profits of which, the Government charges, Albert B. Fall received from Harry F. Sinclair more than $230,000.

The matter of Colonel Stewart's refusal to answer is now in the hands of the District Attorney for Grand Jury action and is also before the court on a writ of habeas corpus which Colonel Stewart obtained after his arrest by order of the Senate.

Rockefeller Message to Walsh.

New York, Feb. 9, 1928.

Hon. T. J. Walsh, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

I have seen Colonel Stewart and have told him in person what I have said to him in my letter of Jan. 24, of which you have a copy, namely, that in my judgment the public interest demands that the fullest possible light be thrown upon the matter now under the investigation by the Senate committee.

I also told him that I greatly regretted he had not answered the questions put to him. Colonel Stewart confirmed the position which he had taken before the committee and said nothing could change his decision.

He further stated that he did not wish to embarrass in any way the stockholders of his company and that they could have his resignation whenever they desired it. This is a question which the stockholders should, of course, and will naturally consider as the matter develops.

While I greatly regretting the present situation and frankly at a loss to know what more I can do, I stand ready, as heretofore, to render any service in my power to help the committee in its efforts to expose wrongdoing.

In my talk with Colonel Stewart he refused positively to discuss the case, except as above stated. I, therefore, am still without any information which has not already been submitted to the committee.

I have wired the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate that I would

Phone to Link Germany and America Today; Marx and State Department Heads to Talk

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Wireless telephone service will be opened between Germany and the United States tomorrow with conversations between Berlin and New York and Berlin and Washington. Chancellor Marx will be the first to use the new service. He will talk with the State Department in Washington.

The service will be officially opened at 4:30 P. M., Berlin time. Exhaustive tests in the last few weeks have shown transmission to be equally as good as that between London and New York. Conversations will be relayed to London on special lines and cables completed some months ago and sent from London by radio. Berlin, Stuttgart and Cologne will be the only cities to which the service will be open for the present.

Ambassador Schurman will be the second on the list of users of the new service and will be followed by Herr Schaetzel, Minister of Posts, who will talk with Ambassador Prittwits in Washington. There is a probability that Herr Boess, Mayor of Berlin, will talk with Mayor Walker before the service is opened to the general public.

Aside from those taking part in the tests, the only persons who have ever telephoned from Berlin to the United States were Clarence D. Chamberlin, on his arrival after his transoceanic flight, and a Stuttgart telephone operator, who, with the aid of a London operator, talked with New York, for which he was reprimanded for overstepping the rules.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The opening of radio telephone service between Germany and the United States tomorrow will mark the sixth inauguration of telephone service with European capitals within the last year. Recently service was opened between Washington and The Hague, and also with Brussels. Previous connections had been made with Paris, London and Rome.

Mayor Walker will talk to Berlin at noon today over the transatlantic telephone system. He will speak to several officials in Berlin and also to the editor of the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger.

DR. BUTLER PROPOSES WAY TO CURB NAVIES

Urges Us to Accept Principle of Blockading an Aggressor Nation's Ports

EXCEPT IN THIS HEMISPHERE

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University and also of the Carnegie Institute Endowment for International Peace, brought forward last night a new suggestion which he said might result in the reduction of naval armaments. Basing his plan upon Article XVI of the League of Nations Covenant, which imposes a blockade upon an aggressor nation, Dr. Butler proposed that the United States recognize any such blockade as the punishment of an aggressor, provided it was not directed against a nation in the Western Hemisphere.

The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Pilgrims of the United States, held at the Hotel Biltmore, with Sir Harry Brittain, M. P., representing the parent organization, the Pilgrims of Great Britain. Throughout the evening there were repeated tributes to the work of the Pilgrims in promoting Anglo-American brotherhood, and warm messages of friendship were read from King George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught. But Dr. Butler plunged boldly into the subject of naval rivalry between Britain and America, and bluntly denounced "big navy" agitation on both sides of the Atlantic.

Sees Bar to Big Navies.

Explaining that his proposal would remove the necessity for a big navy rather than bring about an outright reduction of naval strength, Dr. Butler said:

"Suppose that the Government of the United States were to say to Great Britain, to France, to Italy, to Germany and to Japan, 'If you find yourselves under obligation, either as members of the League of Nations or as signatories of the pact of Locarno, to establish a blockade against an aggressor nation as defined, we shall accept your good faith and shall ourselves respect the blockade, with the proviso that no such blockade shall be effected against any nation of the Western Hemisphere.'

"If this were done, the last support of the group who constantly urge large naval armaments, whether here or in Great Britain, would be removed. We should then be ready to build navies of peace instead of navies of war. The battleship, the destroyer, the submarine could be not only limited but wholly removed by international agreement, and navies of peace, consisting of as many cruisers of say 8,000 or 10,000 tons as a nation might think it needed for its own police work would carry the flags of peace-loving and war-renouncing nations to the uttermost parts of the earth as symbols of the new and happy order that had come to be established among men."

Praises Work for Peace.

Dr. Butler drew a picture of statesmen in many nations working to teach their people "to think in terms of peace and not in terms of war," and to build a sound and durable international order out of the ruins of the war. He singled out for praise M. Briand of France and Dr. Stresemann of Germany, praised the Irish Free State for having a "Minister of Defense" instead of a Secretary of War or of Navy, and added that "a people that thinks of conflict in terms of defense only is more than half way down the road to permanent peace."

"The next step," Dr. Butler continued, "is to give other peoples credit for the same sincerity and disinterestedness that we claim for ourselves. That means that we may, and should, formally agree with them to renounce war as an instrument of policy. The significance of that far-reaching statement would be that in entering upon an international discussion we should be exactly in the same frame of mind as is an individual in like circumstances when engaged in discussion, or even controversy, with his fellow-citizen.

F. L. SMITH IS NAMED AGAIN AS SENATOR

Gov. Small Appoints Him for Unexpired Term and Calls Special Election in November.

CANDIDATE ASSAILS SENATE

Appeals to People of State for Support Against 'Usurpation' of Constitutional Right.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 9.—United States Senator-elect Frank L. Smith, whose seat was declared vacant by the Senate because of utility contributions made to him during his primary campaign in which he was nominated, handed his resignation to Governor Len Small tonight.

The Governor immediately appointed Smith to serve for the unexpired term and issued a proclamation calling for a United States Senatorial primary on April 10 and a Senatorial election in November. His petition as a candidate for renomination and election will be filed next week.

C. J. Doyle, personal counsel for Mr. Smith, was present. He said that the time when Mr. Smith would go to Washington had not been determined. Should he present himself to the Senate and his seat should again be denied to him, Illinois would continue to be represented by one Senator until after the election next November.

Smith Charges Senate Usurpation.

Senator-designate Smith issued a statement which reads in part:

"By the unprecedented action of a majority of the members of the United States Senate the State of Illinois is deprived of equal representation in that body. This action was taken in spite of the definite and specific guarantee to this State in the national Constitution that its inherent right to equal representation with every other State, large or small, in the upper house of the national Congress should forever be maintained.

"Further, by this action of a majority of the Senate the people of Illinois had taken from them a right they reserved to themselves when the State became a member of the Union—namely, their right to exercise their own judgment in choosing a Senator. * * *

"The Republicans of Illinois nominated me as their candidate for United States Senator in a primary held pursuant to law and against which no charge of corruption, or unfairness has been sustained or even made. The people of Illinois elected me Senator in an election held pursuant to law, against which no charge of corruption or unfairness was sustained or even made.

"Outlawing" of 7,000,000 Citizens.

"The proper officials of this State certified me to the United States Senate as the choice of the people of Illinois. The Senate by a majority vote denied a seat to the representative of Illinois and thereby outlawed the 7,000,000 people of this State as unfit and unqualified to exercise the fundamental rights of citizenship. * * *

"By this action the Senate made the issue between itself and the people of Illinois. There are various ways in which that issue might be met. I am advised by counsel that the right of the Senate to take the action it has pretended to take can be brought before the Supreme Court of the United States by any one of several methods.

"But as this issue is one between the people of Illinois and a majority of the members of the Senate, it seems to me that the only proper way to determine it is to refer it back to the voters of Illinois.

"When a majority of the Senate pretended to veto the choice of the people in electing a Senator, that majority also pretended to declare a vacancy in the representation of Illinois in the Senate.

"It is the considered opinion of the chief law officer of Illinois, the Attorney General, that the attempt to declare such a vacancy was an usurpation of power which the Senate does not possess, and was therefore void. It is also the opinion of the Chief Executive, the Governor of Illinois, that no vacancy exists.

FESS TELLS SENATE COOLIDGE CAN ACCEPT IF PARTY NAMES HIM

Says There Will Be No Dishonor, Though President Sincerely Wants to Quit.

BAITED BY THE DEMOCRATS

Reed of Missouri in Third-Term Debate Castigates Ohioan as Seeking Office Himself.

FESS ADMITS AN 'UNTRUTH'

He Was Not 'Rebuked' by President for 'Draft Coolidge' Interview —Vote May Come Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Under no circumstances could bad faith, deceit or insincerity be imputed to President Coolidge if he accepted a renomination from the Republican National Convention at Kansas City, Senator Fess of Ohio, regarded as the leader of the "draft Coolidge" movement, vehemently assured the Senate this afternoon during a lively debate over the La Follette anti-third term resolution.

Severely grilled by Democrats, Senator Fess stuck to his contention, although insisting that he did not believe Mr. Coolidge actually desired to run, but also admitting that he did not know what the President would do.

"Will he accept? Let us have a 'yes' or 'no' answer," demanded Senator Reed of Missouri, a contender for the Democratic nomination.

"I do not know," Mr. Fess replied.

A fear by Democrats that Mr. Coolidge would be named—"it is not impossible," he said—induced them to support the anti-third term resolution, Senator Fess declared. If President Coolidge were nominated, he said, he would be "so overwhelmingly elected that the Democrats would be a long time looking for a leader who will stand equal to him."

All the Democrats shared this same fear, Mr. Fess declared, "including not only Senators but THE NEW YORK TIMES and the great Democratic papers which would be very glad to see our friend the Governor of New York the candidate."

Admits Telling an "Untruth."

He had told an "untruth," Senator Fess voluntarily admitted, when he said to newspaper men at the White House last Fall that Mr. Coolidge was "displeased" because Mr. Fess had given a "draft Coolidge" interview to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"It was not true, but I wanted to get it across," he told the Senate today, laughing also at the idea that he had been "reprimanded." He reiterated his conviction that Mr. Coolidge would lose no standing if "drafted" by the convention.

"I want the country to know," he said, "that I should not regard it as a mark of insincerity, dishonor or any breach of faith or lowering in any degree of character if the Kansas City Convention should tender the nomination to President Coolidge and he should accept it. I do not know whether he would accept, but he certainly could without a breach of honor and without bad faith."

Senator Reed of Missouri declared that Senator Fess had surveyed the "entire bunch" and was now driven in desperation to Mr. Coolidge.

"I protest against that," said Senator Reed. "I protest in the name of the Senator's own colleague, Mr. Willis. I protest in the name of the distinguished leader upon the other side of the Senate [Curtis of Kansas]. I protest in the name of that great English statesman, Mr. Hoover. I protest in the name of that great dirt farmer, Mr. Lowden. I protest in the name of the great Republican Party; for, with all its faults, it does really seem to me it is not absolutely forced to nominate

Methodists Pass Resolution Against Smith At Meeting of Southern Educational Body

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 9.—Southern Methodist educators, representing schools from coast to coast, went on record today against Governor Smith for President and sought to enlist educational leaders of the South against his nomination.

The movement was started by Dr. Stonewall Anderson of Nashville, general educational secretary of the Church, in the closing hour of a Methodist Educational Association meeting that had been uninterruptedly devoted to religious matters.

The college Presidents and executives passed the resolution against Governor Smith when, after Dr. Anderson had brought the matter up, some became alarmed that "the wrong impression would get out." A formal resolution, therefore, was framed and carried, but the chorus of ayes was not loud and several noes were heard.

"Two dissenting votes," announced Dr. G. D. Winfield, President.

That did not end the matter, however. Dr. E. M. Glenn, conference education secretary from North Alabama, who had just read the report of the Convention Committee on "finding," was on his feet.

"I think it's time some one resounded the cry of 'Down with rum, Romanism and rebellion' once more," he said.

Dr. C. A. Rush, conference education secretary for the Alabama conference, did not agree with that.

"We must make it clear that we are opposing Smith because he is a wet and not because he is a Catholic," said Dr. Rush.

The resolution merely said that it was "the sense of this association that the nomination of Al Smith would be unfortunate, and in our opinion would not enlist the support of the educational leaders of the South."

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—Governor Smith was "interested" in, but silent on the action of the Southern Methodist Education Association today in adopting a resolution expressing opposition to his nomination for the Presidency.

Shown an Associated Press dispatch from Memphis, he was asked whether he was interested and whether he had any comment.

"Yes," he told newspaper correspondents, "I am very much interested, but certainly I have no comment to make on this or any similar report."

Mrs. Coolidge, Ill With Cold, Misses First Social Affair

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Coolidge was advised by Major James F. Coupal, the White House physician, to go to bed tonight to check a cold which she has had for several days and which late this afternoon produced a slight fever.

She absented herself from the dinner given tonight at the White House in honor of Speaker and Mrs. Longworth and followed her physician's orders. It is stated that her fever is very slight and no serious condition was apparent. It was the first White House function she has not been able to attend.

MAYOR TO HAVE LAST SAY

Two Separate Actions and Third Jointly Are Agreed On.

UNTERMYER IN CHARGE

BOARD'S DECISION DUE SOON

LaGuardia and Black Offer Bills to Prevent Injunctions by the Federal Courts.

All-day conferences among city and State officials yesterday resulted last night in an apparent agreement to oppose the application of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for a 7-cent fare in three separate suits, one to be brought by the city, one by the Transit Commission and a third suit to be brought jointly by the city and the commission.

Two moves were made in the House of Representatives yesterday to take from the Federal courts the power of intervening in the fare controversy. Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, a Republican, announced he would ask the House Judiciary Committee to report out his bill limiting the injunctive power of the Federal courts with respect to public utility matters. Representative Loring Black, Democrat, introduced a similar bill specifically excluding contracts between municipalities and public utilities from the scope of Federal injunction.

Because of new legal questions which arose in the discussions of attorneys yesterday as to the rights of the city and the commission to bring actions having to do with the rate of fare, the Transit Commission once more put off its decision on the I. R. T.'s petition. It is unlikely that a decision will be announced before tomorrow, although a slight possibility was held out last night of a decision late today.

Yesterday's conferences appeared to have brought the Walker Administration and the transit body back together again, but Mayor Walker got an agreement that the final plans be submitted to him for approval or veto. It is likely that Samuel Untermyer, the Transit Commission's special counsel, will represent both the city and the State in the fare litigation.

Offers Fare Compromise.

While the officials were debating courses of procedure, James L. Quackenbush, general counsel of the Interborough, told newspaper men in response to a question that the company would be willing to compromise on an immediate grant of a seven-cent fare on the elevated lines, but under no consideration would agree to drop the move for a higher fare on the subway. The company would merely allow the question of the subway fare to rest for the time being while the result of the higher fare on the elevated was being watched.

Mr. Quackenbush said he would be willing to recommend this course to the directors of the company with the understanding that it would be an experiment, the plea for higher fares on the subway to be dropped only in the event the increase on the elevated proved sufficient to solve the company's financial problems.

The Interborough attorney said he did not think there would be any difficulty about two different rates of fare on the rapid transit systems. He did not believe, he said, that very many people would change to the subway.

"People usually take the lines which bring them where they want to go," he said. "I do not believe that very many people in the zones served by the elevated lines would desert them for the subways because of a two-cent increase."

Mr. Quackenbush repeated his belief that the whole fare question would go ultimately to the United States Supreme Court, no matter what action the Transit Commission takes. The Transit Commission might suspend the increased fare for ten months if it decided to hold hearings, he said. The commission has thirty days under the law in which to decide what course it will follow. It then has 120 in which to hold hearings, with an additional six months allowed for hearings if they are deemed necessary. The Interborough has indicated it would seek to prevent the commission from suspending the seven-cent fare during this period, through a resort to the Federal courts.

None of the officials concerned with the expected 7-cent-fare battle would take the suggestion of a compromise on an increase for the elevated lines seriously. The extent to which the Manhattan elevated is tied up in the dual contracts and, governed by the 5-cent clause in those agreements is one of the questions bothering the legal staffs of the city and the commission. It is known that some of the authorities are inclined to the opinion that the law

KANSAS CITY KEPT AS CONVENTION CITY

Butler, After Conference, Denies Republicans Have Any Idea of Meeting Elsewhere.

ROOM SHORTAGE IS FEARED

But Local Committee Says Small Hotels and Private Homes Are Available.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The Republican National Convention will be held in Kansas City despite admitted unsatisfactory conditions as to hotel rooms and convention accommodations, William M. Butler, Chairman of the National Committee, said after a four hours' session here today with the Kansas City local Committee on Arrangements. Mr. Butler declared that the meeting had not been called to consider plans to take the convention away from Kansas City and that matter had not even been discussed seriously.

The conference was held for the purpose of arousing the local Kansas City Convention Committee to action and impressing upon it the necessity of furnishing 4,000 rooms for use of the delegates, alternates, the National Committee members and newspaper men, and about as many more for visitors.

Asserting that the Kansas City committee failed to satisfy the National Committee that it had complied in an adequate way with its promises, Miss Elsie M. West of Milligan suggested that it seemed apparent that Kansas City could not take care of the convention crowd and that the committee ought to consider another city.

This did not meet with approval by other members of the National Committee present. The Republican leaders have decided that such a move would be suicidal and that since a decision had been made to hold it at Kansas City, in the corn and wheat section, this would be done even though some of the delegates and others might have to suffer inconveniences.

About 4,000 Rooms in Sight.

The Kansas City committee reported that about 4,000 rooms were in sight for the delegates, national committeemen and newspaper men, although the committee did not have contracts for this entire number.

This report did not convince the Arrangements Committee that the local committee had lived up to its promises in this direction and the latter's representatives were told so, although the belief now exists that desired contracts will be obtained next week for the rooms necessary for those having to do directly with the convention.

In the opinion of the Committee

San Remo Casino Gaming Rooms to Reopen; Mussolini Lifts Ban for Monte Carlo Rival

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Feb. 9.—Answering questions in the Senate today, Premier Mussolini revealed that permission had been given to the casino at San Remo to reopen its gambling rooms. This is a special exception, gambling being illegal everywhere throughout Italy.

Senator Ricci asked Mussolini whether he was aware that the casino at San Remo had reopened its gambling rooms, that the fact was receiving the greatest publicity throughout the country and that other seaside resorts were asking for similar treatment.

Mussolini answered:

"First, the Government is perfectly informed that the casino at San Remo has reopened its gambling rooms.

"Second, as for the publicity made throughout Italy, I must remind Senator Ricci that publicity is not controlled by the Government.

"Third, it is quite true that other seaside resorts would like to follow San Remo's example, but their wishes will not be fulfilled. The Government's intentions on this point are quite clear-cut.

"For very strong reasons of a political and economic nature a special exception was made in favor of San Remo, but the exception in this case also serves but to prove the rule."

It is understood that the Government hopes San Remo may in a few years be developed rival Monte Carlo. This was considered such an important economic result that it outweighed the moral considerations which counseled that gambling be banned absolutely in all other Italian towns.

A precedent for such a course exists in Italy, where the Government, though rigorously suppressing all forms of gambling, supports the State lottery, humorously called the "tax on fools," which draws a revenue of several hundreds of millions of lire for the Government each year.

terborough may succeed in getting the higher fare on the elevated lines, anyway. However, no one is willing to admit officially the possibility of even a partial defeat, with the result that the Interborough's informal and unofficial offer fell on deaf ears.

Conferences Start Early.

The Transit Commissioners resumed their conferences the first thing yesterday, Mr. Untermyer being absent during the morning, however. The commission's regular counsel, Clarence M. Lewis, sat in with Commissioners Charles C. Lockwood and Leon G. Godley, the two lawyer-members of the commission.

Reports of disagreement by the commission over the course to be followed were denied by Commissioner Lockwood, who admitted, however, that there had been disagreement among the attorneys. This had been settled, he said.

With respect to reports that influences were at work within the commission to oust Mr. Untermyer from further participation in the increased fare litigation Mr. Lockwood said:

"Chairman Gilchrist and Mr. Untermyer have been friendly. Mr. Untermyer and myself have been very friendly. Commissioner Godley is now friendly with Mr. Untermyer."

The Commissioner did not explain the shades of difference in his explanation of the Commissioners' attitude, but it was interpreted as a diplomatic denial, rather than a complete one.

Meeting at City Hall.

In the middle of the afternoon Mr. Untermyer joined the conference at the commission's office and shortly afterward, Commissioner Godley, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Untermyer went to City Hall for a conference with the Mayor. A bit later Commissioner Lockwood arrived and still later they were joined by Chairman Gilchrist. In the Mayor's office awaiting them were the Mayor, Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson, John H. Delaney, Chairman of the Board of Transportation, and William G. Fullen, counsel to the Board of Transportation.

After about an hour the Transit Commissioners left, but the conference continued. Afterward it was said officially by both sides that the visit of the Commissioners had nothing at all to do with the 7-cent fare, but was concerned with an administrative matter affecting the Transit Commission. The Commissioners, it was pointed out, must sit as judges on the Interborough's application and therefore could not confer with the city officials over means of defeating an increase.

It was admitted, however, that the fare question was discussed by the attorneys and the Mayor after the Commissioners had left. Mr. Untermyer was present "as a lawyer, but not as special counsel to the Transit Commission," it was explained by the spokesman for the group.

The evident hair-splitting was thought to be occasioned by Mr. Quackenbush's criticism of the commission the day before for conferring with those who will oppose the 7-cent fare in the courts.

Board Asks City's Attitude.

Earlier in the day the Transit Commission had sent a letter to the Board of Estimate inquiring officially whether the city intended to oppose the Interborough itself or desired the Transit Commission as the city's agent to do so.

The letter read:

"As you are aware, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company has filed with the commission a petition and schedules for increased fares. No matter what decision the commission reaches in the matter, it will be necessary that legal action be taken to protect the rights of the city. Under Article 40, Subdivision 5, it is provided:

"'The city may, by the commission or otherwise, also bring any suit or proceedings for injunction for specific performance or to recover damages or to obtain any relief or for any purpose under this contract.'

"We shall be obliged if you will advise us immediately whether the city wishes to bring action directly by its Corporation Counsel or through the commission."

After Mayor Walker had read the letter to the Board of Estimate, he observed:

"This indicates the spirit of co-operation which has been offered to the city by the Transit Commission. I suggest that the Transit Commission really has a dual personality, a dual obligation, in that it represents the State and yet the city, being made the agent of the city by the State.

"So far as there is any invasion of their right of jurisdiction over operation and increased fares we have every right to expect that the Transit Commission will be represented in any law suit.

"So far as the dual subway contracts to which the city is a party are concerned the city should be represented by the Corporation Counsel or some special counsel which the chair of the Board of Estimate may select. It is the opinion of the chair that the city should be represented by the Corporation Counsel."

Agree on Joint Action Later.

Even though the Mayor indicated at this time that he recognized that both the city and the commission were concerned, it was not until later that it was agreed that both should act. He had insisted upon action by the city on the theory that the fare question was one of contract between the city and the company and not a matter for regulation by the State body.

It was this situation which threatened an open conflict between the Administration and the commission until the conference late yesterday. Credit for the amicable settlement was given last night to Mr. Fullen, the Board of Transportation's counsel, and to Chairman Delaney of that board.

At the parley in the Mayor's office Mr. Fullen brought up the question of the commission's duties as the city's agent under the law in transit matters. He suggested the possibility that since the city itself had never signed the dual contracts, but that on the contrary they had been signed by the old Public Service Commission as the city's agent, although afterward approved by the Board of Estimate, the courts might hold that the city had no right itself to sue. Likewise, the attorney pointed out, the commission being merely an agent in the making of the contract, might be held by the courts to be an improper party to bring suit.

Mayor Walker agreed with this view, it was said last night, and with Mr. Untermyer also concurring the triple-barreled plan of action was determined upon.

Two Leading Figures.

The decision leaves the Mayor and Mr. Untermyer the outstanding figures in the increased fare fight picture. The Mayor insisted upon and obtained an agreement that the final plans are to be submitted to him for approval. Mr. Untermyer, who appeared two days ago to have been shoved to one side, happened as the commission's counsel in the action which the commission will bring and as counsel also in the joint proceeding, Corporation Counsel Nicholson will represent the city merely in the city's separate action.

Even though he may not be officially designated special counsel for the city, the arrangement places Mr. Untermyer quite definitely in charge of the litigation and makes it certain that he will direct the manoeuvring.

Under the triple suit scheme the courts will be left to decide which of the three suits is to be thrown out, and appeals will be taken at once to reinstate the rejected actions in order that no loophole may be overlooked. It was feared that if the city should be rejected as one of the litigants, for instance, the higher courts might rule that the city should have been left in and the Transit Commission barred, in which case the case would be out of court.

The suit will be an action to compel specific performance of the contract. The first step will be an application for an injunction to restrain the Interborough from violating the fare provision of the contract pending determination of the issues.

The papers of all three suits will be identical. It is because of disagreement over some of the points to be included that further conferences between the attorneys are needed.

SEEK CURB ON U. S. COURTS.

LaGuardia and Black Offer Anti-Fare Rise Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Representative LaGuardia announced today that he would ask the House Judiciary Committee to pass his bill to take from the Federal courts the right to intervene in cases such as that arising over 5-cent fares in New York. At the same time a similar bill was introduced by Representative Black, who proposes an amendment to the Federal code so as to protect the city and State in the event that the New York transit companies seek to invoke injunctive processes.

The purpose of these bills is to prohibit injunctions in case the 5-cent fare is attacked on the ground that it is confiscatory.

"I first introduced this bill in the early part of 1924," said Mr. LaGuardia. "I have introduced the bill every Congress since then.

"My bill would prevent the public utility companies from going to a Federal court and being permitted to refuse to obey an order of a public service commission fixing rates or otherwise. It looks to me as if the traction companies will soon run to the Federal courts and I believe it will be very helpful to the people of New York, as well as to the people of every large city in the United States, if my bill is enacted. Two years ago every Corporation Counsel of every large city in the United States supported my bill.

"Such resort to the Federal courts was never intended by the framers of the Constitution. The conduct of the gas company in the Federal court did a great deal to make people lose confidence in the Federal courts."

Mr. LaGuardia made the charge that "Federal Judges are too free in granting injunctions" and some "too eager to cater to what are known as big lawyers who are only the paid agents of nefarious public utility companies," Mr. LaGuardia added:

"Some years ago I saw a Federal Judge, not now on the bench, carry the golf bag of a big lawyer at the Grand Central Station.

"This same Judge one time when the whole Board of Estimate and Apportionment appeared before him would wait for a god of the head from a lawyer whom he had appointed receiver before he would say yes or no, in accordance with the signal he received. That is why I am so eager to get action on my bill and I believe the time is now ripe."

"No interlocutory injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation or execution of any statute of a State, or of a contract to which a municipality and a public utility corporation are parties, or in the enforcement or execution of such statute or contract of an order made by a State or municipal administrative board, commission or official, shall be granted by any Justice of the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court or by any District Court or by any Judge thereof, or by any Circuit Court Judge as such Judge or acting as District Judge, or by any Circuit Court, unless on the application in the case of such contract of a municipality a party to such contract petitioning for such order through its chief executive officer, or by the Governor of any State in a matter concerning any statute of the State."

Mr. Black said "the city and State of New York have refused to abrogate the five-cent fare contract."

"The 'public be damned' attitude of the founding Vanderbilt," he continued, "has lately been expressed in legalistics by transit attorneys. They would use the Federal injunction as a gouging process.

"I have introduced my anti-injunction bill to permit the city and State officials to be unhampered in their fight in the public interest. The companies were so anxious to make the five-cent fare contracts invulnerable against attacks that they had a lobby at work in Albany to validate them years ago. They followed the legislation up with litigation to have the State Court approve of these then lucrative contracts. They had the executive branch of State and city, the legislative branches of State and city and the courts of New York make the five-cent fare dual contracts ironclad to the maximum degree. Now, they want the Federal courts to junk all these solemnities, so they can forego the consideration of a five-cent fare for which they received these valuable franchises. The companies of 1928 are going to try to overrule the companies of 1912. As two orphans they are going to run to the sanctity of the Federal courts.

"The companies have attempted by all devices to increase fares. They have fought politically; they have tried propaganda by special urge and by subtlety; they have used questionable lobby methods; now they will defend the increase in the name of the Constitution and holy equity. They have precipitated a great clash between popular rights and corporate cupidity. It is no small battle that New York City engages in. The whole country may be affected by its outcome. Corporations are clannish; let the people cooperate.

"I hope Congress and the President will quickly act to protect the people of New York by denying injunctions to the companies. If, before the bill passes, an injunction is secured, I will endeavor to have an amendment to make the bill retroactive and vacate such restraining order."

STIR OVER HAIG DEATH TAX.

Nation Will Take Back a Quarter of Its Gift After War.

LONDON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Death duties on the estate of Earl Haig have produced an unusual situation which is causing much comment.

After the war the House of Commons voted to Earl Haig a gift of £100,000 as a mark of the nation's gratitude, while a fund of £286,000 also was raised by public subscription for the purchase of the Bemersyde home in Scotland.

Unless Parliament takes some action, the Exchequer will take back something like a quarter of the country's gift under the present death duty rates. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today that the law gave him no power to make an exception.

'ANASTASIA' LANDS; IS KEPT SECLUDED

CLASH ON IDENTITY GROWS

Herman Bernstein Is Sure None of Czar's Family Escaped Death—Grand Duke Also a Doubter.

Frightened by the explosions of flashlights, burying her face deeply in the fur collar of her coat, a young woman who is alleged to be the daughter of the late Czar Nicholas of Russia walked down the gangplank of the Berengaria yesterday.

She was attended by a trained nurse and two men, one the son of the Czar's private physician and the other Charles Foley, manager of Geraldine Farrar and other concert stars. It was said that Mr. Foley was acting in the interest of certain Russian artists who believe the young woman to be what she purports to be—the immediate heir to the throne of Russia, if monarchy should ever be restored in that country.

Her passage though the customs was expedited and she was taken away in an automobile to an unknown destination. The car was said to have been driven by Mrs. Augusta Richard, who, it is said, will entertain her until Mrs. William B. Leeds, who invited the young woman to this country, returns from her trip to the West Indies.

The identity of Mrs. Richard was not very definitely disclosed until some hours later, when it was admitted at Tenant Farm, the Lawrence (L. I.) residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard, that the visitor was "resting" there. It was added that for the time being she would not talk to newspaper men.

"She desires no publicity at this time. She is tired and is resting here and does not care to be disturbed. She may have something to say to newspaper men tomorrow, or may issue a statement at that time," it was said at the Richard home.

The estate is a large one, on the Causeway Road at Lawrence, and adjoins that of H. H. Rogers. Its owner, a New York importer, is listed in the Social Register as belonging to the Union, Rockaway Hunting and Merchants' clubs, and is a Harvard graduate of the class of 1912. Mrs. Richard is the former Hetty L. Hemenway.

The grounds about the house were guarded last night by two watchmen stationed at the two gates; others were on duty at the rear. The guards declined to allow any one to pass, and also refused to take a message either to the visitor or a member of the Richard family.

Precautions will be taken, it was said, when the party left the Berengaria, to keep her in seclusion because she has only partly recovered her health after nearly two years in German sanitariums, where she suffered from lung trouble and a disordered memory. Her sickness was brought on, according to those who believe in her, by the horrors she experienced at Ekaterinburg, where her father, mother, sisters and brothers were murdered before her eyes and where she was hit twice by bullets and slashed in the face by a bayonet. According to those who doubt her, her disordered health and mental condition are the causes of an illusion that she is the Czar's daughter.

Not Here on a Mission.

No political or public mission of any kind is involved in her visit, according to Gleb Botkin, the son of the Czar's physician, who spoke for her. She came solely as a private person, he said, to visit her third cousin, Mrs. William B. Leeds, the former Princess Xenia. Mr. Botkin said that it was a matter of indifference to the young woman whether the general public believed her to be the Grand Duchess Anastasia or not.

Herman Bernstein, who was in Siberia in 1918 and made an investigation of the murder of the imperial family, said yesterday that he was convinced that none had escaped. He quoted as an eye-witness Yakimov, who said that some of the Czar's daughters showed signs of life after they had been shot. Anastasia, he said, was one of these, and bayonets were used to make sure of her death.

Anastasia, according to her partisans, has bayonet scars on the face and body and a jaw injury due to a stroke of the butt of a rifle. Her own account is that she was left for dead. On her return to consciousness she found herself in a peasant's cart covered with straw. In the cart was a young man in a Red Guard's uniform. He told her that he was a member of the firing squad and that, noticing she was still alive after the slaughter, he had covered her with burlap and later hidden her in the cart. This Red Guard was Tschalkovsky. The wounds and exposure resulted in long illness in a peasant's home in Siberia. She was then 17 years old. The soldier married her and took her to Bucharest. There he was killed in a street fight with Bolsheviki.

Lived by Sale of Emeralds.

She lived for a while by the sale of emeralds sewed in her clothes. She had a child who was later placed in an asylum in Rumania where he is still said to be. She went to Germany in the hope of communicating with former friends. Because of her disfigurement, illness and inexperience, she became discouraged and threw herself into the river Spree from which she was rescued in February, 1920. She was taken to the Elizabeth Charity Hospital where she insisted that she was Anastasia. She was sent to an insane asylum where she was locked up for two years in a room with forty mental patients. One patient, on being released, told of the girl who claimed to be Anastasia. The girl was taken to the home of Baroness von Kleist, but quit this home and went to live with her former fellow patient. Others gradually became interested in her.

The Grand Duchess Olga, sister of the late Czar and aunt of Anastasia, was positive that the young woman was not the Czar's daughter. According to the aunt, the girl did not talk Russian and spoke German with a Bavarian accent. Her inability to speak Russian seemed fatal to her claims, but one physician who had attended her, came forward to say that she had, while in delirium, talked Russian fluently, and that her failure to use it ordinarily was due to her mental condition.

Nurse Identified Her.

Sascha, an old nurse, who had cared for Anastasia from the time she was 4 years old until she was nearly grown up, was brought from Russia, and the girl, from her sickbed, shouted "Zhura, Zhura," a pet name which she had applied as a child to the old nurse. The nurse also identified her by body marks, particularly a protruding bone of the left foot.

Professor Rudnef, who had treated Anastasia for the protruding bone in 1914, examined the young woman in Germany and was convinced that she was Anastasia.

On the other side are Professor Pierre Gilliard, once tutor to the Czarevitch, and Mme. Gilliard, who was employed in the imperial household. Both saw her and are convinced that the young woman is not Anastasia.

The Grand Dukes Boris and Cyril have denied that she is their niece. On the other hand, the Grand Duke Andrew is sure that she is Anastasia.

The one witness in America who says he knew the young woman intimately before 1917 and who has seen her since her reappearance is Gleb Botkin. He is the son of Dr. Botkin, the physician who was slaughtered with the imperial family at Ekaterinburg. Gleb Botkin escaped by way of Japan and came to New York. He believed that she was dead. When stories about the young woman in Germany were first cabled to this country, he was quoted in New York newspapers as believing it to be impossible. But last year he made a trip to Germany and saw her and talked to her. He said that she talked to him in Russian and recalled childhood experiences when they had been playmates. According to Botkin, mistake on his part is absolutely impossible and the young woman is the Grand Duchess.

Illiodor, famous as the "mad monk of Russia," now employed as a porter in a New York building and living at 120 East Eleventh Street, said yesterday he had absolute evidence that Anastasia was dead. He said that, as a court chaplain, he had taught Anastasia her "A B C's" and was interested in her fate. He had obtained, he asserted, full proof of her death, but was not yet ready to divulge it.

CZAR'S UNCLE IS SKEPTICAL.

Grand Duke Alexander Suspects 'Intrigue' in 'Anastasia' Visit.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Although sponsors of Mme. Tchaikovsky contend that several members of the Russian royal family have admitted that she seems to them to make good her pretension to being the Grand Duchess Anastasia, youngest daughter of the murdered Czar, there are others who refuse to accept the strange history of this enigmatic young person, who has gone to New York to be the guest of Mrs. William B. Leeds, formerly the Princess Xenia.

Among those who refuse to believe the story is the Grand Duke Alexander, cousin of the late Czar and now head of the imperial family, who lives in exile in Paris.

"I do not understand this story at all," he said today in an interview. "I make no accusations, but it is all very mysterious. In the newspapers I read that Duke Leuchtenberg and my nephew, the Grand Duke Andrew, have met this young woman who says she is my niece Anastasia. What I do not understand is why they have not brought her to see my three children, who were Anastasia's playmates and who would certainly be the best judges as to her claims. I myself saw Anastasia last in 1917 and would certainly know her again, though she was only 16 years old then. My sister-in-law, the Grand Duchess Olga, went to Berlin to see her some years ago and did not recognize her. Three others, including her former nurse, Chours, and M. Sabline, former Aide de Camp to the Czar, also decided that this Mme. Tchaikovsky, who was at first presented as Titania and later as Anastasia, is neither the one nor the other.

"Now those who are supporting the young woman's claims invoke as witnesses people like the son of Dr. Botkin, who knew the imperial princesses only vaguely, and I wonder why they are taking her to New York to visit my niece, Mrs. Leeds. Is it, I wonder, to obtain money so as to be able to establish a right to the Czar's fortune, which still is under sequestration in a London bank? These are only suppositions on my part and I make no accusations against any one. Yet on the ground that those responsible for this story have not consulted those people who would best be able to judge if Mme. Tchaikovsky really is Anastasia and have deliberately discounted the opinion of those of the family who have seen her, I cannot help thinking the whole business is rather a regrettable intrigue."

KING ALBERT GIVES PLAQUE TO ST. JOHN'S.

Plaque, "The Descent From the Cross," Which Will Be Formally Presented to the Cathedral on Sunday.

The gift sent by Albert, King of the Belgians, to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will be formally presented at the 4 o'clock service in the cathedral on Sunday. The presentation will be made by Prince Albert de Ligne, Belgian Ambassador to the United States, who will come from Washington, D. C., to represent his sovereign.

The contribution is a porcelain plaque representing "The Descent from the Cross." It formerly hung in the private chapel of the King's father, the Count of Flanders.

At the same service a gift will also be presented by Prince de Ligne to the cathedral from the Belgian Government. This is a pair of ornamental lanterns. Both contributions will be formally accepted by Bishop Manning.

General Charles H. Sherrill, Chairman of the Historical and Patriotic Societies' Division of the Committee for Completing the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and twelve men from the 106th Regiment, all of whom have been decorated by the Belgian Government with the Order of Leopold, will constitute a guard of honor to escort the Belgian Ambassador.

Representatives of foreign Governments and many other prominent persons are scheduled to attend the ceremony. After the service the gifts will be placed on view.

Belgium is the eighth foreign country to present gifts to the cathedral through General Sherrill's committee.

TAXPAYERS OPPOSE RENT LAW EXTENSION

Association Will Send Delegation to Albany Also to Fight the Housing Revision Bill.

A large delegation of New York property owners will go to Albany later in the month to protest against the extension of the emergency rent laws and the tenement house revision bill, it was made clear last night at a meeting of the Greater New York Taxpayers' Association, at the Hotel Aston.

About 500 members vigorously applauded every denunciation of these proposals and every assertion that the lot of the property owner in New York is at present a hard one. One speaker said that 80 per cent. of the landlords were suffering from high blood pressure.

The organization, which claims a membership of 7,000, representing property worth $65,000,000, will fight tooth and nail against any further extension of the laws, according to its counsel, Harold M. Phillips. Unlike some of the other speakers who pictured the legislators as mere politicians who would vote for a continuance of the laws just for the assurance of public support, Mr. Phillips said they were honest. He expressed the belief that the landlords would win. From talks with legislators, the lawyer said, he felt sure also that many provisions of the tenement house revision bill which were considered obnoxious to the property owners would be amended.

"The rent laws," he said, "are no longer necessary. Our entire problem today is to get tenants in the house and to keep undesirable tenants out. It is not a question of raising the rent. We have the hardest time maintaining it."

Isidore Berger, general manager of the organization, said that the Tenement House Commissioner underestimated the number of vacant apartments in New York when he put the total at 85,000. Tenement house inspectors, Mr. Berger alleged, often deliberately recorded five or six vacancies in a house when they were told the number was ten to eleven. He assured the landlords that no philanthropic proposal to construct modern tenements where rents would be $5 to $8 a room would ever be carried out. These announcements, he declared, were merely pre-campaign arguments of politicians.

Other speakers were Reuben Wittstein, Dr. Henry W. Berg, a director of the organization, and H. J. Jaffin.

The West Side Taxpayers' Association voted last night to support the bills before the State Legislature which would impose a tax on gasoline and reduce the income tax. The action was taken at the organization's monthly meeting at the McAlpin. Frank W. Demuth, Chairman of the Law and Legislature Committee, gave a summary of the new dwelling house bill, and suggested that the association appoint a committee to go to Albany to get changes made in the bill.

FESS TELLS SENATE COOLIDGE CAN ACCEPT

one man because it has not any other man capable of filling the position."

Senator Fess said that if Ohio could name the candidate he would be an Ohio man, Senator Willis, whom Mr. Fess is supporting.

Fess Castigated by Reed.

"I am not so sure," replied Mr. Reed, "because while the Senator says that now, he has already announced the doctrine that it is perfectly proper and perfectly honorable for a man to go to a convention pledged to a candidate, and then to carry away the prize himself.

"If that be the Senator's philosophy, then I do not know but he may appear in the Ohio convention loudly proclaiming the virtues and praising the pulchritude of his illustrious colleague and have all the time in his heart the hope that this despairing convention, in the last throes of its agony, may turn to him and that he can carry away the nomination.

"I think the Senator does not really mean what he said. I do not think the ordinary ward politician would ever be guilty of going to a convention pledged to a candidate and acting as his manager, and then seeking or accepting the nomination himself.

"I do not think the philosophy taught here today is on a level with a very low order of politics. I think it is beneath that level."

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts criticised that part of the La Follette resolution which would "commend" President Coolidge for "observance" of the third term tradition.

"He has declared himself as clearly and candidly that to impute otherwise would be a reflection on his high character," he said. "My view is that respect for the tradition was his controlling motive."

Senator La Follette said tonight he was still confident of his resolution's success. He thought it would be passed by tomorrow night. The Senate expects to take it up again at noon tomorrow.

Fess Calls "Rebuke' Story Amusing.

First mention of Mr. Coolidge's name today came while Mr. Fess was placidly discussing Presidential history. He had not proceeded far before Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, began to bait him by asking if Mr. Coolidge was "really angry" when Mr. Fess went to the White House last Fall. Mr. Fess explained that he had talked to Mr. Coolidge in the Black Hills just after the "do not choose" statement.

"I got the argument," he continued, "that this is not a one-man country, that there were plenty of other candidates, that the office was one of burdens. I had no intimation then, or even since, that the third-term idea had ever entered into his mind.

"I assumed from what I could gain, without questioning him, that this office is one of burdens and of service, and if the argument that I was putting up, that the country needed him, was of any force, the same argument could be used four years from now, and for that reason there was no force in it."

After granting his interview to THE NEW YORK TIMES he said he went to the White House and said to the President:

"I hope my frequent references to your being called in 1928 are not embarrassing to you."

Mr. Coolidge, according to Senator Fess, replied:

"The difficulty is, the people will think you are talking with my approval."

Mr. Fess then, he said, told the newspaper men:

"Make it perfectly clear that when I am talking about the President being drafted next year I am talking on my own responsibility. I am not talking with his approval."

"Then I added," he continued today, "what was not true, but I wanted to get it across, 'I find the President seems to be greatly displeased with what I have said.'

"It was all amusing, and while I was getting the thing across that I aimed to put across, I did not mean to pay the price for it that I had to pay by saying I was rebuked, or that I was censured or reprimanded, for there was not an element of that in it whatever."

Speaks on His Own Responsibility.

He was speaking altogether on his own responsibility, Senator Fess said, when Senator Robinson asked him if he spoke with Presidential approval.

"I am morally certain that the third-term item had nothing whatever to do with the President's statement," the Ohioan said in reply to Senator Walsh of Massachusetts.

Mr. Walsh asked if the President said anything to Senator Fess that "would lead him to that conviction or conclusion."

"I am not repeating anything that the President said to me, and nobody would ask me to quote the President," was the answer.

"Suppose," Senator Fess asked, "the convention turns to the President. Would he be in dishonor when he has nothing to do with it, if he were tendered a unanimous nomination?"

"Doesn't the Senator think, while he is making this nominating speech, he is doing an injustice to his colleague, Mr. Willis, also a candidate?" asked Senator Harrison.

"None. I am speaking on my own responsibility and I hope with the approval of my colleagues," Mr. Fess replied.

"Absolutely," interposed Mr. Willis.

Senator Reed of Missouri said he wondered whether the Senator from Ohio is really the White House spokesman on this occasion.

"Upon no occasion am I the White House spokesman—this or any other," Mr. Fess retorted.

Recalls Dawes's Statement.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Senator Fess put President Coolidge and Vice President Dawes in the same position respecting their availability for the Presidency in his address in the Senate today by comparing their statements declaring they were not candidates.

"I put the same force to the statement of President Coolidge as I do to the statement of the Vice President," he said, "and that is, while he is not a candidate he can accept the nomination.

"There is a contingency whereby the convention might reach a point where it would want to tender Mr. Coolidge the nomination again. Whether he would accept it I do not know. He certainly could without a scintilla of dishonor or a breach of faith. You Democrats are fearful he will and are trying to make a case dishonor against him in that event."

After he had described the incident of his talk with the President in the White House last Summer Senator Fess was asked by Senator Harrison "if it was true that the President took a piece of gum out and gently tapped you on the wrist as you spoke?" while Senator Robinson of Arkansas inquired:

"Is Mr. Coolidge as free to accept the nomination as if he had made no statement?" Senator Fess answering in the affirmative.

When Senator Heflin of Alabama asked if Mr. Fess did not think the President had "left the door open," the Ohioan replied.

"That is the Democratic interpretation. That party is very fearful the door is open; not only the Democratic Senators, but THE NEW YORK TIMES and other Democratic papers favoring the election of Governor Smith."

Senator Borah said he thought President Coolidge had served two terms within the general meaning of the tradition.

"Is there any doubt," he asked, "but that President Coolidge was renominated and re-elected by a very large majority on the record he made in his first year in office, rather than on the record of his predecessor?"

Senator Fess contended the two terms did not apply to Mr. Coolidge.

Senator Shortridge, Republican, of California, questioned the motive behind the provision of the La Follette resolution commending President Coolidge for observance of the two-term precedent.

Senator La Follette insisted he was sincere in asking the Senate to commend the President.

Senator Bruce, Democrat, of Maryland, declared that if Mr. Coolidge now accepted the nomination it would be "bad faith" to the other Republican candidates.

"You are just afraid that contingency may arise," Mr. Fess shouted back. "There would not be a scintilla of dishonor or bad faith in his acceptance of the nomination."

GAS AT HIGH SCHOOL MAKES PUPILS ILL

Two Boys Collapse at De Witt Clinton From Odors From Dismantled Tanks Near By.

MANY OTHERS AFFECTED

Two Teachers Forced to Quit for the Day—Gas Company Denies Fumes Menace Health.

Unpleasant odors from two partly dismantled gas tanks in the rear of the De Witt Clinton High School, Tenth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, have been permeating the building for the last week, and yesterday caused the collapse of two boys and headaches and other unpleasant effects to most of the 4,000 students and 150 teachers in the building.

Representatives of the Consolidated Gas Company, which is dismantling the two 1,500,000 cubic feet gas holders, insisted that the boys were shamming and that the odors were not dangerous to health. They were supported by a report of Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent of the Health Department, who reported that the fumes emanating from the holders do not endanger health.

He explained that as a result of the recent rains water has trickled into the pits where the tanks stood, and has held the gas odor. The water is being pumped out, but it will take at least two days to complete the task, so that the odors will continue, although with diminishing acuteness, for that period.

The odors, although noticeable throughout the building, have been particularly bad in the rooms on the west side, nearest the gas tanks, according to Oscar W. Anthony, administrative assistant of the school. Pupils in the gymnasium, which is in the basement of the west side, have complained particularly, he said, and the school authorities complained several days ago to the Health Department.

Two hundred and fifty boys were exercising in the gymnasium yesterday morning under the leadership of Instructors David Hobbs and William Spiegel, when Sidney Broder, 13 years old, of 207 West 106th Street, and Max Whitman, 16 years old, of 592 Beck Street, the Bronx, fainted. They were carried out into the air and revived by Dr. Lucius Mason, school physician. Four other boys were nauseated, and most of the class complained of headaches, according to Mr. Anthony.

Dr. William J. O'Shea, Superintendent of Schools, was notified, and authorized the school authorities to abandon the use of rooms in which the odors were acute. Accordingly the gymnasium was abandoned for the rest of the day, and pupils who were scheduled to use it devoted the period to study in the school auditorium. Mr. Anthony said that whether the gymnasium would be used today depended on the strength of the odors. He said that windows on the west side of the building have been kept tightly closed, but that the odors have seeped through nevertheless, and have been acute in about thirty rooms.

Miss Mildred Windor, head of the elocution department and Miss May Condon, a teacher in the department, were so seriously affected that they were forced to abandon work for the day. Miss Helen Meyers and Miss Florence Hess of the mathematics department were also seriously affected, according to Mr. Anthony.

The Consolidated Gas Company issued a statement explaining that at this period of the year old gas holders can usually be opened without a noticeable odor, and that if any were present it was because of the heavy fog of the last few days, which held the fumes close to the ground. The statement said that others in the neighborhood had not complained, and that the company felt there had been "considerable exaggeration" in the report of conditions in the school.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The toesin was sounded tonight in the little Alsatian town of Thionville and other surrounding villages to call the inhabitants to join in rescue work at a train wreck in which seventeen persons were killed and eight injured.

Most of those hurt were miners or members of their families in an electric car on the Nord and Lorraine line which was struck by a loaded ore car on a private line from the Metzange mine. The accident occurred at an unguarded crossing and the electric car was overturned and smashed to bits.

COSTES AND LEBRIX WILL FLY TO COAST

Frenchmen Expect to Perfect Details of Trip on Arrival Here Saturday.

SEND COPY OF LOG TO PARIS

Transatlantic Service to South America Will Be Started in March, They Say.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—A good-will flight across the United States from New York to San Francisco, with stops at some of the larger cities, is being planned by the two visiting French aviators, Lieut. Commander Joseph Lebrix and Lieutenant Dieudonné Costes, who arrived in Washington from Montgomery, Ala., late yesterday, on the way from Paris to New York via Africa and South America.

Details of their transcontinental flight are yet to be worked out. Definite announcement on this and other future journeys for their "Nungesser-Coli" plane will be delayed until after the Frenchmen reach New York City.

One more day will be spent by them in Washington. Tomorrow, at the White House, the aviators will lunch with President and Mrs. Coolidge and later will discuss their flying plans with French officials.

To Be Here Saturday Morning.

The aviators intend to leave at 8 o'clock Saturday morning for New York City and expect to arrive at Mitchel Field at 10:30. A banquet planned here in their honor for Saturday night by the National Aeronautical Association was canceled because of these arrangements. Today the fliers called on President Coolidge, laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, went sightseeing and spent the afternoon going over the log of the Nungesser-Coli since its departure from Paris Oct. 10—a log of which they and the French Embassy are very proud.

Costes and Lebrix pointed with particular pride to their record, which showed they had been in the air 212 hours and 57 minutes, actual flying time, had covered 36,745 kilometers, or 22,843 miles, at an average speed per hour of 175 kilometers, or 107.5 miles an hour. Their pride was prompted by the fact that they had flown nearly thirty miles an hour faster than Colonel Lindbergh. An official report of their record was prepared for forwarding to the French Government.

President Coolidge congratulated them in his study this morning when they were presented by Ambassador Claudel. They arrived shortly after the noon hour and were the centre of great interest for visitors in the White House grounds.

Byrd Sends Regrets.

The President commended their feat in crossing the South Atlantic and their safe arrival in Washington under adverse weather conditions. After exchanging compliments Mr. Coolidge went to the South lawn with the party, where they were photographed.

From the White House they went to a luncheon given in their honor by Assistant Secretaries MacCracken of the Department of Commerce, Davison of the War Department and Warner of the navy. The luncheon was informal, the only speeches being a welcome in French by Mr. Warner, and an appreciation, also in French, by Lebrix, of the wonderful help given by American aviators. A telegram from Commander Byrd expressing regret at being unable to attend was read.

Officials and aviators at the luncheon were: The French Ambassador, M. Claudel; the French Naval Attaché, Commander Sable; the French Air Attaché, Major Thenault; Colonel Paul Henderson, Porter Adams, Representative James S. Parker of New York, Dr. George R. Lewis, Henry Berliner, Secretary Wilbur, Admiral Moffett, Captain Emory S. Land, Captain H. C. Richardson, Commander Wicks, Commander Read, Secretary Davis, Secretary Hoover, Major Gen. Patrick, Major Gen. Fechet, Brig. Gen. Eoulois, Major H. M. Davison, Major H. E. Dargue, Major F. L. Martin, Lieutenant Lester Maitland, Acting Secretary of State Olds, Assistant Secretary Castle, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania and Maurice Leon.

Hold Real Achievement.

In flying from Montgomery, it became known today, the Frenchmen often could not see more than 100 feet ahead because of the heavy fog and were down at times to within sixty feet of tree tops. Traveling by dead reckoning at a speed often exceeding 100 miles an hour, they aimed for Langley Field and then picked their way to the Potomac, joining the army and navy escort planes at the appointed rendezvous over Fort Humphreys. Their successful arrival under the circumstances and over strange territory is regarded here as a real flying achievement. The entire trip from Paris was made over obstacles. After crossing the South Atlantic they landed on the coast of Brazil at night.

Coming across Central America to the United States they followed closely the course of Colonel Lindbergh, whom they met at Colon.

Since leaving Paris on their good-will flight, Costes and Lebrix have covered 22,843 miles, or 36,745 kilometers. Their actual flying time in the air between Paris and Washington was 212 hours 7 minutes, or an average of 107.5 miles per hour, the equivalent of 173 kilometers an hour.

Costes and Lebrix gave THE NEW YORK TIMES tonight the following brief résumé of their experiences:

"We were delayed two days at St. Louis [Senegal] by tropical rain which started the day of our arrival; the field was a swamp.

"At Natal the propeller was injured by a stump because it was a new field, having just been cleared, and used for the first time by an airplane. We had no propeller and had to repair it with improvised means. We could leave only on the morning of the 16th, too late to reach Rio de Janeiro the same day. The landing at night in the mountains of Rio being declared hazardous, we stopped at Caravellas.

"At Rio de Janeiro three Brazilian aviators were killed after our arrival, so we decided not to go through any celebration and instead stayed for the funerals the next day.

"The next day, on account of very bad weather, we were forced to land at Pelotas to avoid the risk of landing at night in Buenos Aires.

At Highest Air Field.

"The principal flights were: Buenos Aires to Asuncion and back on the same day, 1,430 miles, in 11 hours and 47 minutes of flying, with two hours' stop at Asuncion for a luncheon with the local authorities. That trip generally takes from eight to ten days by the usual means of locomotion.

"Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Santiago de Chile we flew on Dec. 2 and 3—2,130 miles in twenty hours and thirty-eight minutes of flying, with a stop of six hours at Buenos Aires. We crossed the Andes at night, at an altitude of 20,000 feet.

"The next jump was from Santiago to La Paz. The aviation field at La Paz is the highest in the world, the altitude being 13,000 feet and in the midst of the Andes. The take-off was made with ten hours of gas and all our baggage.

"We crossed Mexico at a height of 2,200 meters."

Service to Start March 1.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Joseph Lebrix and Dieudonné Costes today turned aside from a round of official and social activities long enough to discuss the possibilities of commercial air routes from Europe to South America.

"We do not want to go back to Paris by plane," Lebrix declared, "because Lindbergh has already done that. His flight was so 'chic' it would be useless repetition to follow him. After we get back to France, perhaps we shall plan the East-to-West North Atlantic flight again. Who knows?"

The conquest of the South Atlantic for commercial aviation is already accomplished, Costes believes.

"As early as March 1, we expect to start a regular weekly French passenger service to South America," he said.

FRENCH PRESS PLEASED.

Says Costes and Lebrix Greeting Signalizes Our Friendship.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The French press recounts with considerable satisfaction the reception accorded in the United States of the aviators, Costes and Lebrix. "The landing of the Nungesser-Coli at Washington has been a signal for an unforgettable manifestation toward France of American friendship," says Liberté, applauding American recognition of the Frenchmen's exploit.

"Our fliers are not only serving as excellent Flying Ambassadors in the United States, but they also are demonstrating the excellent French aviation materials which during a certain period have been subject to doubt," says Le Matin. "In America, Costes and Lebrix are receiving ovations from the great American people who have not forgotten how France last year welcomed Lindbergh and Byrd. And that Franco-American amity should be given its final seal in the realm of the air, it was only necessary that Charles Lindbergh, foremost American pilot, and Dieudonné Costes, foremost European pilot, should meet above that neutral zone near that canal between two oceans which was started by French genius and now assures the United States naval security."

HAITIANS HONORED LINDBERGH HIMSELF

All Agree as Political Antagonisms Revive That His Visit Was a Personal Triumph.

ARGUE EXTENT OF 'BOYCOTT'

One Opposition Paper, Saying Only Officials Met Flier, Accuses Government of Niggardliness.

By CLARENCE K. STREIT,
Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Feb. 9.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's visit to Haiti was a decided personal triumph for him. That fact stands out already in this leisurely moving country, where the feeling toward the United States is dominated by the thirteen years of our intervention here and where local political passions run very high in the small fraction of the population which is articulate.

The influence of his visit on the Haitian attitude toward the United States is much more difficult to estimate. Undoubtedly it has done good; but at the same time, it would be expecting too much to think that Colonel Lindbergh, in his brief stay here, could change the existing situation basically.

In general, the Haitians who favor our intervention and back President Borno are stronger than ever for the United States.

The Haitians who in principle favor continued intervention to a varying degree until the expiration of the treaty in 1936, but who criticize its actual application, and especially the Borno Administration express the warmest admiration for the flier, but maintain the same political opinions still.

As might equally be expected, the attitude of the Haitians who from the beginning have been against our intervention in toto, and who form the extreme minority opposition, have been unaffected by Colonel Lindbergh's visit.

Post Facto Argument Is On.

A residue of the debate continues in the governmental and the Opposition press over the effects of the Oppositionists' stand in favor of abstention from the Lindbergh receptions on the part of the Haitian general public. The former ridicules the Opposition leaders as rebuffed by the people; the latter maintains that the public receptions, such as at the flier's arrival, were attended chiefly by governmental employes.

The moderates and neutrals seem generally to agree that the popular reception for Colonel Lindbergh was unusually warm, but that it would have been even warmer if the recent Haitian political incident, already explained, had not occurred and resulted in political lines being drawn with exceptional sharpness at this time.

It is noteworthy, however, that one of the leading Opposition organs, Le Temps, while relegating Colonel Lindbergh's visit to an inside page, calls him the "Columbus of the air," and says that a "great crowd, without counting the Haitian and American official world and school children," assembled to see the landing. It does not comment on the visit, contenting itself with summarizing the news.

The Opposition paper, Nouvelliste, which with a little more than 3,000 has perhaps the largest circulation of the Haitian press, devoted as much space to Colonel Lindbergh's visit, and as prominently, as the governmental organs.

Says All Admire Flier.

This paper says in an editorial addressed to Colonel Lindbergh:

"All Haitians, without distinction, admire you and from the bottom of their hearts applaud your exploits."

After asserting that the flier saw only pro-Government Haitians, the Nouvelliste adds:

"All other citizens remained at home, though they sent you through their thoughts the homage of their admiration. They did not descend to the streets to acclaim you, because they could not have happy hearts when their country is militarily occupied by the forces of your country."

At the same time, the Nouvelliste criticises both the Government and United States officials for not spending more money on the Lindbergh receptions, saying that, if the Treasury had "been in our hands, we would have entertained him on a large scale."

The comment of Essor is typical of the governmental press. This paper says:

"Colonel Lindbergh produced the best impression on the public of Port au Prince. The people cannot recover from their astonishment that this young man—we have even heard 'this boy'—could have accomplished acts of such marvelous prowess."

American's View of Situation.

Americans who saw the Lindbergh receptions at both Santo Domingo and Port au Prince call the latter half-hearted in comparison. One of them, who has long lived in Haiti, believes, as others do, that the Government's recent action in closing the Haitian social club, the Cercle Bellevue, was chiefly responsible. Other reasons they cited were that at Santo Domingo it was arranged that the unofficial public should have a better chance to see Colonel Lindbergh, more money was spent and the fact that there is no longer American occupation there.

Regarding the local expenditure for Colonel Lindbergh's reception, since Americans practically control the finances of Haiti, they were in a delicate position in providing funds for this occasion, being liable to blame if they did or did not spend an ample sum.

GIVES CITY ADVICE ON BUILDING AIR PORT

Commissioner Howard S. Cullman of the Port of New York Authority, who visited the airports of Europe last Summer as New York's official representative, transmitted to Governor Smith and Mayor Walker yesterday suggestions received from the officials of the Paris airport at Le Bourget for the construction of New York's first airport at Barren Island.

Commandant M. Renvoise and Adjutant Mills of the Le Bourget airport are responsible for Mr. Cullman's three suggestions.

The first relates to the height of hangars, which the Frenchmen admit were made too high at Le Bourget. They said that this makes the hangars difficult to heat in Winter and adds an unnecessary hazard to planes taking off in adverse winds, as they have to rise quickly to a great height to pass over the unnecessarily tall buildings.

The second suggestion is that the hangars and administration buildings be built in the centre of the field rather than around its edges. This is the system adopted both at Le Bourget and at the Tempelhof Airport in Berlin, said to be the best planned and equipped in the world. With the hangars in the centre of the airport the French officials told Mr. Cullman, planes taking off with heavy loads have an unobstructed run from either side of the buildings to the limits of the field and thus do not have to worry about clearing hangars and other buildings after a long run on the ground to gather speed.

The third suggestion is that a tunnel be built under the field from the central hangars to a point outside, so that passengers will not be endangered by walking over the runways to get on and off the field. Mr. Cullman said Le Bourget also has a tall tower in which a watchman is always on duty to keep a log of landings and take-offs and to see that aviators do not break any of the safety rules. If this watchman reports an infraction of the rules the pilot's license is automatically revoked.

Thomas L. Hill, President of the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation, wrote to Mayor Walker yesterday suggesting that the Barren Island airport be named "Wilbert Wallace White Field" in honor of Lieutenant Wilbert Wallace White, who was killed in his plane over the German lines in 1918.

Grover Loening, builder of amphibian planes for the Government and private owners, took exception yesterday to the quoted opinions of officials of other airplane companies that the Barren Island location would not offer any great advantage to them over the locations they now occupy.

Mr. Loening said that the Barren Island site would make an ideal terminus not only for land planes but for seaplanes and transatlantic dirigibles.

"LEAVE IT TO LINDY."

Bush Wants Qualified Persons to Decide Airport Matters.

Irving T. Bush, President of the Bush Terminal Corporation, which operates the $50,000,000 terminal in Brooklyn recently suggested by Postmaster General New as a site for a commercial airport, expressed the fear yesterday that well-meaning but ill-advised persons, knowing little of the science of aeronautics, may hold back aeronautical progress through their ignorance of the real requirements for airports and other aviation developments.

Mr. Bush said he was not qualified to comment on the suitability of the Bush Terminal for an airport. Such matters, he said, should be "left to Lindy" and others with aeronautical training. Mr. Bush said he had never been in a place and therefore would not pretend to know anything about aviation. There are many, however, who having never been in a plane talk about aviation anyhow, he said.

Mr. Bush explained the hope that vision will not fail for our air future. "Our railroads today are struggling with inadequate terminals because no one foresaw the future of the rail carrier and the growth of the country," he said. "The congestion of New York harbor, a deficiency which influences business and commerce everywhere, is due to the same lack of foresight. Our streets are choked with standing motors because no one thought we needed motor terminals and similar conditions prevail throughout the country."

Memorial to Commander Rodgers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Commander John Rodgers, pioneer naval aviator, who attempted a non-stop flight from California to Hawaii in 1925, and was the last of a long line of officers of that name in the American navy dating from Revolutionary times, will be honored with a memorial tablet to be erected at the Naval Academy by his classmates. He was killed in an airplane crash at Philadelphia in 1926.

LINDBERGH DEVOTES TIME TO HIS PLANE

By RUSSELL OWEN.

ception for Americans in Havana at the American Embassy. This is a large house on the outskirts of the city, with a patio in the centre and surrounded by beautiful grounds.

For more than two hours hundreds of people went past the receiving line in which stood Colonel Lindbergh, Ambassador and Mrs. Judah and Major Schwenck. Colonel Lindbergh only occasionally shook hands, for if he had done so he would have been worn out at the end of the day, as nearly 3,000 people went through. Nearly every American in the city was present.

Colonel Lindbergh spent a quiet evening. Tomorrow he will attend a reception at the State Department and receive the Medal of the Province of Havana, go to a public meeting in Central Park, where he will be presented with the keys of the city by the Mayor, attend a luncheon of the Aero Club, and at night attend a grand banquet in the National Theatre given by President Machado.

Women Predominate at Reception.

HAVANA, Feb. 9 (AP).—Colonel Lindbergh greeted all who formed the unending line at the reception at the American Embassy this afternoon with a smile, but only rarely did he break his rule to shake hands. Women outnumbered men at least 4 to 1 in the stream of callers who passed from the terrace of the embassy through the reception room and out onto the tennis courts, where their impressions were exchanged over the refreshments.

"Oh, if I could only kiss you," pleaded one white-haired woman.

Another admirer exclaimed, "I don't blame you for not shaking hands, but I'd give my right hand for a kiss."

Many of the transient American population of Havana, who mingled with the Cubans at the reception, urged the aviator to continue his flights to their home towns.

"Come to Utica, my boy, we'll give you the time of you life," invited a caller who appeared wearing a bright blue blazer.

The Cuban Secretary of State, Martines Ortiz, was the first official to call. Many other prominent figures appeared from time to time, but the doors of the embassy remained open to persons of whatever degree who wished to pay homage to the aviator.

Colonel Lindbergh in the evening conferred with his legal adviser, Colonel Henry Breckenridge, after which the flier intended to retire early.

Colonel Breckenridge was detained several hours at military headquarters last night, charged with having violated orders issued by General Alberto Herrera, Cuban Chief of Staff.

Just before the arrival of Colonel Lindbergh at Columbia Flying Field Colonel Breckenridge ascended in a plane, in violation of the orders prohibition flights in the afternoon hours and until Lindbergh had landed. Because of this, he was held for the disposition of the Chief of Staff until 7 P. M., when through the personal appeal of Colonel Lindbergh he was released.

Lindbergh Calls Havana Distinctive As He Saw It From Air on Arrival

He Finds It a 'Friendly City'—Lays His Route on Flight Home Via Key West and Along the Gulf Coast, Then Compass Course to St. Louis.

By Colonel CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Feb. 9.—My first day in Cuba has been very pleasant. I visited parts of Havana today feeling that it was a friendly city. The reception yesterday assured me of that.

It is a beautiful city and one of the most interesting I have visited on this tour. It is particularly distinctive from the air, where its white houses, Spanish forts and broad avenues show up so clearly in the brilliant light.

My first visit today was to the flying field, where I looked over the Spirit of St. Louis and found nothing but fuel was needed to put her in condition for the flight home. The motor is still functioning as well as ever and the plane itself shows very little wear after its flight through the semi-tropical countries I have visited.

Praises Havana's Flying Field.

The flying field here should be very good after it has been smoothed off a little more. The Cuban Government has already done a tremendous job in the last few days, I understand, in leveling mounds and filling in the rough spots.

With a little more work it should be in condition for the training of the Cuban pilots, which is being supervised by American flying officers. One of the new training planes, brought from the United States and identical with those used by the American Air Service, was being tested this morning just before I arrived at the field.

I appreciate very much the efforts which were made at the field to make it as smooth as possible before I arrived, and I am sure from the interest displayed in aviation here that in the next few years Cuba will build up a flying service of which it may be justly proud.

After the trip to the field, at which I also saw the large three-motor planes which fly between Havana and Key West daily, I was the guest at a luncheon given by the Cuban army officers at the club house at Camp Columbia. They presented me with the flag of the organization, which I shall always keep as a remembrance of my visit here.

Numbers of Americans Surprise Him.

This afternoon I was very glad to meet the Americans in Havana at a reception at the embassy. I did not realize that there was so many of my own countrymen in the city.

I wish that I might stay longer here, for there are many appealing things about Havana, but my schedule calls for arrival in St. Louis on the 13th, which makes it necessary for me to leave on Monday morning at dawn.

The flight home will not be a difficult one. I shall not go straight across the gulf, but will fly from here to Key West and then up the gulf coast to a point where I can again take up a compass course for St. Louis.

As I have said, I do not believe that it is wise to make unnecessarily long flights in a one-motor plane over water, and therefore I have reduced the water hops to a minimum during this tour.

BUYS FURS FOR FLIGHT.

Noblile in Denmark Preparing for Polar Expedition.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 9 (AP).—General Umberto Nobile, Italian dirigible expert, who is planning an expedition to the North Pole by air, arrived here today from Oslo to buy furs and clothes for the expedition, which is expected to leave Rome some time in April for its headquarters in Spitzbergen.

General Nobile said that he was taking the advice of Knud Rasmussen, an experienced explorer, in the selection of clothing.

MRS. JUDAH TAKES CHARGE.

Ambassador's Wife Wins Praise as Lindbergh's Social Mentor.

HAVANA, Feb. 9 (AP).—The social activities of Colonel Lindbergh during his five-day visit in Havana are being guided by Mrs. Noble Brandon Judah, wife of the United States Ambassador to Cuba.

Guests at the reception to the distinguished aviator at her home this afternoon declared that its success was largely due to her efforts. Mrs. Judah took up the role of social mentor for the young flier on his arrival yesterday.

Since she came here a little more than a month ago, Mrs. Judah has been identified with many social events and has gained the reputation of being one of the most successful of the capital's hostesses, as well as one of its most popular matrons. Her command of the Spanish language has contributed not a little to this popularity.

Minister of War Directs Operations in Guanajuato.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 9.—Reports from the State of Guanajuato say Federal operations against rebel elements have been greatly intensified under the personal direction of the Minister of War, General Amaro. The General arrived at the city of Iraquato today.

Railway traffic from Salamanca, which was cut off by rebels a few days ago by tearing up the tracks, is again normal and cavalry patrols are guarding the lines. Airplanes also are on patrol.

This afternoon's Graphico says reliable information has been received regarding an attack by rebels on Salamanca. A passenger train passed over a burning bridge to reach the city and on arriving there found the city attacked and the garrison defending it against 500 bandits. Troops convoying the train took up positions near the station, a number of passengers cooperating, with the result that the rebels lost twenty-five dead.

LATIN UNION TREATY BLOCKED AT HAVANA

Argentina's Insistence Upon Anti-Tariff Clause Prevents Agreement on Compact.

DEADLOCK ON INTERVENTION

OUR STAND STRENGTHENED

Contention Is That World Powers Would Reject Non-Intervention —Conference Situation Tense.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Feb. 9.—At 8 o'clock tonight a subcommittee of the Sixth International Conference of American States decided to report to the appropriate full committee tomorrow that it had been unable to reach an agreement as to whether the Pan American Union should be reorganized under formal treaty between the twenty-one member nations or by simple resolution containing the provisions proposed for a treaty.

The failure of the subcommittee to agree was due solely to the insistence of Dr. Honorio Pueyrredon, Argentine Ambassador in Washington, that the conference should declare for the removal of economic barriers between the American republics. This was a drive against the high tariff policy of the United States.

The Pan American Union will continue to function under a resolution adopted by the Third Pan-American Conference in 1906.

Our Vote Withheld on Alien Plan.

When another subcommittee adopted a declaration that no quotas should be applied to immigration into any American country from another American country, the United States representatives declined to vote, taking the position that immigration was a domestic question with which an international conference had nothing to do.

While this resolution was intended to apply to the United States, the fact is that the immigration quotas of the Johnson law do not affect immigration from Pan-American countries. There is no restriction against the admission of their nationals into United States territory. The resolution, offered by Salvador, was intended to counteract a movement in the American Federation of Labor to have the quota system applied to the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

Another subcommittee provision, originating with Mexico, demanded that to an alien immigrant must be guaranteed treatment equal to that accorded to all other immigrants. This provision is the outgrowth of a Mexican contention that Mexican laborers in the United States are treated as an inferior class.

Intervention Conferees Far Apart.

In two secret sessions of a subcommittee of the Committee on Public International Law, presided over by Charles E. Hughes, the delegates of Argentina, Mexico and Salvador today continued their contest to have the Pan-American Conference flatly condemn any and all intervention by one nation in the affairs of another. At the conclusion of the second session this evening the subcommittee was in deadlock.

Ambassador Pueyrredon of Argentina, Dr. Gustavo Guerrero, Salvador's Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Aquiles Elorduy of Mexico were represented tonight as having held firmly the position that intervention was not justified in any circumstances, even when a nation disorderly fails to protect lives and property of foreign nationals and otherwise neglects the duties which its membership in the sisterhood of sovereign States imposes upon it.

All intervention is wrong, whether called "friendly interposition" or any other euphemistic term, according to the view of the opposition.

The question at issue is whether this condemnation shall be included as a set principle in the code of international law which the full committee is engaged in drafting.

Acceptance Abroad Doubted.

Mr. Hughes, backed by representatives of Peru, Brazil, Colombia and other Governments, combats it with the contention that no such principle ever has been recognized by the nations of the world and, therefore, has no place in an international law codification. It is nothing less than an effort to write into international law something that the practice of nations has not sanctioned, the United States delegation argues.

According to the argument of the United States delegation, this proposal could not become a part of international law even if every delegation in the conference voted for it. That is something beyond the province of the conference to do, the United States representatives contend, unless the proposal is in accord with recognized established principles of international law. Therefore, as the United States delegation sees the situation, this principle, if incorporated in the proposed international law codification, would not be recognized by Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Germany or any of the great nations. Their position would be that as no such principle has ever been sanctioned by accepted practice it is not international law.

The position of the United States in this respect obtains force from the statement made in the House of Commons by Sir Austen Chamberlain that the British Government intended to protect her nationals in China and throughout the world.

In the early stages of the current Nicaraguan intervention the British Government informed the United States that unless the American naval forces were able to protect British lives and property a British cruiser would be sent to Nicaraguan waters. The inference was, of course, that she would land armed bluejackets and marines.

Protection Policy Opposed.

Dr. Puerredon and Dr. Guerrero, backed by Señor Elorduy of Mexico, are contending in the subcommittee that when a citizen of one country enters the territory of another he does so at his own risk and is not entitled to his Government's protection.

This seems to be an echo of the McLemore resolution of the United States House of Representatives during the World War period antedating United States participation. The purpose of that resolution was to withdraw the protection of the Government from any American citizen who took passage on a merchant vessel crossing the waters in which war was being carried on.

President Wilson fought the McLemore resolution vigorously and keenly resented its support by Democratic members of Congress. Its adoption would have been a recognition of the justice of German submarine warfare with its phase of "spurlos versenkt," against which the Wilson Administration was protesting in frequent diplomatic notes to the German and Austro-Hungarian Governments.

Another proposal advanced by Dr. Pueyrredon was that a Government should be relieved of all responsibility for injury to foreign lives and property in its territory during a revolutionary disturbance.

His project is printed in today's Diario, the official gazette of the conference. There are certain exceptions where a Government would not be immune from responsibility for injury to foreigners and their property while a revolution is on. One of the proposals of the Argentine Ambassador is that diplomatic representations in behalf of foreigners injured during civil war shall be denied unless no local tribunals are functioning.

Analogy to Mexican Controversy.

To this, as to the other proposals advanced by the Argentine-Mexican-Salvador combination, the American delegation in the conference will never consent.

The question was presented to the Coolidge Administration in concrete form in connection with the offer of the Calles Government of Mexico to apply its land and petroleum laws to property in Mexico purchased outright by American citizens before the proclamation of the Federal Constitution of 1917, which gives to the Government ownership in all subsoil properties and forbids foreigners to own property in Mexican territory.

One provision of the new law is that when an alien who owns property in Mexico transfers his property rights to the Mexican Government and receives in return a lease on the land which he once had owned outright he shall pledge himself not to appeal to his Government in the event of dispute over the properties concerned.

To the application of that provision Secretary Kellogg protested vehemently. He declined to concede that an American citizen residing in a foreign country should ever forego the right to appeal to his Government for redress against injustice.

Danger to Success of Conference.

Altogether the situation in the Pan-American Conference does not take a happy slant tonight. The danger to the success of the conference appears to be due to a desire to rap the United States sharply without making a specific reference to Nicaraguan intervention, or any other course of the Washington Government which has caused much criticism in certain Latin-American countries.

Argentina's active interest in the effort to condemn all intervention has caused much speculation here. Nicaragua is much more distant from Argentina than it is from United States territory.

Argentinians concede that intervention is not a matter of any active concern to their country. Their attitude appears to be that, having no worries with reference to intervention, they are in a superior position to suggest a proper and unbiased solution with no reflection on anybody.

It seems hardly necessary to say that this argument does not make any appeal to most United States observers of the conference. It is regarded by them as too specious to be taken seriously.

Members of the American delegation are keeping still tongues in their heads, complying with a policy of silence imposed by Mr. Hughes; but it is not going too far to say that the prevalent American view here is that Argentina has a profound dislike for the United States, which is being translated into an endeavor to turn the Pan-American Conference into a medium of punishment.

SEES CONFERENCE WANING.

La Nacion Blames Our Opposition to Argentine Plea on Tariff.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 9 (AP).—La Nacion, in commenting on the opposition of the United States delegates to discussion of tariff barriers before the Pan-American Congress in Havana, expresses the opinion that no tangible results will be forthcoming from the conference on account of this attitude.

Declaring that interest in the conference has already begun to wane because of the failure to bring up questions concerning the welfare of all American countries, the newspaper adds:

"It now appears that nothing really fundamental for the future welfare of the continent can arise from the conference."

La Nacion blames internal politics in the United States for the opposition to discussion of commercial barriers.

DR. POLING IS RE-ELECTED.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, was re-elected President of the Greater New York Federation of Churches at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors held yesterday, following a luncheon in the Hotel Wolcott. Dr. Poling is now on a brief cruise in the Mediterranean.

Those elected Vice Presidents were the Right Rev. Herbert Shipman, junior Suffragan Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of New York; the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of the Madison Avenue Methodist Church; the Rev. Dr. Augustus Steimle, who recently completed ten years as pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Advent; Professor James C. Egbert of Columbia University and Edward M. Bowman.

The Rev. Dr. William B. Miller was re-elected the General Secretary. A sabbathical six months leave was granted to him. Charles H. Tuttle, United States Attorney for the Southern New York District, was elected counsel.

Other officers chosen were: Recording Secretary, the Rev. Dr. Charles K. Gilbert; Treasurer L. Le Roy Curtiss; Assistant Treasurer, George L. Leonard. In the absence of Dr. Poling the presiding officer was Dr. Sockman.

SANDINO LEADS BAND AGAINST AMERICANS

Nicaraguan Guerilla Chief Sends Letter Saying "Blood Will Flow" If He Meets "Yankees."

By HAROLD N. DENNY.

By Tropical Radio.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Feb. 9.—Reports this evening from Matagalpa indicated that General Augustino Sandino, the rebel chieftain, was sweeping southward toward the region of the American coffee plantations, with the avowed object of making trouble for the "damned Yankees." Most, if not all, of the Americans and other foreigners residing in the country districts have come in to Matagalpa.

All doubt appears eliminated now that Sandino is leading his marauders in person and the band he is immediately commanding is composed of 150 well armed mounted men, evidently well disciplined.

Before leaving the scene of his latest appearance, Sandino left an insulting and threatening note regarding the United States Marines to be forwarded to the chief political officer of the Department of Matagalpa. The letter was left by Sandino early yesterday morning at the home of Charles Potter, wealthy British owner of the coffee hacienda La Fundadora, fifteen miles northeast of Matagalpa.

According to Mr. Potter's foreman, a young German named Frankel, Sandino entered the estate at the head of his men at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The guerrillas did not molest anybody and damaged none of the property, but some of the workmen were frightened into fleeing.

Concerned Only With "Yankees."

Frankel remained and had an extensive conversation with Sandino, he reported yesterday to his employers. He quoted Sandino as saying that the rebels would not molest the property there, and as concerned only with "the Yankees."

Sandino had dinner at the plantation house and wrote out his letter while his men were bivouacked in a valley on the plantation. At 3 A. M. yesterday Sandino and his band left for the hills.

Mr. Potter reported the information given by Frankel to Harold Patterson, British Chargé d'Affaires, last night by telephone.

Mr. Potter delivered the Sandino letter to Matagalpa, where in turn it was handed over to the marine commander there. In the dispatch the rebel chief is said to express bitter contempt of the marines and to accuse them of cowardly conduct in Nueva Segovia, which is taken to refer to the terrific bombing by marine aviators of this stronghold of El Chipote on Jan. 14.

He is said also to have expressed a desire to meet the marines near Matagalpa, "when blood will flow."

Marine Patrols Are Active.

Headquarters here of Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, commanding the marines in Nicaragua, has been informed of the existence of the letter, but it was said that the text had not been transmitted here yet because the radio was not operating well.

It was announced that the American patrols are very active in the district where Sandino is conducting his raids. The marines' troop movements are heavy.

Mr. Patterson did not call at the American Legation today, and it is presumed that he is satisfied with the assurance given to him by United States Minister Eberhardt yesterday that every possible protection would be afforded to British property and lives.

It is believed here that the Nicaraguan Congress will adjourn soon for a week to give it a chance to work out of the present deadlock on the McCoy Electoral law. The Congress has twelve sessions remaining before adjournment, and no progress whatever has been made toward a solution of the biggest problem before the country.

Dr. Cuadra Pasos, the Foreign Minister, is expected home from Havana, where he is attending the Pan-American Conference, before the expiration of the contemplated recess. He is believed still sympathetic to the American viewpoint, and it is expected here that he will join President Diaz and Leopoldo Salazar, the President of the Senate, in their efforts to effect the passage of the bill to assure United States supervision of the elections.

New York Man Sees Sandino.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Feb. 9 (AP).—Confirmation of the presence of Augustino Sandino with his band of rebels in the State of Matagalpa came from two sources today. Besides information through British Chargé d'Affaires Petterson, Carleton Beals, representing The Nation, a weekly magazine published in New York, arrived here with the statement that he spent five hours with Sandino Saturday in a camp at San Rafael del Norte, a short distance northwest of the city of Matagalpa.

Mr. Beals said that Sandino had about 100 well-armed and mounted followers and that the rebel leader says he had thirty machine guns. Sandino, he said, furnished him with a guard of thirty men on the last half of his journey to San Rafael.

Mr. Beals, coming from Honduras, had crossed the State of Nueva Segovia, which had been Sandino's stronghold until United States marines captured his headquarters recently. The journey was made on horseback under the guidance of Indian sympathizers with Sandino.

HOUSE DEFEATS RIDER AGAINST INTERVENTION

Rejects Amendment to Military Bill by 103 to 71—Nicaraguan Action Scored.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—By a vote of 103 to 71 the House today rejected an amendment to the Military bill, offered by Representative Collins, Democrat, of Mississippi, providing that none of the funds appropriated should be used to send troops to foreign countries without the specific authority of Congress.

"Armed intervention in the affairs of a sister nation is war," declared Representative Garrett of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader, during discussion of the Coolidge policy in Nicaragua provoked by the amendment. The amendment had the support of Democratic leaders, among them Representative Moore of Virginia, of the Foreign Affairs Committee, all of whom contend that intervention was an act of war and should never occur without the consent of Congress.

"Any condition that is serious enough to justify armed intervention is surely serious enough for the President to ask the counsel of Congress," Mr. Garrett declared.

Representative Wainwright, Republican, of New York, who was Assistant Secretary of War in the Taft Administration, suggested that only recently it had been shown there had been twenty-five instances between 1895 and 1921 where the United States had undertaken to protect American life and property abroad by the use of armed forces.

"Would the gentleman say that if our interests were menaced the President should have no power to act?" asked Mr. Wainwright.

"If a situation develops in a foreign place where armed forces are needed it is the President's duty, under the Constitution, to seek the counsel of Congress," replied Mr. Garrett.

Opposing the amendment, Representative French of Idaho, Chairman of the House Naval Subcommittee, said the Wilson Administration had intervened to restore and maintain order in San Domingo, and that if the United States had failed to act at the time some other nation would have undertaken the responsibility. He denounced the amendment as an infringement on the prerogatives of the Executive to handle foreign affairs.

Mr. Moore urged that the Collins proposal should not be treated in a spirit of partisanship. He argued that it was simply an assertion of the constitutional provision vesting Congress with the power to declare war, and that it should be adopted.

Opposing the amendment, Representative Barbour of California, in charge of the military bill, said such legislation should not be placed as a "rider" on an appropriation bill.

As it dealt with our international relations, he said, it should have careful consideration and study by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House.

"Broadly interpreted, it would prevent us from pursuing bandits across the Mexican border," suggested Representative Hoch of Kansas.

"If such a prohibition had been in effect at the time it would have prevented us from using armed forces in China," remarked Representative Somers, Republican, Washington.

Only a handful of Republicans voted with the Democrats for the Collins amendment. They were Representatives Nelson, Beck, Schafer, Browne, Peavey and Schneider of Wisconsin and LaGuardia of New York. Representative Berger, Wisconsin Socialist, also acted with the Democrats.

HAS NICARAGUA PEACE PLAN.

Knowles Asks Coolidge to Suggest a Coalition Ticket.

Horace G. Knowles, former American Minister to Nicaragua, has written a letter to President Coolidge, it was announced yesterday, suggesting that the leaders of the three Nicaraguan parties—Conservative, Liberal and Progressive—be called to Washington for a conference on the political situation in that country and to agree upon a coalition ticket for the next Presidential and general election.

Carlos Cuadra Pasos, Foreign Minister of Nicaragua, Mr. Knowles says, is favorable to such a plan, and suggests the name of José Tiburcio Medina, a prominent member of the Progressive Party, as a suitable compromise candidate for President. The other parties would accept it, he thinks.

"The acceptance of this formula," the letter concludes, "would undoubtedly mean peace for Nicaragua, peace at Havana, and peace in our Senate on this subject. It would be an act on your part that would please and give hope for even better things to the people of our country and of all Latin America, and it would reflect lasting credit upon your Administration. It would be one of your greatest achievements toward a settlement of the troublesome Nicaragua affair and pacifying Latin America."

NEWSPAPER MAN IS HELD.

Honduras Detains C. Y. Harrison En Route to Nicaragua.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Friends of Charles Yale Harrison, a New York newspaper man, notified the State Department today that he had been detained at Puerto Cortez, Honduras, by the authorities while on his way to Nicaragua. The department immediately sent a message to George T. Summerlin, Minister at Tegucigalpa, to investigate the circumstances.

Mr. Harrison is understood to have been on an American steamer bound for Nicaragua to interview General Sandino.

MAGNA IN HOSPITAL POST.

Succeeds Dr. Jones, Out as Result of Jewish Hazing Inquiry.

With Dr. Clamor H. Magna, Deputy Medical Superintendent, in charge, things moved quietly yesterday at King's County Hospital following the suspension by Commissioner Coler of Dr. Mortimer D. Jones, Medical Superintendent of the hospital. Commissioner Coler's action was the outgrowth of the investigation conducted last Summer by Commissioner of Accounts Higgins, who was delegated by Mayor Walker to inquire into reports that three Jewish internes had been maltreated by other internes and that there was discrimination and mismanagement in other phases of the hospital's administration.

Dr. Jones is reported as being inclined to look upon the whole affair as routine matter, and announced yesterday that he would devote himself to the preparation of his report in answer to the charges on which the suspension was based.

At a meeting of the Interne Committee of the hospital yesterday afternoon a resolution was adopted recommending that Dr. Lorimer B. Armstrong and Dr. Kenneth Clough, two of the six internes who were suspended last Summer as a result of the hazing, be reinstated. Charles F. Kerrigan, assistant to the Mayor, and officials of the hospital have already expressed themselves as satisfied that the pair had nothing to do with the acts in question.

Immunity Denied Graft Informer.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Feb. 9 (AP).—Patrick F. Boyle, who turned State's evidence at the million-dollar graft trial of Hanover Township school directors, must serve a year in jail, according to a decision of the Court today. It was Boyle's testimony that sent six former Hanover school directors, a contractor and an architect to jail for graft. After the trial all of the defendants started to serve their sentences except Boyle, who declared that immunity had been promised him.

DENY MEXICO PLANS EASING CHURCH LAW

Officials Declare Clergy Must Accept State Regulations Before Exercising Ministry.

MOVE BY MORROW DOUBTED

He Refuses to Comment on Report Here, and Washington Discredits the Published Story.

Copyright, 1928, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 9.—The attitude of the Mexican Government to the Catholic question is entirely unchanged, your correspondent was informed today by a person in close touch with official circles.

Regarding reports from the United States that a leading Catholic priest, acting on instructions from the Vatican, was arranging or had arranged to hold a conference with President Calles in an effort to settle the long-standing differences between the church and the Mexican Government, it is asserted that the Government's attitude is the same as two years ago, namely, that the Catholic clergy must comply with the law requiring them to register before they can exercise their ministry in the republic. The Calles Administration has made it clear frequently that as soon as any priest complies with the law he will be permitted immediately to resume his religious functions.

There have been frequent reports of attempts to settle the question, but the official reply always has been that there is no conflict with the Catholic Church or any other church, and that it is only a question of the priests complying with the law, as do any other citizens.

It is said that there are today in the State of Vera Cruz several priests officiating who have registered as Mexican citizens.

Both Mexican and American officials refuse to comment on reports that Ambassador Morrow seeks to bring about a conference.

"I have nothing to say," is the reply in each case:

Move By Morrow Doubted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—A report published in a New York newspaper today that the good offices of Dwight W. Morrow, Ambassador to Mexico, were being used in an effort by Catholics to bring President Calles and officials of the Catholic Church together for a solution of the religious controversy in Mexico, was met by official denials in Washington today.

Both the State Department and Mexican Embassy denied all knowledge of any such move.

The report apparently came as a surprise to officials, who declared they had never heard of such a move. Informally there were expressions by officials of extreme doubt that Ambassador Morrow was engaged in any such undertaking.

At the State Department it was said on behalf of Robert E. Olds, Under Secretary, who is acting in the absence of Mr. Kellogg, that nothing had been heard from Mr. Morrow on the matter, and therefore the department was in no position to comment on the report.

The Mexican Embassy was equally definite in its denial. Officials there said no word had been received from Mexico City on the matter.

In official Catholic circles here denials of any such movement as reported were general.

Hungary Unlikely to Act.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb 9 (AP).—Official circles in Hungary attach no importance to a resolution adopted today by the Christian Social Economic Conclave urging the Government to break relations with Mexico because of alleged persecution of the Catholics of that country.

Attention was drawn to the fact officially that Hungary has no direct representative in Mexico, except an honorary Consul; therefore the question of a rupture of relations is purely theoretical. The motion was introduced by a small political minority, and, it is believed, has little chance of even reaching Parliament.

Previous Havas dispatches from Budapest announced that the Christian Social Party had requested the Government to break diplomatic relations with Mexico "because of religious persecution" in that country.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Paris expects an early reply from Secretary Kellogg to M. Briand's latest note on the proposed treaty to outlaw war.

It will be recalled that the French Foreign Minister pointed to the commitments of France as a member of the League of Nations as making it impracticable for Paris to agree to the proposal not to go to war on any conditions. The French Government rested on the proposal to outlaw all aggressive war, which would leave room for the French to carry out their duties under the Covenant of the League and also toward their allies in Europe.

Despite reports from Washington regarding the French note, to which England and Germany had agreed as ending the conversations official reports to the French capital from the American capital indicate that after returning from Canada the Secretary of State will turn his attention to the French note and make a reply.

May be New Turn to Conversations.

In certain quarters which should be well informed mention is made of the possibility that Mr. Kellogg may give a new and interesting turn to the conversations. It may be that the Secretary of State will abandon his effort for a world-wide treaty outlawing war and suggest that the four great democratic nations of the world, the United States, England, France and Germany, with or without the possible additions of Italy and Japan, join in declaring that they disapprove of war as a method of settling international differences; that they disapprove of war not only among themselves but among any other nations, and that in case of an outbreak of hostilities they will confer to consider the situation.

Such a plan, like any other international plan, has its good points and its bad. Indeed, it has many good points.

On the one hand, it is based on the theory that if the United States, France, England and Germany really wish, and make other nations understand they really wish, to prevent any war they can do so. This theory would have it that it is unnecessary for these powers to enter into definite commitments, which would cause difficulties not only in the American Senate but elsewhere. The contention is made that in the event of an international crisis it would suffice to insure peace for these four powers to have their Ministers in any capital lay down the statement that they separately and unitedly were against the intended war.

No Definite Commitments.

There would be no definite promises to do anything more than discuss the situation, but it is felt that this would automatically lay upon the powers named the responsibility to make their diplomatic power felt. How far this would incur a threat of the use of force would obviously depend on the nature of the particular situation dealt with.

Those interested in this plan say it has the great advantage of being something the American Senate would ratify, whereas any definite advance commitment would be doomed ahead of time.

Obviously such a plan would be open to the criticism that it would set up a system of an independent league of nations. But would it have to be viewed as a rival of or opposed to the league plan? Could it not be worked into harmony?

Despite this weakness the plan certainly has to its credit that it offers a much more practical idea than those which have been recently suggested from Washington.

It is not known to what degree, if to any degree, the State Department has committed itself to this suggestion. It is entirely probable that the State Department is familiar with the suggestion.

TREATY DRAFTS GIVEN TO LONDON AND TOKIO

They Differ Somewhat From the French Arbitration Compact as Finally Adopted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The United States Government has laid the basis for negotiating new arbitration treaties with Great Britain and Japan on the expiration of the Root Conventions of 1908 with these countries this year, but it was said today at the State Department that no negotiations had been conducted and this country would not initiate any until the Senate had disposed of the new Franco-American arbitration treaty.

The groundwork for the new treaties was laid with Great Britain and Japan when the first Kellogg draft of the convention with France was submitted to Ambassador Claudel in December. At that time copies of the French treaty draft were also transmitted to the British and Japanese Ambassadors with the names of their respective countries inserted in place of that of France. Accompanying letters stated that the drafts were being presented "to be used as a basis of negotiations."

Early Replies Not Expected.

No word has come from either country on the subject of new treaties, the State Department today asserted, but early replies were not expected because of the necessity for the Governments concerned to study the project. Great Britain is already doing that, but before she can take the subject up in Washington must consult her dominions.

The draft treaties, it was explained, were similar to that presented first to France and, therefore, do not correspond completely with the French treaty as finally adopted and made public yesterday by the Senate.

The sweeping preamble against war as an instrument of national policy is included, as well as the exceptions to arbitration written into the French treaty, minus only the clause to protect France against violating her commitments under the Covenant of the League of Nations. This latter exception was written in later at the request of France. One other change in the body of the treaty was made in the draft proposal first submitted to France before it was adopted. The nature of this was not disclosed today. Otherwise, the proposals before Great Britain and Japan are said to be the same as the text of the new treaty with France.

Some time is expected necessarily to elapse before Great Britain can take up active negotiations here looking to the adoption of the new arbitration treaty. In some respects it is felt that more vital issues are at stake than with France because of the increasing importance of the position of the United States in foreign commerce and business, a circumstance that makes possible the development of more questions for arbitration with England than with France.

The importance of the compact with France is regarded as lying in its being used as a model for all future arbitration treaties negotiated by this country.

Other Treaties to Expire this Year.

Two other Root arbitration treaties will expire by limitation this year, one with Norway, on June 24; another with Portugal, on Nov. 14. No move has been made by the State Department toward their renewal, pending action by the Senate on the French convention. It is also probable the United States may offer to make arbitration treaties with a number of countries with which it has none, including Germany, but not in the immediate future.

With many countries the United States has both the Root arbitration treaties and the Bryan conciliation conventions. The first were negotiated in 1908 and 1909 and the second series in 1913 and 1914.

The Root treaties were originally adopted in nearly all cases for five-year periods, and in many instances have periodically been renewed. It is now proposed to make them continuous unless denounced on due notice. Those now in force and their dates of expiration are:

Brazil, July 26, 1931; Ecuador (perpetual); France, Feb. 27, 1928; Great Britain, June 23, 1923; Haiti (perpetual); Japan, Aug. 24, 1928; The Netherlands, March 25, 1929; Norway, June 24, 1928; Peru (perpetual); Portugal, Nov. 14, 1928; Sweden (perpetual), and Uruguay (perpetual).

Root treaties were originally negotiated also with Argentina, Bolivia and Chile and ratified by the Senate, but failed of ratification by those countries. Those which for one reason or another have not been renewed after expiring and the dates of their expirations were with Austria-Hungary, May 28, 1919; China, April 6, 1911; Costa Rico, July 20, 1919; Denmark, March 29, 1924; Italy, Jan. 12, 1924; Mexico, June 27, 1915; Paraguay, Oct. 2, 1914; Spain, June 2, 1923, and Switzerland, Dec. 28, 1918.

Bryan conciliation treaties were entered into with Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, China, Costa Rico, Denmark, Ecuador, France, Great Britain, Guatemala, Honduras, Italy, Norway, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Trial of Berlin Boy for Instigating Murder Draws World Lawyers to See Proceedings

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Hans Krantz, 19-year-old student, stood before the Berlin Criminal Court today charged with murder for having incited his friend to kill a 18-year-old boy and then take his own life.

The question of whether goading another to commit murder and suicide makes the perpetrator liable to punishment of the same severity as if he had himself done the murder has aroused legal and judicial circles throughout the world.

In the small court room could be seen lawyers from Japan, France, Britain and other nations, who have come to Berlin for the purpose of seeing how this point is handled by German courts. The prisoner at the bar was practically forgotten in the interest of solving the problem.

Last June Kranz accompanied his friend Scheller to his home for an evening of high life while his parents were absent in Sweden. They found Hildegard, a sister of Scheller, in the apartment and the three smoked and drank until late at night. Hildegard, who was only 16, smuggled her friend, Otto Stephan, into her room, which was discovered by Kranz. Kranz had an affair of the heart with Hildegard and he told her brother the only way to avenge his sister's shame was to kill Stephan, and he gave him the gun to do the deed. Young Scheller shot and killed Stephan in the room and then turned the weapon on himself with deadly effect. Kranz also tried to commit suicide, but was prevented by Hildegard.

POINCARE PROGRAM WINS IN CHAMBER

Deputies Vote, 370 to 131, Confidence in French Premier's Financial Proposals.

BUT PLAY HIGH POLITICS

All Parties Make Clear Their Own Programs for Benefit of the Electors.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Premier Poincaré won a final victory for sane finance in the Chamber this afternoon with a vote which included the members of all parties except the Socialists and Communists. On the final ballot 370 Deputies expressed confidence that the Government would "continue the work begun and improve it in a spirit of justice." Only 131 Socialists and Communists voted against the motion, while a number of Radicals abstained.

Throughout this last day of the long debate every party in the Chamber played high and sometimes amusing election politics, the Radicals especially being concerned to make their position before the electors absolutely clear. For this purpose they introduced a motion of their own outlining their financial program and omitting any expression of confidence in the Government. Their only purpose was to show their united strength and that if they combined with the Socialists they could at any time throw out the Government and dispense with the cooperation of the Right.

At the same time, so as to avoid precipitating such a crisis, they made their motion so complimentary to the Government that the Socialists could not vote for it. This precaution was wise enough, for division on the motion resulted in the Government having a bare sixty majority, the figures being 273, against 213. If the 100 Socialists had supported their former allies the Government would have been beaten, much to everybody's regret and confusion.

When the Socialists themselves introduced a motion expressing their program they found they could not muster more than 120, even the Radicals deserting them.

During this last session of the debate electoral preoccupation of the speakers was even more in evidence than during last week, when some, at least, of the orators were willing to discuss the technical side of financial reform. Vincent Auriol was chosen as speaker of the Socialists in a final effort to split the Radicals away from the Union Government and re-form the old association of the two Left parties. To what M. Poincaré had done he and his party refused to give any credit. Revalorization of the franc, in so far as it had been accomplished, was purely political, he said, and not based on any real financial reform.

Louis Malvy answered him and defined the electoral position of his party by saying that, having made the Poincaré Government possible by their support, the Radicals were not going to turn it out at the last moment.

How firm is the idea among all the parties of France that the interallied debt question and reparations must be linked together was again underlined by M. Malvy, who, inurging that the next Legislature must settle the debt question definitely, added: "And to that settlement must be added a close link with payments under the Dawes plan."

The session, which at times became extremely confused and noisy, ended in cheers for the Premier, in which the main body of Radicals joined.

SOUTHAMPTON MAYOR RETURNS WALKER CALL

English Visitor Two Days Late in Keeping Appointment, but His Ship Delayed Him.

The Lord Mayor of Southampton, England, Percy Vincent Bowyer, who without looking obese stands six feet two inches and weighs 250 pounds, outdid the so-called "late Mayor of New York" yesterday when, through no fault of his own, he kept a courtesy date at the City Hall two days behind time.

Lord Mayor Bowyer, styled by Mayor Walker "one of the jolliest fellows in Europe," is here on a flying trip "for his health," he smilingly said. He repaid Mayor Walker's visit to him in Southampton last year, and the reason he didn't keep his appointment with the New York Mayor for last Tuesday was that his ship, the Cunarder Berengaria, lay fog-bound off Quarantine.

Lord Mayor Bowyer had intended to stay four days, returning to England Saturday, and now he is going to return tomorrow anyhow, much as he likes what he has seen of New York. What he has seen, thanks to Police Lieutenant John Howard of the Mayor's bodyguard, has been as much as any one could possibly see in the limited time.

Lieutenant Howard met the Lord Mayor with an official city car and promptly took him on a whirlwind tour of the city which ended with his call late in the afternoon at City Hall.

Mayor Walker had planned to entertain the Lord Mayor, but the latter declared he did not intend to encroach upon his time. Lord Mayor Bowyer, who has an inexhaustible supply of stories, kept the Mayor and his staff laughing during their meeting.

New York simply stuns him, he said, and he marveled at the speed of his motorcycle escort.

BRIAND TAKES A HAND IN BELGIAN PARLEY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The delicate trade negotiations between France and Belgium were believed to have been well advanced on the road to a solution today following the personal intervention of M. Briand, who held a long conversation with the Belgian Ambassador, Baron de Gaiffier Dhestroy. The negotiations were suspended Tuesday, and the French delegation returned to Paris, giving rise to an impression that a complete breakdown had occurred.

In official quarters today it was explained that the French had reached the very limit of their concessions, and it was to be hoped the Belgians would meet what the French call their just demands regarding the tariff on wine. The chief point at issue is the duty per hectoliter on wine. The Belgian rate has been 150 francs. The French demand a reduction to 130 and the Belgians offer 140. If they finally agree to reduce the rate to 130 a trade accord probably will be reached when the negotiations are resumed in Paris on Monday.

The Franco-Belgian negotiations have been the most difficult of any commercial treaty negotiations which France has yet encountered. Through the relatively low figure at which the Belgian franc is stabilized that country has been doing an extensive foreign trade. Belgium, therefore, does not wish to enter into any trade treaty that will tend to limit her present external prosperity.

Because of her economic union with Belgium, Luxemburg is a party to the Franco-Belgian negotiations.

CHIANG CLINCHES VICTORY

Demand for Treaty Abrogation is Again Expressed—Northern Expedition Reports Advance.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 9.—The Koumintang's Central Executive Committee has finally issued a manifesto outlining the domestic and foreign policies of the Revolutionary Party. A summarized translation of the document was issued officially here this evening.

However, it gives little cause for enthusiasm, and the fourth plenary session of the committee is accomplishing little as far as surface indications can be judged. The chief result seems to be the personal victory of General Chiang Kai-shek, the Nationalists' Generalissimo, and his Soong-Kung family group, whose moderate programs have been outlined as anticipated.

The Kuomintang's foreign policy is barely mentioned, the gist of it being the old man and cry about "the fundamental aim of the Nationalist revolution is racial equality and national independence, the abrogation of all unequal treaties being the one and only method of realizing this aim."

There is no indication that anything has been done regarding ways and means of reaching this much-mouthed aspiration, with which virtually every power interested in China has agreed publicly in recent years but is waiting for the Chinese to suggest the methods.

The manifesto reaffirms Nanking's anti-Communist stand, asserting that the party does not in the least advocate the welfare of a single party or class. The document dwells at length on theories of economic and political reconstruction and urges completion of the Northern expedition.

Thus ends the fourth plenary session. The chief result is the reformation of a semblance of legal and civil government around General Chiang Kai-shek once more, while the young leader seeks to pacify the growing discontents within the party and retain Nanking's grip on South China despite the dangers lurking in the Canton and Wuhan areas, where dissatisfied Generals look upon the Nanking régime with increasing disfavor.

Varying reports in the meantime continue to arrive from the Northern fronts. Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, the so-called Christian General's headquarters reports victories on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, but Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, who has been restored to power and his virtually taken over Shantung from Marshal Chang Chung-chang in recent weeks, is reported to be pushing his offensive along the same railway toward Suchow-fu—not Soochow—just south of the Shantung border.

Chiang Kai-shek is expected in Shanghai this evening or tomorrow to confer with T. V. Soong, the Nanking Finance Minister, regarding a new loan to finance the Northern expedition.

HOOVER AIDS PROJECT FOR ATLANTIC AIR LINE

Secretary Promises Federal Assistance and Postal Heads Plan Mail Contracts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Secretary Hoover today said that the United States Government would lend every cooperation within its power to the Burney project for the establishment of a transatlantic dirigible service to transport passengers, mail and express between this country and Great Britain.

The Secretary has been in conference during the past few days with Commander C. B. Burney, M. P., designer of the dirigible R-100, soon to be put into commission, and who during his stay in Washington has deeply interested President Coolidge and other officials in the project.

Secretary Hoover stated today that he had been informed the first test voyages of the R-100, which was designed by Commander Burney, is to be made in the next three months, with a voyage later to the United States.

Two things are desired by the interests back of the project, Secretary Hoover explained today—the right to tie up at the navy mast at Lakehurst, to which the Navy Department has agreed, and the granting of a favorable rate for the carriage of mails, along with mail contracts from both the British and American Governments.

The question of mail-rate aid is now under consideration by officials of the Postoffice Department, who have been asked to look into the matter and ascertain whether a premium dirigible mail rate could be granted the company without legislation.

The Postoffice Department has been asked to ascertain whether, under existing law, contracts for carrying mails by dirigible between the United States and Great Britain can be awarded on the same basis as for air mail in the United States. If legislation is necessary, it was indicated today it will be asked for without delay of Congress.

It is understood to be the purpose to make several trial voyages before regular service is established. If these voyages are a success efforts will be made to obtain American capital for the project on a fifty-fifty basis as between Americans and British.

It is understood certain European Governments have already indicated their willingness to cooperate to the fullest extent and to arrange for air mail rates for westbound dirigible voyages. A similar special rate from the United States for eastbound voyages is desired for the success of the undertaking.

The establishment successfully of such a service, Secretary Hoover pointed out today, would shorten considerably the time required for the movement of mails to Europe, the proposed schedule being thirty-eight hours from the United States to Europe and forty-eight hours on the return trip from Great Britain to this country.

The R-100, now nearing completion, officials here were informed by Commander Burney, can carry about 100 passengers and ten tons of mail, and the probable rate for passengers may be around $400.

GERMANS HISS KAISER IN WORLD WAR FILM

Verdun Battles and Distress of Civilian Population Are Featured.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—The second part of "The World War, a Historical Film," was shown for the first time at the UFA Palace tonight to a special audience in which were a number of notables, including members of the Government.

The ex-Kaiser appeared only in one short scene and was greeted by rather pronounced hisses, which hesitating applause failed to drown out. Hindenburg and Mackensen drew a thunderous ovation, as did Rathenau when he was shown as attempting to persuade the Government against ruthless submarine warfare and warning that the blockade would cause the fall of the "Central European Fortress."

The film shows the years 1915-1916, emphasizing the distress suffered by the civilian population with gaunt hunger haunting the children and the aged. The French film archives furnished a considerable quantity of material showing how masses of men and material were assembled against the German forces exhausted from hunger.

The Crown Prince's attempt to capture Verdun early in 1916 in order to give it as a present to his father on his birthday is shown in detail, while the repulse is treated as a pure hammering campaign on the part of the French backed by the entire world.

While the attempt to picture the scenes within the "Central European Fortress" cannot be seen as purely objective, which was the hope of its directors, nothing is depicted which could be interpreted as meaning a slight or slur on opponents. Gas warfare is mentioned only once in this period and then as a weapon of the French in regaining lost ground near Verdun. There are scenes of soldiers helping wounded enemy troops, but always of Germans helping French. Brutality and horrors are left out for the most part and the dead on the battlefield are practically omitted.

There is an attempt to portray rather futuristically the general delirium of war by massing on the screen at one time whirling machines, firing guns, emaciated workers, charging soldiers, sorrowing mothers and stern Generals.

The production was directed by two former officers of the Imperial General Staff and there is a grave question in the minds of prominent persons whether their efforts have done much toward the education of the general public on German history of this period or have furthered the movement to heal the wounds of war and bend efforts toward peace.

SAYS BRITAIN FAVORS ENDING SUBMARINES

LONDON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Great Britain is willing to reaffirm the declaration she made at the Washington conference in favor of general abolition of submarines, Godfrey Locker-Lampson, Under Secretary of the Foreign Office, informed the House of Commons today. The Under Secretary replied to numerous questions on the American Secretary of State's proposal.

"It is, of course," he said, "an essential condition, as indicated by Mr. Kellogg's declaration, that abolition of submarines must be universal."

Mr. Locker-Lampson declared that Great Britain would welcome an arrangement between the allied powers and Germany whereby a general evacuation of the Rhineland could be carried out before the period set in the Treaty of Versailles.

The Rhineland occupation question has come to the fore prominently in recent weeks as an outgrowth of a speech by Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany before the Reichstag in which he called for the withdrawal of the allied troops from Germany.

Dr. Stresemann, directing his remarks chiefly at France, declared he sought a Franco-German rapprochement and that evacuation of the Rhineland was an important background of such friendship.

Foreign Minister Briand, addressing the French Parliament on Feb. 2, answered Dr. Stresemann, declaring the Rhineland question was not purely a Franco-German problem, but involved the allied and associated powers as a whole.

"The occupation of the Rhineland was in pursuance of the Treaty of Versailles, shared in by our allies and associates," he said. "Eventual change in the present state of things is between all the allies and Germany."

Admiralty Orders Six of P Class in Addition to Nine of O Group.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Orders have been placed by the Admiralty for the construction of six submarines which will be known as the P class, to distinguished them from nine similar vessels already built or building under the 1925 program and known as the O class. The O class are claimed to be the most powerful in the world. Their secrets are still guarded, but it is known they call for a displacement of 1,345 tons on the surface and 1,805 tons submerged, are armed with one four-inch gun and some torpedo tubes.

Contracts for a flotilla leader and eight destroyers provided for in the current program are expected to be given out in about a week's time.

The Government is understood to have invited British shipbuilding firms to tender bids for extensive reclamation work and the construction of a wet and dry dock for the Singapore Naval Base. The cost will be $20,000,000 spread over seven years, part of which will be borne by the Dominions.

It is planned to complete the base in ten years at a total cost of $38,750,000, of which the Malay State is contributing $10,000,000, New Zealand $5,000,000 and Hongkong $1,750,000.

The huge floating dock for Singaport, costing $6,000,000, will be ready here in May for its 8,500-mile journey.

ALSATIAN ILLS NEED WISE TREATMENT

Existing Troubles Are Unlikely to Become Dangerous if Dealt With Sympathetically.

POINCARE SEEN AS 'DOCTOR'

Differences in the Legal Systems of France and Her Province Are Held as Cause of Friction.

This is the fifth and last of a series of five articles in which Wythe Williams, THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent at Geneva, has described the situation in Alsace, one of the provinces restored to France by Germany after the World War and now the scene of a movement for autonomy.

By WYTHE WILLIAMS.

Special Correspondence of THE New York Times.

STRASBURG, Jan. 29.—In summing up the present Alsatian situation after inquiry that has extended into every corner of this territory the word "situation" should rightly be employed instead of that so misleadingly scattered abroad, namely, "problem."

Certainly an Alsatian situation does exist, a situation that has had a definite injection of poison, so that it now needs careful treatment. The firm hand of French authority has been applied, it would seem to just the extent necessary, but now the task is rather that of a sympathetic psychoanalist in order that the "malaise" may be definitely cured.

According to reports, Premier Poincaré intends to attempt this rôle on his official visit to Strasbourg next month as the guest of the Mayors of the entire province.

In a way Alsace has suffered difficulties that often beset frontier territories, but in the present case the difficulties have not turned into tragedy — tragedy, as Alsace well knows, was enacted in 1870.

Troublesome Law Difference.

But many things must be explained carefully to the Alsatian beyond just differences in language and rules regarding the rôle of the Church toward the State. For example, fundamental differences exist in French laws from those governing the people here for half a century. Alsatian lawyers now practicing in French tribunals have their own difficulties.

In German law the word of a witness upsets the written word, which is fundamental in French jurisprudence. In France if a man signs a lease he must abide by it. In Germany he may bring a witness to prove that he did not accept all its provisions. Follows the question of the reliability of the witness and endless additional complications.

Such a basic difference might even explain the famous "scrap of paper" figuratively torn up by Germany when treaty rights were violated by the marsch of her imperial armies through Belgium.

Other Alsatian demands, or rather criticisms, might in the end be beneficial to all France instead of to Alsace alone. A more rational system of taxation might be discovered, and exaggerated protection of industries might be replaced by greater productive activity.

Certain sections of Alsace have curious privileges dating back to Maria Thérèse, all of which must eventually be studied and harmonized. But aside from this, Alsace is merely a geographical conception, a country that has never really been a country and that has not the slightest chance or actual desire to become independent now.

The French revolution stabilized ideas and marked the beginning of political thought in Alsace, but then, as now, the territory was patriotically French. During the Armistice President Woodrow Wilson received tens of thousands of telegrams from Alsace demanding the right of the people to govern themselves, or, in brief, Alsatian neutrality. But these messages were from pure Germans.

After the Franco-Prussian War 500,000 Alsatians quit the country. After the Armistice less than 200,000 Germans, mostly functionaries, crossed the Rhine, with less than 2,000 pure Alsatians.

During the fifty years of German rule on each Fourteenth of July, the French national holiday, dozens of special trains went from Alsace across the frontier where the Alsatians joined the French in the celebrations. But any Alsatian exodus to Germany on German fête days has not been reported.

Status Under Germany.

Under German rule Alsace frequently clamored for autonomy. Then Alsace was not in the German Federation on the same terms as Bavaria, Saxony and other States, but was a part of the Reichland directly under Berlin. Alsace had its Landtag which administered certain problems not political, but that was all. Germany always refused further liberty, partly through distrust and also on the ground that Alsace was not a nation.

Therefore, while admitted to the Reichstag, Alsatians were never admitted to the High Council of the Empire. Today, while certain Alsatian agitators clamor for the return of some of those same minor rights admitted during the occupation, the sober portions of the German press admit that there is nothing in the present situation to encourage German dreams of revenge. One of the largest Berlin papers has had a correspondent here on an inquiry similar to my own. His own words, just telegraphed to his paper, are:

"The autonomy slogan has found no echo among the people. Those who pretend otherwise deceive themselves. It is untrue that peasants have taken an active rôle in the movement. A few always are pleased when the police are vexed; a few always are ready to place Communist votes in the ballot box, but on the whole there is not one single indication of serious political movement."

Temper of School Children.

The best illustration of the feeling of the masses of the population was given to me by the pastor of a small village. At a Christmas party he wished his children to recite a certain piece of poetry. Many of the parents could not understand French, so he canvassed the children for one who would recite German. All refused but one, who explained that he preferred to speak French but would recite for the benefit of his own father.

The next day the boy returned to the pastor and said he was forced to resign the job because his father did not want the humiliation of having his son the only one to speak the German language, which he now considered inferior.

This, in a way, explains the Alsatian situation today, a situation that presents various difficulties, but no danger so long as it is treated fairly and in the light of real intelligence, which, undoubtedly, France possesses in full measure.

FILM RESTRICTION APPROVED IN FRANCE

QUOTA OF 9 TO 1 INDICATED

Copyright, 1928, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The Council of State is understood to have approved today the complicated scheme for the restriction of the importation of foreign films. The plan is largely aimed at the American companies, which have a practical monopoly on the French market.

Details of the newest proposal, there having been at least six to date, were not disclosed, but the French producers for whom the protection is being arranged hope that its operation will reduce importations by at least 25 per cent. The Council of State's approval will now go to the Council of Ministers in the form of official "advice." If the Ministers accept the advice, as it is believed they will, then the decree probably will be issued within the next three weeks, making the arrangement effective at the beginning of September, although the Herriot Commission, which is meeting again on Feb. 15, has the right to alter the plan.

According to present indications the project approved provides that for every nine foreign films brought into the country one French picture shall be shown. In addition a board of twenty-five members will be set up. Its membership will be composed of Government officials, trade representatives and seven outsiders, and its chief duty will be the exercise of a broad censorship, bearing in mind always the treatment accorded French films in the country from which the foreign film under consideration emanated.

Since the United States purchases but half a dozen French films each year, American film companies fear that their pictures would come in for rough treatment at the hands of the censors.

French motion picture theatre owners are not at all pleased by the prospect of being forced to show a certain quota of domestic films. M. Brezillon, President of the Society of French Cinema Proprietors, in an interview today said that the point of view of his colleagues could be summed up in the probable attitude of a restaurant owner who, in the face of a clientele devoted to beefsteak and potatoes, suddenly was forced to serve nothing but beans.

"We want to help protect our own producers, but above all we are business men and we want the right to choose the films which our clients' taste dictates," he said.

The present taste, M. Brezillon indicated, appears to be unmistakably in favor of American films.

FEAR ANNEXATION OF EX-GERMAN COLONY

Berlin Papers Protest Against Alleged British Plan to Keep East Africa.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Part of the German press has suddenly become excited over the alleged British plan to annex former German East Africa, although the matter was practically ignored when first brought to public attention by the former Governor, Dr. Schnee, through an interpellation in the Reichstag.

The Tageliche Rundschau, which is considered the personal organ of Foreign Minister Stresemann, says:

"While the immediate aim of the British East Africa Commission is only simplification of the administration of the English possessions in this part of the world, statements by British and South African politicians leave no doubt that the political consolidation of these territories is intended in the near future. This would be a clear violation of the laws laid down by the League of Nations.

"We know the British aim is to transform her possessions in East Africa into an English East African Empire, with the former German colonies as its centre. The result would be to complete the annexation of former German East Africa in glaring defiance of the League of Nations and repudiation of the Versailles treaty."

Concluding a long editorial, Dr. Stresemann's paper recalls that the British Colonial expert, Morel, recently stated that the value of the former German colonies was at least 100,000,000,000 marks, and adds:

"This sum should be credited to the German reparations account, but that will be impossible. If, in violation of the League of Nations principles and the Versailles treaty the mandate system is changed into annexation, Germany will have a perfect legal right to demand compensation for her lost colonies."

The reactionary Kreuz Zeitung voices a similar protest, but in even stronger language. This paper also takes the views that the annexation of the former German territory by England is only a question of a short time.

HAS NOVEL TRAFFIC PLAN.

Parisian Suggests Widening Streets by Using First Floor Space.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—A novel scheme for the solution of the traffic problem in huge cities of the future is advanced by a Parisian journalist who suggests enlargement of streets by doing away with the first floors of all buildings bordering busy thoroughfares and replacing the masonry with supporting pillars between which vehicles might pass freely.

Bernard Gervaise, the originator of the scheme, says it is prompted by news that M. Lepine, ex-Prefect of Police, has prepared a statistical paper on the future Paris which he will read soon before the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences.

In this paper, by the application of the law of probability, M. Lepine estimates that Paris in 1970 will have a population of 6,000,000. He points out that since the middle of the seventeenth century the population of the city has been doubling every fifty years. It was 500,000 in 1770, 1,000,000 in 1820, 2,000,000 in 1870 and 4,000,000 in 1920. At this rate, he says, the population will be 1,000,000,000 by the year 2000.

in the representation of Illinois which he can fill in any legal way.

Resolution Issue to the People.

"In fairness, therefore, to the people who have honored me, I have determined to create such a vacancy by what I am advised is the only legal way it can be done for six years, without the intervention of Providence, which is to resign my commission as Senator.

"By doing this, however, I have no intention of abandoning the cause of the people of this State—and of every State. . . . The only practical and possible way in which this can be done is for me to become a candidate for renomination and re-election. . . .

"If the people of Illinois desire to admit they must elect their Senators subject to the veto power of the Senate, they ought to have the opportunity to express that desire. . . .

"My candidacy for renomination and reelection will give them that opportunity which they could get in no other way at this time.

"On the other hand, if the Republicans of Illinois first and the whole people later want to uphold their inherent rights as citizens and the right of this Commonwealth as a sovereign State, my renomination and re-election will be their answer, as the issue raised by my exclusion from the Senate is one between the Senate and the people of Illinois.

"I refer it to this people for settlement. . . .

"It is because I believe a great principle is involved that I have resigned and am seeking a re-election.

Senate Attitude Unchanged.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The new developments in the case of Frank L. Smith, who resigned today as Senator-elect from Illinois to run in April for renomination on the Republican ticket, and who was reappointed by Governor Small to fill the vacancy in his own term, attracted much interest among Senators tonight, but it did not seem apparent that the present Senate would alter its attitude of opposition to Mr. Smith.

Those who opposed his entrance generally took the ground that admission would again be refused if he sought it on his elective credentials. He was rejected while holding appointive credentials once before and last month, when he presented credentials of election.

Refusal to let him take his seat on new appointive credentials would be based purely on personal grounds, as no taint of the "fraud and corruption" surrounding him before would now apply. But the Republican insurgent and Democratic Senators who voted against his admission on two occasions argued that the character of an applicant would not be changed simply by his receiving an appointment instead of winning an election.

If Mr. Smith were elected in November, he might face a Senate of different composition than the present when he appeared with new credentials of election. It is possible that the political complexion of the next Senate will be changed, and if this is true he may have a better chance of success. The November, 1928, Senatorial elections may alter the situation materially so far as Mr. Smith is concerned.

ACTS ON CAVELL PICTURE.

British Foreign Office Sends Berlin Protest to Censors, Urging Ban.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—As a result of the protest of the German Foreign Office against the new British war film which uses Nurse Cavell as the heroine, the British Foreign Office today advised the motion picture censors that the film in its present form would be likely to cause great resentment and damage to Anglo-German relations. The Foreign Office has no power to prevent the exhibition of the picture.

In the film the German Military Governor in Belgium is shown at a theatre with a dancer, refusing to receive an American diplomat who had come to ask for a reprieve for Nurse Cavell. The picture also shows a German officer shooting Nurse Cavell when a German private refuses to fire. Neither event occurred, according to the Germans.

LONDON, Feb. 9 (AP).—The London Mail says that Germany's protest against the film depicting the career of Edith Cavell, British nurse who was executed as a spy in Belgium during the war, has succeeded. Reporting the British Foreign Office's action in modifying the Board of Film Censors that the film was objectionable in its present form, the newspaper does not give the decision of the board, but leaves it to be inferred that the hint will be taken.

LINCOLN PROGRAMS WILL OCCUPY 3 DAYS

Patriotic, Civic and Political Groups Will Celebrate From Feb. 11 to 13.

REPUBLICAN DINNER MONDAY

National Club to Have Longworth, Pershing and Eaton as Speakers —Veterans to Hold Dance.

Abraham Lincoln will receive three days' homage this year. As his birthday comes on Sunday, Feb. 12, its celebration will commence the day before. Its climax for New York will come on Monday with the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the National Republican Club at the Waldorf.

Speakers at this dinner, according to the announcement yesterday by Charles D. Hilles, Vice Chairman of the Republican National Committee, will include Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House of Representatives; General John J. Pershing, and Representative Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, who will make the annual Lincoln Day address. Former United States Senator William M. Calder, President of the club, will be toastmaster.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will hold a grand military ball at the Waldorf tomorrow night. Major George Haven Putnam will be guest of honor and speaker at the Lincoln's Birthday celebration by the People's Chorus at the Town Hall tomorrow evening.

On Sunday 2,000 Boy Scouts of New York City will gather at the Hall of Fame at New York University, where they will hang a wreath on the bust of Abraham Lincoln. There will be a number of speakers. Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown will officially represent New York University.

The National Republican Club will lay a wreath on the statue of Lincoln in Union Square. The Lincoln Circle Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic will hold patriotic services at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon before the same statue. The Woman's Roosevelt Memorial Association will meet at Roosevelt House, 28 East Twenty-eighth Street.

On Sunday evening a dinner and ball will be held at the Waldorf, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Polish National Alliance of Brooklyn and honoring the birthdays of Lincoln and Thaddeus Kosciuszko, who was also born on Feb. 12. Major Gen. William N. Haskell, representing Governor Smith, is expected to speak, as is Borough President James J. Byrne of Brooklyn. Sunday has been set aside as Anti-Lynching Day by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

On Monday the Stock Exchange, banks and financial institutions, department stores, city schools and most business houses will be closed. The Post Office will have only the first morning delivery of mail. In the afternoon the Hotel Lincoln, recently opened at Eighth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, will be dedicated with a patriotic program in the lobby at 3 o'clock.

The New York State Woman's Republican Club will hold a Lincoln's Birthday reception and luncheon in the Hotel Plaza ball room on Monday at noon.

TO SHIFT GERMAN ENVOYS.

Several Changes in Diplomatic Service Are Expected.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—A number of important changes in Germany's diplomatic corps will be made in the near future, Ambassador Dr. Solf at Tokio and Minister von Gneist at Buenos Aires being placed on the retired list. Foreign Minister Stresemann arranged for these changes before leaving on vacation and the approval of the Cabinet is expected within a day or two.

The Government also contemplates raising the Buenos Aires post from a legation to an embassy. As successor to Dr. Solf, Dr. Vorebach, now Minister to Lisbon, is mentioned, and he will be succeeded by von Balligand, director of the press section.

The German envoys at Riga, Brussels, Belgrade and several other cities will be changed in the general shift.

HELP FOR JOBLESS TO BE SOUGHT TODAY

City and State Officials and Welfare Workers to Confer at Request of Gov. Smith.

STATISTICS BEING COMPILED

Communist Organization Assails Investigation—A. I. C. P. Finds Situation Acute.

Social agencies and city and State officials were busy yesterday compiling figures on unemployment to show to Industrial Commissioner James A. Hamilton at the conference he has called at the Labor Department Building, 124 East Twenty-eighth Street, for this afternoon to prepare a survey of the situation for Governor Smith. On Tuesday the Governor, in a letter to Commissioner Hamilton, asked for a quick survey of a condition said to be worse than in the worst days of post-war depression, so that relief measures might be instituted to put the army of jobless to work again.

The conference this afternoon will be attended by representatives of the various statistical bureaus in the Labor Department, a committee of officials of representative social agencies appointed by Homer Folks of the Welfare Council of New York, and New York City License Commissioner John F. Quigley, who has all licensed employment agencies under his supervision.

Bailey B. Burritt, general director of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, made the Governor's recognition of the unemployment situation the basis for a renewed appeal for funds yesterday to aid the association's work. He said that in 41 per cent. of the 3,400 families receiving aid from the A. I. C. P. the problem of unemployment had complicated an already desperate state of destitution.

The New York Council of the Unemployed, a recently formed Communist organization with temporary headquarters at 60 St. Mark's Place, near "Mr. Zero's Tub," issued a statement yesterday through its secretary, John Di Santo, condemning Governor Smith's action in writing to Commissioner Hamilton as a move to make political capital of the situation.

"The history of such investigations as the Governor proposes shows that they are of no practical value and quickly degenerate into vague discussions and the tossing of political footballs," the statement said.

It then called for "concrete relief measures," such as the appropriation of money for the opening of public kitchens, the use of armories for sheltering the jobless and the recognition of Soviet Russia to stimulate industries.

ADMITS GRAND LARCENY.

Morris Weiss Pleads Guilty to Frauds Totaling $100,000.

Morris Weiss, 53 years old, who as President of the defunct United Foreign Exchange Corporation defrauded many poor persons out of sums aggregating about $100,000, pleaded guilty to grand larceny yesterday before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions and was remanded to the Tombs for sentence on Feb. 24. He is liable to a term of from five to ten years in Sing Sing.

The plea was entered on the indictment on the charge of Graziano Alicenti of 607 Third Avenue that Weiss swindled him out of $1,421 in December, 1926, when Alicenti called at the defendant's office at 1,390 Broadway to buy 50,000 shares of consolidated Italian bonds. On the recommendation of Assistant District Attorney Aurelio it was accepted to cover two other indictments.

Nearly all of Weiss's victims were in court when Weiss entered the plea as he was about to be placed on trial. The prosecutor explained that Weiss had disappeared soon after a petition in involuntary bankruptcy had been filed against him in the latter part of 1926 and he eventually surrendered in this city after the police had traced him to France, Austria and other foreign countries and California. His only assets, the prosecutor added, were the luxurious furnishings in his Broadway office.

NAVY DEMANDS CONVICT.

Robber in San Quentin Accused of Murder in Philadelphia in 1919.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9 (AP).—Naval authorities have taken steps to bring Robert McMillan, convicted bank robber, back here from San Quentin Penitentiary, declaring he is wanted for the killing of George Ryan, a petty officer aboard the battleship Michigan, whose body was found floating in the Delaware River, Philadelphia, in 1919.

When arrested for the robbery, McMillan told the police that he had killed a naval officer on the east coast nine years ago, but the story was discounted at the time and he was sentenced to seven years. Ryan's body was found with the skull fractured.

New York Association Aided More Persons Than Ever Before, Report Shows.

More blind men and women were trained and employment provided for them by the New York Association for the Blind in 1927 than ever before in the twenty-two years of its existence, according to the annual report made public yesterday by the President of the association, Dr. John H. Finley. There was paid in cash directly into the hands of the blind $133,256.04, against $129,845.06 in 1926 and $118,043.30 in 1925. The association owns five buildings: the Lighthouse at 111 East Fifty-ninth Street, the Workshop for Blind Men at St. Gabriel's Park, the new Boarding House for Blind Men at 605 First Avenue, the River Lighthouse at Cornwall, N. Y., and the Camp Lighthouse at Waretown, N. J.

The outstanding feature of last year's work, according to the Log of Lighthouse No. 1, which contains the annual report, was the opening of the four-story Boarding House for Blind Men. It is designed not only for those shop men who are without home or family ties, but for other blind men employed at outside occupations who desire a home at moderate cost.

Another important addition to the equipment of the association is a new Braille printing plant at the Lighthouse. It prints in a raised type which permits reading by touch, and circulates free all over the United States and in many parts of the world the Searchlight Magazine, a juvenile quarterly, and a local news journal called Gleams.

At Lighthouse No. 1 there is a social centre for the blind which was extensively used last year. It has a swimming pool, little theatre, dance auditorium, bowling alley, gymnasium and a roof garden with running track and club rooms. There was an enrollment of 345 in the women's recreation department and 232 in the men's. Country vacations lasting from two to six weeks were provided for 353 of the blind. The Welfare Department helped 432 blind persons with financial grants or loans, and obtained medical, oculist, surgical and hospital care for 613 cases.

LIMITS JURISDICTION OF THE CITY COURT

REVERSES LOWER TRIBUNAL

Justice Bijur's Opinion Says the Judiciary Amendment of 1925 Does Not Apply.

A decision of the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court holding that the City Court of New York has no jurisdiction out of New York City, declares unconstitutional a section of the City Court act which became effect on Jan. 1, 1925, and under which many actions have been filed here against persons living elsewhere. The ruling made known yesterday holds that non-residents cannot be justly required to come from the outermost parts of New York State to defend actions brought in the City Court, in which the cases heard are limited to suits involving $3,000 and less.

The Appellate Term heard the action of the American Historical Society, Inc., against William A. Glenn, an Albany lawyer, who was sued for $162, of which $37.50 was for the literary work "Courts and Lawyers of New York," and $125 was for a portrait of the defendant. Mr. Glenn was served with the papers in Albany, and at once resisted the jurisdiction of the City Court on the ground that the transaction occurred in Albany and the City Court act requiring him to defend the action in New York City was unconstitutional. The Appellate Term reversed a decision in the City Court upholding jurisdiction because of a previous decision in a parallel case by Presiding Justice Schmuck.

Justice Bijur, who wrote the main opinion, with Justices Levy and Crain concurring in separate opinions, said that the power of the court to extend its jurisdiction outside the city limits was asserted on the ground that the City Court act, passed in 1926, provided that all "process and mandates of the court may be executed in any part of the State." The defendant maintained that the act was unconstitutional as violating the jurisdiction prescribed in the Judiciary section of the State Constitution, as amended in 1925.

Justice Bijur said the plaintiff argued that the constitutional provision that the City Court "shall have original jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court" in certain classes of actions "means that the power of the City Court is increased to that of the Supreme Court in giving State-wide jurisdiction for the service of its summons on defendants."

The decision discusses the reports of the Judiciary Committee upon which the provision referred to was based, relating to extending the authority of the City Court throughout the entire City of New York, and in holding that the framers of the law intended to go no further, Justice Bijur said:

"Surely a constitutional amendment which has been so unfortunately and so loosely phrased should be interpreted conservatively, and, so far as possible, in harmony with existing practice."

The Appellate Term accordingly held that the purpose of the constitutional amendment was merely to increase the jurisdiction of the City Court to the entire City of New York instead of New York and Bronx Counties alone, and to actions involving not over $3,000 instead of $2,000.

'INCUBATOR BOY' ARRESTED.

Brooklyn Orphan and Friend Admit 16 Burglaries, Police Say.

Bernard Galuse, 16 years old, an orphan, living with his grandmother at 213 Avenue S, Brooklyn, who said the first days of his life were spent in the Bellevue Hospital incubator, was brought before Magistrate Rudich in the Flatbush Court yesterday on a charge of burglary. Detectives said that on Wednesday night they saw him and a friend, Andrew Rogers, 15 years old, who was also arrested and taken to Children's Court, on the fire escape of 295 St. John's Place, Brooklyn, looking into the windows suspiciously.

On the younger boy's person, the detectives said, was found a gold watch alleged to have been stolen on Feb. 4 from the apartment of Miss Bird Allen, at 2,944 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn. Both boys, the police said, admitted fifteen burglaries in and about the Flatbush section, and said that a few months ago, when one became frightened because school authorities noticed him selling gold watches to fellow-students at "cut prices," they fled to Chicago. There, the police said, they continued a life of crime, and on returning to Brooklyn lived in a deserted house on the corner of Albemarle Road and Ocean Avenue. Bernard was held in $5,000 bail for a hearing today. The Rogers boy was remanded to the care of the Brooklyn Children's Society until Feb. 15 by Justice Hanson.

BORAH QUESTIONS HOOVER.

He Also Asks Willis to State His Views on Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Secretary Hoover and Senator Frank B. Willis of Ohio were invited today by Senator Borah to make a public expression of their views on prohibition.

Calling attention to the fact that their friends had placed them in line for the nomination for the Presidency, Senator Borah said he was sure they would feel free to express themselves "upon this important issue."

A similar questionnaire recently was addressed by Senator Borah to Senator Curtis of Kansas, an avowed candidate for the Presidency, who replied that he was in favor of the vigorous enforcement of the prohibition laws.

on Arrangements, fully 4,000 more rooms ought to be under contract for visitors. The Kansas City local committee seemed unprepared to say what could be done in that respect because no action had been taken relative to accommodations for the general public.

Hope was expressed that some additional rooms might be obtained in private homes and small hotels. The convention hall also must be enlarged, it was stated, and the seats rearranged so as to accommodate 1,000 more persons than the hall can now accommodate. This was also placed before the Kansas City local committee.

About all the Committee on Arrangements obtained today, it is stated, was the promise that there would be sufficient hotel rooms for those whose business takes them to the convention, with prospects that the visitors could be accommodated in some fashion.

"We are of the impression that there will be enough rooms for everybody," said Chairman Butler.

Samuel R. Bottsford and George P. Erban of Buffalo appeared today to extend an invitation to the National Committee to shift the convention to Buffalo in case Kansas City is dropped. They said they represented the Chamber of Commerce and Mayor of Buffalo, and were prepared to offer a guarantee of $200,000 and adequate accommodations.

Press Allotment Reduced.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 9.—The latest changes in the seating arrangement of Convention Hall for the Republican National Convention has reduced the number of seats allotted to newspaper men to 420, Louis Shouse, manager, stated today.

Under the new plan Convention Hall will be divided into two sections, an east section and west section. All the space on the west side of the hall will be allotted to delegates and alternates, of which there are 1,089 each. The eastern portion is to be used for the construction of a speakers' stand, on which will be seated members of the National Committee, speakers and honored guests.

From requests for reservations already made by newspapers and news syndicates, it has been estimated that at least 600 representatives of the press will be in Kansas City to report the news of the convention.

M'COOEY WILL ACT ON MODEL HOUSES

Writes Governor He Will Submit Plea for Support to the Democratic Committee

SUBSCRIBES TO THE STOCK

State Board Member Says $85,000 Has Been Sold—$250,000 Needed to Start Brooklyn Project.

John H. McCooey, Democratic leader of Brooklyn, announced yesterday that he had received the letter of Governor Smith urging him to support the financing of the Brooklyn Garden Apartments, the first operation under the State housing law for the clearing of congested tenement districts and the construction of modern multiple dwellings, and that he had replied to the Governor.

Mr. McCooey said that he had written the Governor that there would be a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee on Tuesday afternoon and that he would then submit the Governor's letter to the members of the committee for consideration.

"I have already subscribed for stock," Mr. McCooey answered when asked if he would follow the example of the Governor in purchasing stock of the building corporation. "How much? Just what they asked me to subscribe, $1,000. The Democratic Party in Kings County is not only interested in politics, but is interested in everything that tends to the good of the community."

Louis H. Pink, a member of the State Housing Board, said that between $80,000 and $85,000 worth of stock had already been subscribed for the Brooklyn Garden Apartments and that as soon as $250,000 was in hand land would be purchased and building immediately begun.

"We are trying to interest everybody," he said. "The shares are $100 each. It would be better to have 2,000 stockholders each purchasing one share than 200 each purchasing ten shares. The benefit will be derived by the man of small means. I am sure that the Republicans of Kings County will support the movement just as the Democrats are doing."

Mr. Pink asserted that the erection of the first low-priced garden apartments in this borough would serve as an example for the whole city. He added that it was expected that the success of the first venture would result in the demolition of many of the old buildings which now stood idle and the construction of more healthful and livable structures. He also said that he hoped that districts in South Brooklyn, Williamsburg and Red Hook would later be improved by the erection of modern tenements. No site for the first apartment has yet been selected, although several are under consideration.

The sum already subscribed, Mr. Pink said, consisted of purchases ranging from $100 to $25,000. He would not divulge the name of the $25,000 subscriber. The organization of the housing corporation is under the supervision of former Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin, Mr. Pink and others associated with the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce. Dividends were limited under the housing law to 6 per cent., Mr. Pink said, and added that the investment was considered to be highly sound.

When asked today whether he intended to subscribe to stock in the new housing project, Republican Leader Jacob A. Livingston replied briefly: "No."

Mr. Livingston declined to make further comment.

ALERT POLICEMAN HONORED

Made Detective for Work in Bringing Arrest of Three in Stolen Car.

Patrolman Fletcher Varreiman of Traffic A, whose quick wits Wednesday led to the arrest of three men in a stolen automobile at Canal and Elizabeth Streets, was made a second grade detective yesterday, and will report at Headquarters for assignment. His salary increase is from $1,760 to $2,700.

Varreiman recognized the number on the license plate of the car as that of a stolen automobile, and signaled the driver to halt. Instead, the automobile sped northward and Varreiman opened fire. Detectives and patrolmen of the near-by Elizabeth Street Station heard the shots and ran out to assist in the capture of the three men.

The three men captured, in addition to two others arrested Wednesday night, were held by Magistrate Simpson in Tombs Court yesterday for a hearing next Tuesday.

TUBERCULOSIS DEATHS AT NEW LOW MARK

Reduction in the death rate for tuberculosis to a new minimum was the greatest single health achievement in 1927, according to Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. This new minimum of 93.5 per 100,000 was registered among the 18,000,000 industrial policyholders of the Metropolitan. It is 4.8 per cent. below the previous minimum of 1925.

While no figures are yet available among the general population last year, the indications are that a new minimum also will be shown in the country at large, he said.

Since 1920, when a death rate from tuberculosis of 127.9 per 100,000 was recorded, the reduction has been 26.2 per cent.; and since 1911, when the rate was 224.6, there has been a remarkable drop of 58.4 per cent. The death rate from tuberculosis of the respiratory system, which causes almost nine-tenths of all the deaths from tuberculosis diseases, dropped 59.3 per cent. since 1911.

"The reduction has applied to all sections, colored and white race, and to all industries," he said. "Above all, it has applied to all economic strata of our population."

ADDRESSED TO CAMP DIRECTORS

ALL the facilities of the Camp and School Bureau are now concentrated upon Camp Outfitting for the Summer of 1928. Its staff of experienced counsellors, well acquainted with both camp and clothes problems, is ready to advise, to assist and to work out with you your camp uniform plans for the season.

Everything that any camper, boy or girl, needs in the way of clothing or accessories is assembled in this one department, reorganized and located in new and spacious quarters on the Sixth Floor.

Contracts are now being made with Camp Directors—outfits in each instance to be worked out according to individual camp colours and requirements. To those camps which have not as yet an established uniform, the staff is prepared to make practical suggestions.

Of particular interest is our Name Tape Service, which will be explained in detail upon request.

FREE CLINIC ABUSE CHARGED IN JERSEY

Hudson County Doctors Find Non-Residents Treated as Charity Patients.

SAY WELL-TO-DO ARE AIDED

Society's Report to Mayor Hague Will Cite Gratuitous Service to New Yorkers.

An investigating committee of the Hudson County Medical Society is completing a report to submit to Mayor Hague of Jersey City, exposing alleged abuses of the charity privileges in Hudson County hospitals.

According to Dr. William J. Sweeney of Union City, who heads the committee, the report will include charges that hospitals have accorded free treatment to numerous patients well able to afford average medical fees, to the detriment of the genuinely indigent; that non-residents, through political influence, have obtained treatment at the expense of local taxpayers; that the increasing use of charity clinics has imposed undue hardships on the young physician struggling to establish a practice.

The investigating committee reported a tentative form of the complaints at an executive meeting Tuesday and the general sentiment approved the report. Dr. Sweeney's committee will submit to Mayor Hague when he returns from Florida.

While not named at the meeting, Dr. Sweeney yesterday said that City Hospital, Jersey City, which is Mayor Hague's favorite charity institution, will be listed as the chief offender.

"We are prepared to submit records of specific cases in our report," said Dr. Sweeney.

He said that the committee has information that New Yorkers are among those who have been treated at the Jersey City City Hospital.

Dr. George O'Hanion, Medical Director of City Hospital, declined to reply to the charges.

The public, however, has recognized the situation as a free-for-all controversy and bombarded local newspapers with letters declaring that the average fees asked by physicians are beyond the means of an average income.

Georgia Governor Against Cuvillier.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 9 (AP).—Governor I. G. Hardman today telegraphed Louis A. The Governor's message was in reply to a telegram.

BOOKS OF DR. VOLLBEHR YIELD $26,450 AT SALE

Highest Price Is $2,000 for 15th Century German Woodcut Volume in Collection.

One hundred incunabula volumes of Dr. Otto H. F. Vollbehr, Berlin bibliophile, were auctioned for $26,450 last night at the Anderson Galleries. The volumes disposed of last night were duplicates from the collection of Dr. Vollbehr.

The highest price brought by any of the "cradle-prints" last night was $2,000, which was paid by A. Spaeth for a copy of one of the finest German woodcut books of the fifteenth century, Schatzbehalter's "Oder Schrein der wahren Reichthumer des Heils unter der ewigen Seligkeit."

A collection of several manuscript Horae and what is believed to be the only perfect copy in America of Nicolaus De Lyra's "Postillae Super Bibliam," printed at Strassburg about 1473, were auctioned at the close of the incunabula sale for a total of $2,616. These nine numbers were the property of Professor Paul Soubeiran de Pierres of Montpellier, France.

A copy of the Bontifacius's "Decretalium" of 1473 was bought by Dr. H. P. Spring for $1,500. This volume like most of the other incunabula sold last night, was one of a small number in this country. A copy of "Vitae Caesarum" of Suetonius, published by Jenson in Venice in 1471, was bought for $1,200 by A. Spaeth, who also paid $1,000 for a copy of the famous Passau Herbal, the first dated book from the press of Johann Petri. The same price was paid by Dr. Aldo Alschki for an Editio Princeps of Albo's "Sepher Ikkarim," a rare Hebrew work.

Dr. Alschki also paid $1,000 each for "Libri et epistolae" of Cyprianus published in Stuttgart in 1486, and a copy of "Commentarius in Terentii Comoedias" of Donatus, published in Strasbourg about 1470. A copy of the "Comoedias" of Paltus, Venice, 1499, was obtained by Dr. H. P. Spring for $975. Edwin Emerson gave $950 for a copy of Riedrer's "Spiegel der wahren Rhetorik," published in Freiburg in 1493, containing a woodcut of the fabled flight of Daedalus and Icarus, the first printed representation of the art of flying.

EX-PASTOR, SLAYER, INSANE

Priddy, Who Killed Wife and Two Sons, Will Go to Matteawan.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Feb. 9.—Claude H. Priddy, former Methodist pastor, who killed his wife and two small sons on Feb. 1, was declared insane today by the lunacy commission appointed to examine him. A brief statement to that effect was turned over to Supreme Court Justice George Furman by Dr. Horatio Gibson and Dr. Charles Vaux, both of the medical staff of the Central Islip State Hospital for the Insane.

Sheriff Burton Horne will have the commitment papers signed by Justice Furman tomorrow afternoon and then plans to take Priddy by automobile to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan.

Two Verdicts Are Returned.

Judge Trabucco, after the usual formality of asking the jury if they had appointed a foreman and arrived at a verdict, instructed Mr. Ruggles, who answered in the affirmative, to pass the verdict to the court clerk, and then after reading it himself, he returned it to the clerk with orders to read it into the records.

Two verdicts were arrived at by the jury. The first found Hickman sane at the time of the kidnapping. The second found the defendant sane at the time of the murder.

It was pointed out that while Hickman in all probability will be sentenced Saturday and should be taken shortly thereafter to San Quentin he will very likely spend the next six to eight months in a death cell awaiting the final action of the courts.

If an appeal is taken the entire matter will go directly to the State Supreme Court, where under the new law the case must be placed on the court calender within thirty days. With the best possible speed, District Attorney Keyes said he does not expect the case to be finally settled for a number of months.

Judge's Instructions Brief.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9 (AP).—The closing scenes of the Hickman trial, which started Jan. 25, moved rapidly. After District Attorney Asa A. Keyes denounced the slayer in his final argument, Judge Trabucco took less than twenty minutes to instruct the jurors. The keynote of the Court's address was that the sole issue to be decided was whether or not the defendant was sane or insane at the time of the crime.

Judge Trabucco pointed out that the law refused to recognize a plea of "uncontrollable impulse." Further, the jury was required to find Hickman sane if it had been shown that he had or has lucid moments. To be adjudged insane, said Judge Trabucco, his mind must have been affected to the extent that he did not know the difference between right and wrong.

Turning to defense evidence, the Court instructed the jurors that a slight preponderance of evidence would be sufficient to warrant a verdict of insane. Finally, the eight men and four women in the box were told that they should reach their verdict uninfluenced by pity or sympathy for Hickman and unswayed by prejudice against him.

District Attorney Keyes declared: "It is only owing to the fact that we are civilized that a mob did not take this man from the officers of the law, and if it were not that I am an officer of the law I should have wanted to be in the front ranks of such a mob to help put a rope around this man's neck."

In sharp contrast to the sonorous periods of the District Attorney was the quiet, low-voiced plea of Richard Cantillon in his last argument for the defense. He condemned the prisoner's confessed crime, but urged the jury to consider him insane in its commission.

Judge Trabucco, who will pass sentence Saturday on William E. Hickman, tonight said:

"I cannot state in advance just what my sentence will be, but you can rest assured that this defendant will be given all the law allows."

Girl Kidnapped Dec. 15.

On Dec. 15 Hickman kidnapped from school Marian Parker, a daughter of Perry M. Parker, a Los Angeles banker, who received on the following day a special delivery letter signed "The Fox," threating death to Marion if $1,500 ransom in $20 Treasury notes were not paid. A letter from Marian urging her father to comply was enclosed.

Other letters followed and on Dec. 17 Mr. Parker met Hickman by appointment, paid him $1,500 and received the body of his murdered child.

The chase for the murderer ended Dec. 23 near Pendleton, Ore., when Chief of Police Tom Gurdane and Motorcycle Officer Buck Lieuallen, watching for a green sedan which Los Angeles had reported had been stolen by Hickman, stopped the car and arrested him on the Columbia River highway.

On his way back to Los Angeles Hickman confessed his crime. Jerome Walsh, 25-year-old Kansas City lawyer, was retained to defend the youth and instructed him to plead "not guilty by reason of insanity."

VOTE ON SACRAMENT.

English Houses of Clergy and Laity Favor Perpetual Reservation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Houses of Clergy and Laity of the Church of England Assembly in session here approved today perpetual reservation of the sacrament as set forth in the amended prayer book. The majority in the House of Clergy was 64 and in the House of Laity only 54. There were many abstentions in both houses.

An amendment designed to make obligatory the reading of the prayer for the King at the morning and evening services daily throughout the year was defeated in the House of Clergy.

ADMITS SETTING PLAZA FIRE

Watchman Who Started Blaze to Pose as Hero Pleads Guilty.

Frank Heicklen, 19 years old, of 430 Chester Street, Brooklyn, who while employed as a watchman on the eighteenth floor of the Hotel Plaza on the night of Jan. 20 "discovered" and quenched a fire in a metal bin which he himself had started to demonstrate his vigilance, pleaded guilty in General Sessions yesterday to attempted arson. He was remanded to the Tombs for sentence next Thursday. The maximum penalty is seven and a half years in Sing Sing.

The youth appeared to be excited when he ran up to the house detective and told of his heroic act. The Fire Marshal, who came later, however, with Detective Lieutenant Coy, became suspicious, and with a little questioning Heicklen broke down and confessed that he had started and extinguished the blaze "to receive a little glory."

REED BOOM IN WEST FAILS TO HALT SMITH

Governor Makes Headway as Senator's Candidacy Is Said to Show Little Progress.

IOWA STRONG FOR GOVERNOR

Florida, With Smith Men Active, Refuses to Hold a Preference Primary.

Governor Smith's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President has continued to make great progress in nearly every part of the country, according to reports received by the managers of his campaign here, it was learned yesterday. This information has been to the effect that the candidacy of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri has made little progress despite the recent efforts to give it impetus and that Governor Smith is getting more support in the South than had been expected.

According to the reports received by the Governor's political advisers, the Reed campaign has failed almost completely in the Middle West and Far West. Governor Smith is expected to get most of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention from the Rocky Mountain States as the result of the movement started by Fred W. Johnson of Rock Springs, Wyo., which resulted in the formation of the Western States for Smith Federation.

Foes Fail to Gain in Iowa.

In Iowa, which sent a unit-rule McAdoo delegation to the 1924 convention, opponents of Governor Smith have failed to make any headway yet, Governor Smith's advisers here have been informed. A recent letter stated that the Governor would have the delegates from all except two of the eleven Congressional districts in the State and might have those. It also said that friends of Senator Reed had attempted to promote his candidacy in Iowa, but seemingly had made no headway at all.

Governor Smith's Iowa supporters have been fearful that Edwin T. Meredith of Des Moines, former Secretary of Agriculture, might enter the field as a "favorite-son" candidate and thus keep the delegation away from Governor Smith. So far, it has been reported, neither Mr. Meredith nor any of his friends has been active, and there was every reason to believe that Smith would have the solid vote of the Iowa delegation under the unit rule, which has been the custom of the Iowa Democratic State Convention, which will be held this year on April 20.

Another piece of encouraging information received by the Smith campaign management was that the Florida Democratic State Committee had voted against inclusion in its call for a primary election any provision for instruction or for a preferential Presidential primary, which is optional with the State Committee under the laws of that State. In 1924 the Florida delegation was held solidly for Mr. McAdoo by the State Committee directing a preferential primary.

Sure of Florida Support.

The information of the Florida State Committee's action came in a letter from Herbert Felkel of St. Augustine, a member of the State Executive Committee and Chairman of the State Campaign Committee, who is a Smith supporter and who led the fight against instructions, which a solid anti-Smith delegation under instructions had been expected. The refusal of the State Committee to direct a preferential primary is expected to insure five or six Smith delegates from Florida. Among these probably will be former Mayor J. E. T. Bowden of Jacksonville, who recently announced his candidacy for delegate as a supporter of Governor Smith.

Invitations continue to be received for Governor Smith to visit Southern cities on his way to or from the national convention at Houston, Texas. Such invitations have been received recently from the Chamber of Commerce of Biloxi, Miss.; the Chamber of Commerce and Commissioner Harry F. Hartwell of Mobile, Ala., and Mayor H. A. O'Keefe of New Orleans.

To each of these invitations the Governor has returned his thanks and said that he could not determine in February what he would do in June, thus leaving it open to conjecture as to whether or not he intends to attend the convention.

WATSON WILL ENTER PRESIDENTIAL RACE

Indiana Senator Names Campaign Manager and Will Announce His Candidacy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Senator Watson of Indiana will actively seek the Republican Presidential nomination. M. Burt Thompson of Indianapolis has been appointed as his campaign manager, and formal announcement of the Senator's candidacy will be made next week in a statement of his views on the "issues" of the campaign.

Mr. Watson's name has been frequently mentioned for the nomination, not only this year but in others. Last Winter, when his name was again brought forward, he assumed a somewhat reluctant attitude, but lately became more receptive.

Next week's announcement will place him openly in the race with two Senatorial colleagues, Curtis of Kansas and Willis of Ohio.

Senator Watson was today unanimously endorsed for the nomination at a meeting of Indiana Republican members of the House, presided over by Representative Will R. Reed, Chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Senator Watson is expected to have a clear field in his own State in his bid for the solid delegation to the Republican National Convention, as managers for former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois announced recently that his candidacy would not be pressed in Indiana and there have been no indications that Secretary Hoover will actively seek Indiana delegates.

Four years ago, when Senator Watson was put forward for the Vice Presidential nomination on a ticket with President Coolidge, he had the endorsement of the entire Indiana delegation and held its support until he voluntarily withdrew his name before the convention.

In a resolution supporting their colleague the Indiana Congressional delegation today called attention to the "brilliant and useful public services" of the Senator over a period of thirty-three years, during which, it was stated, he had "undeviatingly supported Republican principles and rendered conspicuous service to American business, agriculture and labor."

The declaration also was made that Senator Watson "has always been a loyal and patriotic citizen of the United States, intensely American in his ideals; he has vigorously opposed the United States entering the League of Nations or adhering in any way to the World Court; he is a believer in the fundamental principles of the Constitution of the United States and has fought socialism in all its forms."

CALDER TO SUPPORT HOOVER CANDIDACY

Ex-Senator, Slated as Delegate to Convention, Praises the Secretary's Fitness.

FIGHT IN PARTY SHUNNED

Friends of Hoover Seek to Check Trend—Present State Strength Put at 15 to 30 Delegates.

Former United States Senator William M. Calder of Brooklyn made formal announcement yesterday of his intention to support Secretary of Commerce Hoover for the Republican nomination for President. Mr. Calder is slated for election as a delegate to the Republican National Convention from the Fifth Congressional District.

"I have been for Mr. Hoover and, of course, will support him in the convention," Mr. Calder said. "I am and have been of the opinion that Mr. Hoover's wide experience and training as an executive make him pre-eminently the man the country needs for its next President.

"I believe he measures up more closely to the Coolidge type than any other whose name has been proposed. His nomination, I have confidence, will mean his election, and I believe Republicans throughout the country are beginning to realize it. I hope for Mr. Hoover's nomination on the first ballot."

Former State Senator Charles F. Murphy, who is understood to be slated for election as the other delegate from the Fifth District, was reported also to be in favor of Mr. Hoover. This report, however, was denied and it was said that Mr. Murphy undoubtedly would go along with the rest of the Kings County organization.

Jacob A. Livingston, Brooklyn Republican leader, said he knew of only one person likely to be a delegate who was for Mr. Hoover. Mr. Livingston, who is supporting the State organization policy of an uninstructed and unpledged delegation, said he had been too busy to determine a preference for any candidate.

Supporters and opponents of Mr. Hoover agreed that published reports that Mr. Hoover, according to present indications, would have from seventy to eighty of New York's delegates were greatly exaggerated. A supporter of Mr. Hoover said the present indication was that Mr. Hoover would have about thirty New York delegates, while party organization leaders put the number at from fifteen to twenty.

So far, it was said, Mr. Hoover was assured of only three delegates from the forty-two to be elected from New York City. These are former Senator Calder, Under-Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills and Richard W. Lawrence of the Bronx. Two or three other delegates who favor Mr. Hoover might be elected from the city, it was said, but not more than that.

The leaders of the Hoover movement, it was learned, have been making special efforts to prevent it from developing into a fight against the Republican organization. In many instances Republicans outside the organization have endeavored to use the Hoover movement in an attempt to start a fight against a local leader. The Hoover campaign management, it was said, does not intend to make any direct primary contest for the election of Hoover delegates in New York City.

It was said at the headquarters of the New York State Hoover-for-President Committee, 11 West Forty-second Street, that very encouraging reports had been received from up-State. Former Representative William H. Hill of Binghamton, Chairman of the committee, who has charge of the up-State campaign, is expected here today for a conference with the local Hoover supporters.

LINER TO BE A HOTEL ON STEEPLECHASE DAY

Caronia Will Accommodate Each Visitor for £1 During Great Race at Aintree.

Plans to use one of their liners, the Caronia, as a floating hotel on March 30, the day of the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England, have been announced by the Cunard Steamship Company of 25 Broadway. The vessel sails for New York the next day, but accommodations will be available to all Cunard Line passengers for the day for £1, whether they are sailing on her or not.

"The idea, we think, is our own," said an official of the company, "and we believe that it is a good one. Liverpool is a large city and it has a number of good hotels, but they are pretty apt to be full at this time and we don't want any one to miss the race for the lack of a place to sleep."

The Grand National Steeplechase, which is considered one of the hardest and most important in England, is noted for the fact that it is more informal than Ascot or the French race meetings. Sport clothes and tweeds are worn and felt hats rather than pearl gray stovepipes.

The Grand National has twice been won by Americans, Stephen Sanford, with his horse Sergeant Murphy, in 1924, and A. C. Schwarz, with Jack Horner, in 1926. As a consequence it is very well known in this country.

It is a great favorite with gentlemen riders, many of whom ride their own horses, and is also noted for the small percentage of starters to cross the finish line. One year of thirty-seven to start, only eight finished the race, while there were eight accidents at a single jump.

COMMITTEE VOTES, 6 TO 3, TO SEAT BECK

Contest Over Eligibility Will Now Come Before Whole House for Final Decision.

EARLY ACTION IS EXPECTED

One Democrat Will Join on Majority Report and One Republican on Minority Report to Be Filed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—By a vote of six to three the House Elections Committee today decided that James M. Beck, former Solicitor General, was entitled to the seat in the House to which he was elected as a Republican from the First Pennsylvania District. Mr. Beck's right to sit in the House had been challenged by the Citizens' Party of Philadelphia on the ground that he was not an inhabitant of the State at the time of his election.

The case now goes to the House as a whole, which will pass upon the question of eligibility. The challenge on constitutional grounds will be renewed before the House by those signing the minority report to be filed by the three members who refused to concur in the views of the majority.

Two Democratic members of the committee, Browning of Tennessee and Wilson of Mississippi, and one Republican, Crail of California, voted that Mr. Beck failed to meet the constitutional requirements as to residence. Five Republicans, Chairman Vincent of Michigan, Perkins of New Jersey, Rathbone of Illinois, Beahmans of West Virginia and Guyer of Kansas, and one Democrat, Douglass of Massachusetts, voted for seating Mr. Beck.

Every effort will be made to expedite a decision in the case. Both majority and minority reports are expected to be ready within a week. Mr. Beck, although sworn in as a member when his right to sit was challenged on the first day of the session, Dec. 4, has refrained from House activities because of the cloud surrounding his membership.

Mr. Beck himself wants a speedy decision. He has declared an intention to go over all the election requirements again in order to obtain renewed assurances from his constituents that he is the man they want to represent them. This action, it is said for Mr. Beck, is not in the nature of vindication. He does not feel that he needs vindication. Rather it is a move to dispel the doubts that exist about his residence.

Says Honest Difference Led Him to Quit as Bronx Chamber President.

No mention was made of the transit situation at the weekly luncheon yesterday of the Bronx Chamber of Commerce, at the Concourse Plaza Hotel. However, Major William F. Deegan, who resigned as President Tuesday because of the letter sent by the chamber to Mayor Walker, in which, although cooperation with the city against the I. R. T.'s proposed fare rise was promised, it was said that the chamber stood ready to enjoin the transit company in case the city failed to act, said:

"I want to clear up any possible misunderstanding of my action in resigning the Presidency. I resigned because of an honest difference of opinion, but I shall continue to function as a loyal member of the chamber forever and ever."

Major Deegan presided at the luncheon. Next Tuesday night a special meeting of the chamber will be held to accept his resignation. At the next regular monthly meeting, on Feb. 16, the election of a new President will take place. Logan Billingsley and George W. Markey, former President, are considered the two leading candidates. Mr. Billingsley was one of the plaintiffs in the recent application for a temporary injunction against the I. R. T., which was denied by Supreme Court Justice Ernest E. L. Hammer.

INVENTOR ELATED BY TELEVISOR TEST

HE PLANS VISIT HERE SOON

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—J. L. Baird, the young Scotch inventor of the televisor, by means of which four men sitting in a darkened cellar in a New York suburb last night saw the faces of a man and a woman in London, the images of which had been transmitted by wireless, was greatly elated today over the success of his latest experiment.

"I am sailing shortly for New York," he said, "to demonstrate my nestovisor whereby pictures can be transmitted in darkness. The television instrument has been improved greatly since we transmitted vision between London and Leeds last Summer for scientists of the British Association."

Mr. Baird told THE NEW YORK TIMES that transmission took place from his television laboratories in Longacre, London, beginning shortly after midnight and lasting nearly six hours. A dummy head was first transmitted to allow New York to tune in. This transmission was sent by telephone wire from the London laboratories to the wireless transmitter at Purley and from there broadcast to Hartsdale, N. Y. Owing to favorable atmospheric conditions on Wednesday, the transmission was successful, and a message was received from Hartsdale through their wireless transmitter by Morse code asking Mr. Baird himself to come in front of the transmitter and remain there half an hour.

Baird's Image Transmitted.

Mr. Baird then went into the transmitting room, and instructions for him to move nearer to or further from the window were given, then instructions to move his head slowly from left to right. Next he was asked to turn his profile. W. Fox, a friend of Baird, and Mrs. Howe, an American woman living in London, then took Baird's place.

According to a statement by Captain O. G. Hutchinson, managing director of the television organization, who is in New York, but who spoke over the Atlantic telephone this afternoon, all three faces were seen in New York, although the woman's features were not made out clearly. Imperfections caused by atmospherics and fading, Mr. Baird said, were due to the small power of the transmitter at Purley. These defects could easily be overcome by operating a higher power transmitter, he said.

This is the first time television has been attempted across the Atlantic. Nine months ago Mr. Baird sent a photograph from London to Glasgow. The transmission apparatus is a revolving mechanism of shutters and lenses by means of which images of articles or persons in front of the machine can be made to pass at high speed over a cell sensitive to light. The current in the cell varies in proportion to the light falling on it, and this varying current is transmitted to the receiver where it controls the light behind an optical arrangement similar to that at the sending end. By this means a point of light is made to traverse a ground-glass screen. The light is dim for shadows and bright for high lights and crosses the screen so rapidly that the whole image appears simultaneously to the eye.

Woman Tells of Experience.

By MRS. MIA HOWE.

(Written for The Associated Press).

LONDON, Feb. 9.—It was the greatest thrill of my life when Mr. Baird told me my image had been seen on the other side of the Atlantic.

When Mr. Baird first said we were making history this morning I scarcely realized it was a fact. To tell the truth I can hardly realise it now despite the long dispatches pouring into the office here from New York telling how I looked to spectators in Hartsdale.

I hope they did not notice that my hair was somewhat mussed. It was all right when I started, but it must have been the excitement and heat from the electric lights which mixed my looks all up.

Mr. Baird assisted me into the chair. Then he went to another part of the laboratory to wait—it might be called the proofroom. Sitting in the darkened room he could see my image as it appeared in Hartsdale.

But first I had to get my face in focus. Mr. Baird directed me in this by calling through a speaking tube, "Face up a little closer," and also, "Chin up, please, just a little bit more," somewhat after the style of a photographer getting his subject in position.

Then Mr. Baird called, "Splendid—please keep that pose. You are showing up fine."

And then I began to get thrilled more than ever.

The glare and heat of the electric lights bothered me only a trifle—I was too thrilled at the novelty of it all to think of the temporary discomfort.

A Perfectly Good Sawmill.

In front of me was a black wall with about a foot and a half square opening. This was what might be called the lens. It was like a great wheel going round and round. It causes a succession of images of the object in front. Then a slotted disc, revolving at about 2,000 revolutions per minute, interrupts the light reflected from the image, causing it to reach the light sensitive cell in a series of flashes. Before reaching the cell the light passes through a rotating spiral slot, giving a further subdivision of the image, but the remainder of the process is so technical that I do not believe any person but Mr. Baird understands it.

The apparatus as a whole looked to me like a perfectly good sawmill and frankly that's about all I know about it.

As my sitting was nearing the finish I could hear wagons and trucks rumbling along Longacre, and Mr. Baird informed me that vehicles were taking vegetables and food to Covent Garden for today's market. And as it was nearly 5 A. M. he guessed his night's work had ended with the greatest success since the experiments started, and he congratulated me as being the first woman ever to have her image across the Atlantic.

SEES TELEVISION FOR PUBLIC.

Baird's Aide Predicts Commercial Service Across Ocean This Year.

New Yorkers and Londoners will be viewing each other on the "televisor" before the year is ended, according to Captain O. G. Hutchinson, Managing Director of the Baird Television Development Company of London, who is now in New York carrying on experiments to perfect the Baird apparatus. The vision of man spanned the Atlantic for the first time on Wednesday night when faces before the two kilowatt radio transmitter in London flashed the images across 3,000 miles to a receiver in the home of R. M. Hart of Hartsdale, N. Y., owner and operator of short-wave station 2CVJ. Mr. Hart has been aiding in the test during the past few months.

"Television will eventually be possible," said Mr. Hutchinson last night, "wherever operation of the radio telephone is possible. Before the end of this year we expect to establish two-way television service for the public between New York and London. The transmitter for such operation is just now being completed here. The transmitter for such operation is just now being completed here. It will be installed in the near future, probably at some convenient point on Long Island, and connected, like any other radio service, to points within the city.

"We have secured in England very good televisor tests, which were exceedingly clear, over 400 to 500 miles of radio transmission. The images were not clear in Hartsdale because the power at the transmitter was not sufficient. It will be very simple to overcome this by sending with more power, say ten kilowatts."

Mr. Hutchinson said the tests will be continued tonight or tomorrow night at Mr. Hart's home about 9 to 10 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time.

MORE LABOR GROUPS BACK PEACE PLAN

SOME RADICALS DISSENT

They Criticize the Proposal as a 'Conspiracy'—Pennsylvania Pledges Help.

Recent comments and inquiries with respect to the American Bar Association committee's formula for legalizing and making enforceable industrial arbitration contracts indicate that the public hearings to be held on this subject on Feb. 16, 17 and 18 will take on the atmosphere of a "peace conference." Interest in the coming discussions is being displayed by both employers' and labor organizations.

Julius Henry Cohen, Chairman of the Bar Association's subcommittee that framed the formula, said yesterday at his office, 76 Trinity Place, that the interest of labor unions in the matter was "keen." The latest of such organizations to seek data on the public hearings, he said, was the Cloth, Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, with headquarters at 621 Broadway.

Certain labor groups of more radical tendencies have criticized the movement as a "conspiracy" against what they stand for. It has been intimated even that the movement is an attempt to take from labor the right to strike, but this has been very positively denied. The formula, which is still in an incomplete state, sets forth that coercion by outside elements and forces is sought to be done away with and that whatever means of arbitration may be undertaken will be the methods agreed to by the employers and workmen in this arbitration contract, or a government by the consent of the governed.

"To the growing list of leaders who have manifested deep interest in the forthcoming public hearings on the proposals of the subcommittee for peaceable adjustment of labor controversies," said Mr. Cohen yesterday, "there was added today the name of John A. Fitch of the New York School of Social Work. In addition to his work as director of the industrial courses at this school, Mr. Fitch is an editor of The Survey, and has long been identified with the study of questions growing out of industry. Writing to the Chairman of the Bar Association's subcommittee, Mr. Fitch said:

"'This whole matter is one in which the legal profession may be able, I should think, to contribute something of very great value. It is a matter for congratulation that the American Bar Association, as such, has interested itself in it.'

"Representing the Department of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania, David Williams, Director of the Bureau of Industrial Relations, will attend the public hearings at the headquarters of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, 42 West Forty-fourth Street. This Bureau of Industrial Relations is charged with the conciliation and mediation of labor disputes in the industries of Pennsylvania. Mr. Williams said:

"'We want to commend you upon the work you have in mind, and assure you that we will be glad to render any assistance upon the subject which, due to our experience in handling the large number of disputes in Pennsylvania, we may be able to offer you.'"

Constantinople Flocks to See Movie Depicting Red Sultan

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 9.—The film entitled "Al-ul Hamid, The Red Sultan," is showing to the capacity of the houses here, many old functionaries of the Sultan attending. The film is popular because last week the Sultan's thirteen exiled children brought an action in the Paris court demanding seizure of the film, as well as damages. The film lawyer argued that the adjective "Red" was too mild to apply to the notorious despot whom Gladstone called a great assassin. The Court denied the petition.

PICK WASSERVOGEL FOR BAR INQUIRY

CHOICE BRINGS APPROVAL

Supreme Court Justice Isidor Wasservogel was named yesterday by the Appellate Division of the First Department to conduct the inquiry ordered on Tuesday into the activities of ambulance-chasing lawyers and accident claim agents pursuant to the joint request of the Bar Association, the New York County Lawyers' Association and the Bronx County Bar Association.

While the formal order in the case fixes Feb. 20 in Part 6 of the special term of the Supreme Court for the opening of the inquiry, the order also provides that the Court may set a later date. The Appellate Division orders further that "upon the conclusion of the said investigation the said Court report the said proceedings to this Court with its opinion thereon, and that upon the coming in of said report such other and further action or proceedings may be taken as to this Court shall seem just and proper."

May Set a Later Date.

Former Judge Samuel Seabury of the Court of Appeals, Vice Chairman and ranking member now in the city of the Joint Committee of the bar associations named to act in the "ambulance chasing" investigation, said yesterday that an adjournment of the actual commencement of the hearings will probably be asked on Feb. 20 and that the members of the committee will meet prior to the date set to map out the plan of action and to determine upon the counsel whose services have been offered to the Appellate Division without compensation in the conduct of the inquiry. It is understood that the committee has in mind one of the leading trial lawyers in the city to take charge of the gathering and presentation of evidence.

The appointment of Justice Wasservogel met with unanimous satisfaction on the part of committee members and lawyers interested in ridding the profession of the ambulance chasers. They regard Justice Wasservogel as fitted for the task which is expected to require months of constant labor, not only because of his record on the bench in the dispatch of judicial business and in the soundness of his decisions but because for six years, under District Attorney Whitman, he was Acting Assistant District Attorney and thus is equipped to cope with such criminal phases as the inquiry may encounter.

Justice Wasservogel, it was learned yesterday, has taken a leading part in the work of the New York County Supreme Court Justices in relieving the trial term calendars of cases which until a year ago made it impossible for a jury case to be heard in less than three years. Juries are now hearing suits filed in June, 1926.

Disposes of 500 Cases.

During the month of January alone, when Justice Wasservogel presided over a trial term calendar, he disposed finally of more than 500 cases, either by trial or settlement, involving judgments of more than $407,185. In the trial cases no appeals will be taken.

The appointment of Justice Wasservogel will not interfere with the court duties to which he was previously assigned, he said yesterday, because he will continue his regular work in Trial Term, Part 12, and will devote extra time to the labors of the investigation as soon as he is notified that counsel for the bar associations are ready to proceed.

JUSTICE ISIDORE WASSERVOGEL
Who Has Been Named to Conduct Ambulance-Chasing Inquiry.

HAMILTON DEFENDS THE LABOR BUREAU

Industrial Commissioner James A. Hamilton appeared in defense of the State Labor Department yesterday before Professor Lindsay Rogers, in the latter's investigation of alleged laxity and inefficiency on the part of departmental employes. The Commissioner urged an exclusive State Insurance Fund to handle all compensation claims, by virtue of which he declared, companies outside the State would be eliminated from workmen's compensation.

Under an exclusive State fund, Commissioner Hamilton said, employers would save 27% per cent. annually over the premiums they now pay stock insurance companies and would be relieved of all responsibility arising from personal injury or death sustained by their employes. At present, he explained, if an outside insurance company fails the employer is left responsible.

Mr. Hamilton's recommendation was made after he had been speaking of the failure of the Manufacturers' Liability Company of New Jersey, in which he pointed out that if foreign insurance companies are to be allowed to handle compensation cases in this State they should be required to deposit securities as "positive guarantee of payment of awards."

Self insuring employers, he said, now have $18,000,000 deposited to guarantee the payment of their claims.

In his defense of the State Labor Department Mr. Hamilton pointed to the large increase in industrial accidents during the past four years, when 1,781,167 cases were reported. In the administration of the Workmen's Compensation law, he declared, every effort is made to prevent fraud or collusion on the part of employes in connection with attempted fraud.

Referees, he said, have not had the slightest indication of suspicion pointed at them. "No one has come forward with any evidence showing dishonesty on their part," he declared, "and 99 per cent. of the cases heard have been settled finally by referees."

Friendly study and discussion, modes of conciliation, formal arbitration and precise judicial settlement are the various modes by which civilized beings settle their individual differences. Civilized nations have come to a point where, if their Governments will only let them, they are ready to do the same.

Dr. Butler warned that any attempt on the part of the United States to induce the European powers to outlaw all war would hinder the cause of peace, not assist it, if it meant scrapping the existing commitments of European nations under the League Covenant.

"The nations of the earth, ourselves and one or two more excepted, have organized an association to carry on international business by discussion and calm consideration and to suppress and punish aggressive war should it occur," he said. "This is a reason why no nation that is a member of the League of Nations can at the moment sign an agreement to renounce war as an instrument of public policy unless war be understood to mean aggressive war. This is understood to be the act of a nation which, having formally pledged itself to settle its international disputes by conversation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement or other peaceful means, attempts to force its will by war without having kept its pledge.

"Surely there can be little difficulty in identifying aggressive war when the definition is so clear and so explicit as that. If no pledge has been given, then no pledge has been broken; but if a pledge has been given and is broken, then the aggressor is plainly in view of all men. Therefore in our formal treaty arrangements with Great Britain we cannot ask that Government, any more than we can ask the French Government, to undertake an obligation which conflicts with an existing obligation of the highest importance and with which we, being outside the League of Nations, have nothing to do. Therefore if we are sincere, serious and practical we will agree to do the thing which can be done and which other civilized nations, members of the League, are ready to do, namely, renounce war as an instrument of public policy and accept the definition of aggressor.

"If we do not recognize such commitments of other nations we should not be advancing the cause of peace for which this organization of Pilgrims was founded, but we should be putting obstacles in its path."

Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, listened attentively to Dr. Butler's proposal, but made no comment on it in his own speech. He did say that the Pilgrims in their twenty-five years of existence had done much to bring Britain and America closer together in understanding, and said that all those who saw in Anglo-American friendship "the surest guarantee of world peace" would continue to hope for the ever-growing influence and power of the Pilgrims.

"Britain and America are in no need of sentimental gush," said the Ambassador. "We can stand looking frankly into each other's eyes whenever our interests may conflict, and we can settle any such differences as friends and brothers."

King George's message was cabled to Sir Esme by Sir Austen Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and was as follows:

"The King has pleasure in congratulating the Pilgrims of the United States on the occasion of their twenty-fifth anniversary, and his Majesty takes this opportunity of conveying to them his good wishes for the future.

The Prince of Wales was more personal in his message, which was given to Sir Harry Brittain before his departure for America. It was as follows:

St. James's Palace, S. W.

As a Pilgrim of nearly nine years' standing, I am very glad to send to my brother Pilgrims in New York my warmest congratulations on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the club's inception in the United States.

There have been many changes in the world during the past quarter of a century, but the ties which unite Pilgrims on each side of the Atlantic remain as firm as ever.

To a society such as ours the passage of time brings only a growing sense of its value and a stronger confidence in its power for good in the future.

EDWARD, P.

Message of Duke of Connaught.

This was the message which the Duke of Connaught sent Sir Esme:

Will you as a representative of the British Pilgrims' Society at the twenty-fifth annual dinner of the United States Pilgrims kindly convey to their much beloved Chairman, Mr. Chauncey Depew, and his colleagues the most hearty congratulations from myself and my brother Pilgrims on this side of the sea on completion of twenty-five years' splendid work?

The cause of promoting cordial friendship between our two great countries is one on which the future happiness of the world in a great measure depends. Ever since I have been President of the British Pilgrims I have realised to the full the success of the work carried on by the two societies with this common object in view.

Sir Harry, who was Secretary of the original group which founded the Pilgrims in 1902, recalled the crowded history of the organization in both its branches from the days when its leading figures were the American Spanish War hero, General Joseph Wheeler, and the British Field Marshal, Lord Roberts. Since then, he said, some Pilgrims' dinners in England "have assumed almost the quality of State functions, when the whole country has looked forward with the greatest eagerness to addresses by men who were making history in the United States." He told also of the "wondrous" success of the American branch of the organization, and of the obstacles to international friendship which the Pilgrims helped to remove.

"One of the main difficulties," said Sir Harry, "is that there are not sufficient people in England who understand, and particularly at first hand, the many problems of and conditions existing in this great country. And if I may be permitted to say so, there are also many Americans who are equally oblivious of the amazingly intricate and difficult problems of the far-flung British Empire.

"In every way we possibly can we must develop personal contact between our respective peoples, and with untiring patience on either side tackle the difficulties as they arise. For in our common conception of international duty and of international obligations lies the real hope of the future."

Others who spoke at the dinner were James R. Sheffield, former Ambassador to Mexico, and Patrick Francis Murphy, who spoke at the Pilgrims' dinner in London just after James Bryce had been designated Ambassador to the United States. Among the guests at the speakers' table were Sir Thomas Lipton, Sir Harry Gloster Armstrong, the British Consul General; Bishop Manning, who delivered the invocation; George T. Wilson, founder of the Pilgrims of the United States, and former Attorney General George W. Wickersham, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the English-Speaking Union of the United States.

EPISCOPAL COUNCIL ASSAILS NAVAL BILL

Calls It a Menace to Friendly International Relations and Urges That It Be Cut.

A resolution condemning the naval bill now pending in Washington as "a menace to the friendly relations existing between nations at the present time" and calling for its modification was adopted yesterday by the National Council of the Episcopal Church at its quarterly meeting in the Episcopal Church Missions' House, 281 Fourth Avenue.

The resolution was presented by the Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, Executive Secretary of the social service department of the council. Its adoption was urged in an address by George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General of the United States, who is a vestryman of St. George's Church and a trustee of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Mr. Wickersham, who is not a member of the council, was present on invitation of the Right Rev. John Gardner Murray, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church. The resolution said:

"The National Council desires to bring to the attention of our people the menace to the friendly relations existing between nations at the present time inherent in the naval bill now pending. We do not believe that so vast an increase is necessary for national defense and we regard the expense involved as an unwarranted burden upon the taxpayers. In the interest of both peace and economy, while assuring adequate national defense, we hope for a modification of the bill."

The council adopted a budget of $3,750,000, of which 75 per cent. is for home and foreign missions, and 25 per cent. for religious education, social service, work for negroes and administration expenses.

The Rev. R. Brand Mitchell announced his resignation as Executive Secretary of the Field Department of the Council, and Bishop Murray appointed the Rev. Chauncey E. Snowden, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, Dallas, Texas, to succeed him.

The Rev. William D. Crittenden of Raleigh, N. C., was elected a General Secretary of the Field Department for work among Negroes. He is the second negro to be elected to an office in the Episcopal Church within the last three months. The Rev. Don F. Fenn, rector of Gethsemane Episcopal Church, Minneapolis, Minn., was also elected a General Secretary of the Field Department.

Three words

your children ought to know . . . do they?

"BORDEN'S GRADE A:" if your children know the meaning of these three words, you have done for them something wonderful indeed.

We say that in all modesty. For we after all are simply the guardians of this wonderful gift from Nature herself. Ours is the duty of protecting it carefully, of guarding it well.

Borden's Grade A: three words which mean milk so produced and so safeguarded that physicians, teachers, diet experts and hundreds of thousands of mothers demand it every day. Three words which mean added inches, keener minds, stronger bodies for your children. That is why we say they are three words your children ought to know.

A phone call—or a word to any Borden route salesman—will bring Borden's Grade A to your door tomorrow morning.

SEEKS AUTO RECORD WITH SECRET MOTOR

MAKES 450 HORSEPOWER

Engine Is Kept Under Constant Guard on Order of Air Ministry—He Expects to Beat 203-Mile Mark.

Captain Malcolm Campbell, British automobile racer, left last night for Daytona Beach, Fla., with a two-and-one-half-ton racing car equipped with a secret 450 horse power engine in an attempt to better the record of 203 miles an hour made there by Major Segrave last March.

His motor is based on the Napier-Lion aero engine, with modifications in design giving it a larger increase in power. The changes are kept secret by the British Air Ministry, which gave special permission to Captain Campbell to use the engine provided two guards kept constant watch over it. It was learned, however, that the engine is similar in design to that used by Flight Lieut. Webster in winning the Schneider airplane trophy at Venice with a speed of more than 281 miles an hour.

Recalling that Major Segrave's car weighed two and one-half tons and carried two motors developing 1,000 horsepower, Captain Campbell said yesterday in an interview at the Hotel Pennsylvania that he hoped to beat the Segrave record not by greater engine power but by more perfect stream-lining and greater acceleration, which he believed his car has. He explained that the enormous power of the Segrave racer was largely used in overcoming air pressure, while his automobile will dispose of a large part of the air pressure merely by its stream-lined design.

His engine has twelve cylinders, set in the "broad-arrow" formation; two banks of four cylinders each at a sixty-degree angle and another four-cylinder bank in an upright position between them. The radiators are at the rear of the car and the front wheels are double-spoked. The rear wheels are triple-spoked. Directional stability at high speed is aided by a large vertical fin at the rear, which is expected to reduce the danger of skidding.

Captain Campbell is accompanied by his wife and four mechanics. He is 43 years old and served with the Royal Air Force during the war, retiring with the rank of Captain. He has been interested in automobile racing since 1903 and has won almost 200 trophies, which have a melted-down value of about $10,000. In preliminary tests he said his car had made 187 miles an hour under extremely poor conditions. He expects to try for the speed record between Feb. 15 and Feb. 23, after taking several days for preliminary tests.

Levine Gets Bad Weather Report.

Special to The New York Times.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Feb. 9.—Charles A. Levine, who is planning a flight to Cuba in the rebuilt Bellanca monoplane Columbia as soon as weather conditions are favorable, announced at 10 o'clock tonight that he had been informed by Dr. James Kimball of the Weather Bureau that conditions would not be favorable for the trip during the next forty-eight hours. The runway on the field here is still muddy due to rains early in the week.

Miss Mayo's Book on India Gets Action on Child Marriages

LONDON, Feb. 9.—An American woman's attack on Hindoo manhood lies behind today's announcement by the Government of India that a committee would be appointed to inquire into child marriage in India. The Daily News asserts.

The book in question is Katherine Mayo's "Mother India," recently published, wherein she exposed the disastrous effects of child marriage on Indian peoples.

HIBBEN CALLS THINKING A MORAL SAFEGUARD

Tells Fathers of Princeton Men That Youth Today Is Sincere and Idealistic.

The newer trend in education, which places primary stress on making the student think for himself, is the greatest moral safeguard to youth, President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University told an audience of fathers of Princeton undergraduates at a luncheon at the Bankers' Club yesterday afternoon.

This same trend may even stir ideas in members of the younger generation which may shock their parents, Dr. Hibben said, but he urged the fathers to have patience at such times, and assured them that it was not often that there was any real cause for anxiety in such conflicts.

His address, which he termed an account of his stewardship, was in the nature of a message of hope and faith in youth. The greatest reason for such optimistic feeling, he said, was the spirit of absolute sincerity and the large element of idealism which he called the most conspicuous attributes of youth today.

In explaining the changes in educational policy at Princeton, Dr. Hibben said it was now the intention of the faculty that students should be ready to think for themselves by the time they become upper classmen. In the old days it was possible to go through college employing no mental faculty save the memory, but now the students received tasks which they could not possibly do unless they really thought for themselves.

"The men who go to pieces morally at Princeton," he declared, "are the self-indulgent and indolent, who have not yet found themselves in any absorbing interest."

CALL ROCKEFELLER IN THE OIL INQUIRY

accept his night letter as service of the subpoena the Senate committee has issued and appear before the committee on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock as directed. An invitation would have been equally effective.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR.

Frank Statement Expected.

That Mr. Rockefeller will testify with the utmost frankness is the conviction of Senator Walsh and every other member of the committee. As the program stands tonight he will be the only witness examined Saturday.

He will be questioned as to every phase of the matter as it concerns the Standard of Indiana and will be asked to repeat as nearly as he can all conversations he has had with Colonel Stewart since the Continental deal first became public nearly four years ago.

That Colonel Stewart, rather than answer the questions asked him, would resign his chairmanship of the Board of Directors of the Standard of Indiana and furthermore would, if necessary, go to jail rather than talk has been the conviction of some of his friends since the moment he left the witness stand last Friday morning and his subsequent citation to the Senate a few hours later.

One can get almost any kind of an explanation in Washington as to why Colonel Stewart refused to answer the two questions which are the basis of the proceedings now pending before the Grand Jury. The first question, in substance, was if any one had given him information as to the disposition of the Continental bonds and the second was if he had talked with Sinclair regarding the bonds.

One theory which seems to be most widely credited is that Sinclair in confidence told Stewart the whole story as he, Sinclair, knows it, and in doing so pledged Stewart to secrecy, and rather than violate that pledge Stewart, unless Sinclair releases him, is ready to go to jail. Stewart is now in Chicago, but is expected to return to Washington the first of next week.

Sheldon Clark Acquitted.

Sheldon Clark, Vice President of the Sinclair Refining Company, was today acquitted by Justice Frederick L. Siddons of contempt of court in connection with the charges involving Harry F. Sinclair, Henry Mason Day, William J. Burns and others, growing out of the shadowing of the Fall-Sinclair trial jury.

Justice Siddons in freeing Clark said:

"I think the evidence against this respondent is not comparable with the evidence against the others. I could not convict you of contempt of court and send you to prison because I have not been convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that you are guilty of contempt."

Clark, who was a character witness for Sinclair during the conspiracy trial, walked out of the court room a free man and received the congratulations of friends in the corridor outside. Justice Siddons's ruling followed a motion by E. C. Brandenburg, attorney for the respondent, to discharge the rule and dismiss the petition against Clark.

Justice Siddons in his ruling on Clark said:

"It seems to me that his connection with the undertaking might be described as casual and accidental. This is not to say he may not have known of the undertaking carried on by the other respondents. He has denied any share in the undertaking, but he may have read and discussed the reports made by the Burns agents.

"If Mr. Clark had considered the undertaking unlawful, you may say he should have disclosed it to the proper authorities. If, however, he thought the undertaking lawful and his connection with it was only casual and accidental, it does not seem he was guilty of criminal contempt."

Mr. Brandenburg in moving to dismiss the petition so far as Mr. Clark was concerned, said:

"It seems that the court has held that shadowing merely was unlawful."

Here Justice Siddons interrupted to say that what he had held was "that surveillance of a jury in a criminal case on trial was unlawful."

Mr. Brandenburg declared there was no evidence to support the charges against the respondent and quoted from the answers filed with the Court by Sinclair absolving Clark from connection with the jury employment and from Day, who directed the surveillance.

After disposal of the Clark petition the Court denied a motion to dismiss the charges against C. L. Veltch, Baltimore manager of the Burns agency.

The defense then began the presentation of testimony designed to contradict the testimony of William J. McMullin, a former Burns agent, who turned Government informer in the jury shadowing. Among other matters introduced was the prison record of McMullin.

More Subpoenas Issued.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—A new batch of subpoenas was issued today by the Senate Land Committee, returnable Saturday, at which time the committee is to resume its effort to find out what became of the profits of the Continental Trading Company of Canada.

Names of some now sought by the committee were withheld pending serving of the summons, but it was said the committee has not yet located Wayne O'Neil, son of James E. O'Neil, former Chairman of the Board of the Prairie Oil and Gas Company.

Young O'Neil is sought for questioning as to the $300,000 in Liberty bonds which represent the profits of his father in the Continental deal and which he turned back to the Prairie company on orders of his father, who is listed as a missing witness in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case.

In addition to John D. Rockefeller Jr., the committee also has issued subpoenas for a number of clerks employed in the New York branch of the Dominion Bank of Canada, in which were kept the accounts of the Continental company and its President, H. S. Osler Jr. of Toronto. Some of these clerks are expected to be here Saturday.

The committee also has subpoenaed A. W. Rice, manager of the New York Branch of the Dominion Bank of Canada and C. S. Howard, now of Toronto, but formerly connected with the New York agency of the Dominion Bank.

Chairman Nye said photostatic copies of the ledger sheets of the Dominion Bank branch had been obtained.

Hear Stewart Will Resign.

Colonel Robert W. Stewart has resigned or will soon resign as Chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana following the publication of correspondence containing an implied criticism by John D. Rockefeller Jr. of his conduct as a witness before the Senate Committee on Public Lands and Surveys in its investigation of the Continental Trading Company transactions, according to information reaching Wall Street yesterday.

Colonel Stewart called upon Mr. Rockefeller at the latter's offices, 26 Broadway, on Monday it was learned yesterday. This was after the Senate committee had adjourned. He was with Mr. Rockefeller for some time and at the conclusion of the conference left for Chicago, where he conferred with his Board of Directors on Wednesday.

Mr. Rockefeller, who speaks for the most influential stockholding groups in the Standard of Indiana, told Colonel Stewart here that he was disappointed that he did not answer fully the Senate committee's questions. Colonel Stewart, as the correspondence made public by Mr. Rockefeller yesterday reveals, defended his attitude and said he would not alter it.

An acquaintance who met Colonel Stewart in an elevator in the Standard Oil Building as he was emerging from his conference with Mr. Rockefeller, made a facetious reference to what had happened at the Senate committee hearing. "Were death see any wound stripes on you," the Standard of Indiana Chairman was quoted as replying.

Strained Relations Indicated.

One sentence in Mr. Rockefeller's telegram to Senator Walsh, reporting the circumstances of his conference with Colonel Stewart, was cited yesterday as indicating strained relations existing between Mr. Rockefeller and Colonel Stewart. Mr. Rockefeller's utterances are ordinarily so temperate that it was suggested that this sentence had a good deal of significance.

Referring to Colonel Stewart's statement that he did not wish to embarrass in any way the stockholders of his company and that they could have his resignation whenever they desired it, Mr. Rockefeller said:

"This is a question which the stockholders should, of course, and will naturally consider as the matter develops."

According to reports received here, but which could not be confirmed officially, Colonel Stewart either offered his resignation to his board on Wednesday or announced his readiness to tender it. The directors, it was said here, rejected the suggestion.

Mr. Rockefeller is not a director of the Standard of Indiana, but the Rockefeller Foundation and the University of Chicago, with which he is understood to have great influence, are regarded as the two most powerful stock holding groups. The directors of the company, besides Colonel Stewart, are E. G. Seubert, President; W. M. Burton, Beaumont Parks, Allen Jackson, Robert H. McElroy, Edward J. Bullock, John D. Clark, Amos Ball and R. E. Humphreys. Mr. Parks, Mr. Jackson, Mr. McElroy and Mr. Bullock are Vice Presidents.

The stockholding interests of the Rockefeller family and Rockefeller philanthropies in the Standard of Indiana has been estimated at about 25 per cent. There is no recent official statement showing their exact holdings, in all probability, it was said in Wall Street yesterday, the Rockefeller interest is larger than that. It is generally believed that it is sufficient to carry working control if not actual control.

WOULD GIVE WIDOWS MORE OF ESTATES

Commission Recommends Reform of Inheritance Laws to Legislature at Albany.

PRESENT METHODS 'UNJUST'

Bill With Report Increases Dower Rights and Grants Other Benefits to Widows.

WOULD UNIFY DISTRIBUTION

Personalty and Realty Put on the Same Plane in Law to Meet Modern Conditions.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 9.—A general revision of the laws affecting decedent estates and inheritance, together with a bill to put many of the proposed changes into effect, was recommended to the Legislature today by the commission to investigate defects in the laws of estates.

In a series of nine recommendations the commission urged that the statutes be amended to simplify the handling of estates and divide them more justly.

One of the proposed changes would give widows substantial increases in dower rights and the privilege of taking from the estates of husbands who have disinherited them amounts equivalent to what they would have received if there had been no will.

The report was signed by all fifteen members of the commission, including eight legislators, four surrogates and three lawyers. The Chairman was Surrogate James A. Foley of New York and the Vice Chairman Assemblyman Edmund B. Jenks of Broome. The other members were Senators Homer E. A. Dick, George R. Fearon, Leonard R. Lipowicz and Thomas I. Sheridan, Assemblymen Herbert B. Shonk, Horace M. Stone and Maurice Bloch, Surrogates George A. Wingate of Brooklyn, George A. Slater of Westchester and Lewis B. Hart of Erie, and Henry R. Chittick, John G. Saxe and Cornelius W. McDougald. Dean Cornelius C. Alden of the Buffalo Law School was counsel.

Power to Override a Will.

Declaring for the right of a widow to override a will disinheriting her, the report said:

"There is a glaring inconsistency in our law, which compels a man to support his wife during her lifetime and permits him to leave her practically penniless at his death. The only limitation to this right is contained in Section 17, Decedent Estate law, which prohibits the testator from bequeathing more than one-half of his estate to charitable corporations or purposes in case the decedent leaves husband or wife, child or parent.

"But the inconsistency of the statute is that the alleged principle of public policy does not protect those whom it is designed to protect. A man leaving a wife or children or parent may give one-half of his estate to charity and the other half to a stranger, entirely ignoring those dependent upon him.

"Under our humanitarian laws he may be compelled during his life by criminal proceedings or civil process to contribute to the support of his wife of minor children. Death frees his property from this liability and he may do whatever he pleases by a valid will."

As a remedy, the commission proposed that the widow be allowed to take up to $25,000 outright of whatever share she would have received if there had been no will, and the whole share outright unless the husband had willed that she get only the income of a trust fund created from that part of her share in excess of $25,000.

Increases of Dower Rights.

In recommending increases of dower rights, the report declared that they now were "an illusion and deception." The law at present gives a widow the income of a third of the realty of a deceased husband, but complications, including the practice of acquiring real estate in the name of a corporation, defeat the law.

The commission would change this situation, first by effecting one uniform system of distribution of both real and personal property and then by giving the widow the following in cases where there is no will: one-half the real estate outright where there is one child, one-third where there is more and all of it when the relatives are remote. Of the personal property she would receive $10,000 and half the excess where there are no children, but other near relatives exist, and a correspondingly increased proportion in other cases.

Another proposal would continue to allow one-half of an estate to be bequeathed to charity, but would prohibit an allowance of interest to the charity where actual payment of the legacy is postponed.

Summary of Proposed Changes.

The commission summarized its recommendations as follows:

1. The removal of the distinction, so far as possible, between real estate and personal property in their treatment as assets of an estate.

2. In cases where a man or woman dies without a will, the abolition of the present difference between the inheritance of realty and the distribution of personal property; in place of two separate systems of descent and distribution, the establishment of one rule of succession and of one class of distributees entitled to take both kinds of property; the increase of the share of the surviving wife or husband in an estate and the concentration of the vesting of the estate in the nearer and more dependent relatives.

3. The removal of the restraints on the conveyance of real estate, with a view of giving realty, as nearly as possible, the liquidity and ease of disposition now characteristic of personal property.

Authority Over Real Estate.

5. The grant of a statutory power of sale over real estate to an executor and to a trustee, as well as the power to mortgage and to lease, but in all instances to be exercised only upon the approval of the Surrogate. Necessarily, this power is not to be exercised in estates where it has been prohibited by the testator in his will.

6. The additional grant of power to an administrator of the management of realty, with a power of sale, mortgage or lease for estate purposes, subject to the control of the Surrogate.

7. The simplification of the procedure for the sale of real estate by an executor, administrator or trustee in order to make more economical and expeditious a lease, mortgage or sale for the purposes of distribution, payment of debts and other proper expenses.

8. The protection of the widow or surviving husband against disinheritance by an unjust testator by the grant of a right of election to take a specific part of the estate against the will. This right is to correct the almost entire absence of protection for the widow under the present law.

9. To meet modern economic conditions, an increase of the relatively small property and money exemptions granted by Section 206 of the Surrogate's Court act to a surviving wife or husband or the infant children.

The bill effecting the changes was introduced by Senator Dick and Assemblyman Jenks.

HARRIS WILL NAMES 100 NEEDIEST CASES

$3,000 ANNUITY TO WIDOW

Specific Bequests Total $47,000—Theodore Frelinghuysen Left Estate to Family.

The Hundred Neediest Cases Fund of THE NEW YORK TIMES will receive each year in the future the income from two-thirds of the residue of the estate of Samuel Harris, a retired dealer in men's clothing, after specific legacies of $47,000 have been paid, and a sum sufficient to yield an annuity of $3,000 for his widow has been set aside. Mr. Harris, who died on Dec. 31, 1927, wrote in his will, offered yesterday for probate, that he wished to give THE TIMES this money "for the alleviation of poverty and suffering." The size of the estate could not be determined yesterday.

Mr. Harris gave the other one-third of the residue to the Hebrew Charity Association of Wilmington, Del., "where," he wrote, "a great part of my life has formerly been delightfully lived." The gift to the Charity Association is in memory of the testator's father, Aaron Harris, while the donation to The Hundred Neediest Cases Fund of THE TIMES was given in memory of several of his relatives.

Besides the annuity of $3,000, which is to go to Mrs. Helen Harris of 240 West 142d Street for life, there were outright bequests of $10,000 to Fannie Gluckman of Wilmington, Del., a sister; $5,000 each to seven nieces and nephews, and $1,000 each to another niece and a half-sister. Most of these persons live in Wilmington, Del., and Philadelphia, Pa.

Frelinghuysen Estate to Family.

The will of Theodore Frelinghuysen, member of an old New Jersey family and a cousin of former United States Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, was filed for probate yesterday in the Surrogate's Court, disposing of what the attorneys filing the will called a "moderate estate." Mr. Frelinghuysen, who died Jan. 30 at the age of 67, made his widow and son his principal beneficiaries, and disposed of $122,500 and certain real estate in Tuxedo Park in specific bequests. Mr. Frelinghuysen retired from many years work with the Coats Thread Company in 1910. His first wife was Miss Alice D. Coats.

His widow, the former Miss Lily Brush, daughter of a former Mayor of Detroit, receives the income for life from one-half of her husband's residuary estate, and gets certain real estate at Tuxedo Park and his personal effects. Upon Mrs. Frelinghuysen's death the principal of her trust goes to the son, Theodore Frelinghuysen, who is now in Palm Beach with his mother, and who gets the income from the other half of the residue during his life. In addition Mr. Frelinghuysen receives $100,000 outright.

Anthony Will Contest Settled.

Surrogate Foley dismissed objections to the will of Mrs. Ella L. Anthony, Secretary of the Anthony Company of Long Island City, manufacturers of oil furnaces, and ordered it admitted to probate yesterday when counsel for Miss Louise Brooks Gomez, a niece, who sought to break the will, and attorneys for the estate announced that a settlement out of court had been reached. Trial of Miss Gomez's suit was to have begun before a jury yesterday morning. Mrs. Anthony, who died Oct. 31, 1927, bequeathed only $1,000 and certain jewelry to her niece from an estate said to be more than $250,000, the bulk of which went to friends.

Mrs. Anthony's will gave two-thirds of her residuary estate jointly to Mr. and Mrs. Alan Jefferson of 57 West Fifty-seventh Street, who, she wrote, had been most kind to her since her husband's death some years before. The Jeffersons also receive substantial cash bequests. The other third of the residue went to another friend, Mrs. Florence E. Crane of 535 West 141st Street.

Miss Gomez accused Mr. Jefferson, or others unknown to her working in concert with him, of practicing fraud and undue influence upon Mrs. Anthony when the will was drawn. She also alleged that her aunt was of unsound mind when the will was drawn up.

An appraisal of the estate of Dr. Lewis D. Mason, who died June 11, 1927, at 171 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn, filed yesterday in Kings County Surrogate's Court by the State Tax Department, gives the net amount at $904,976, of which public institutions and charities will get more than $200,000. Dr. Mason, son of one of the founders of the Long Island College Hospital, included in his long professional work a study of the effects of the liquor and drug habits, for which he provided treatment in thousands of cases.

His will provides bequests of $5,000 each to the Native Races Anti-Liquor Traffic Committee, the Scientific Temperance Federation, Boston; the National Temperance Society, the Board of Temperance of the Presbyterian Church and the New York Academy of Medicine. Similar amounts go to missions, colleges and schools, and smaller bequests to numerous charities, hospitals and other institutions. To the Physicians' Home, 901 Lexington Avenue, he gave his Brooklyn home, valued at $85,000.

The larger bequests to relatives go to nieces and nephews, including Katherine M. M. Pott, 152 East Thirty-fifth Street, $28,433; Theodora De Witt Laselle, 17 Putnam Avenue, $76,698; Janet De Witt Mason, $94,297; Theodore E. Blake, Greenwich, Conn., $56,923; Edward M. Blake, 2 Beach Avenue, Flushing, L. I., $73,425; Katherine V. V. D. Blake, Greenwich, $62,702, and Alfred De Witt Blake, 222 Garfield Place, $99,314.

THOSE OF FARMERS LAST

Dr. Huntington Gives Statistics at Luncheon of a Committee of American Eugenics Society.

Harvard's and Yale's most representative students and successful graduates are the sons of missionaries, with those of professors a close second, and the children of ministers ranking third. Farmers' sons were rated at the bottom, with those of business men near the foot. Dr. Ellsworth Huntington, research associate of the department of geography at Yale, made these statements yesterday at the annual luncheon of the Committee on Cooperation with Clergymen of the American Eugenics Society in the Fraternity Clubs Building, Thirty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue. His subject was "Whence Will Come the Children to Guarantee the Future?"

Dr. Huntington cited these findings as examples of the rather subconscious natural selection that had mated the fathers and mothers of the high-ranking students. His contention was that if similar selection was exercised consciously, the inborn qualities of future generations, physically and mentally, would be improved.

Missionaries, both men and women, must have good health, a spirit of adventure, energy, religion and moral fervor, said Dr. Huntington in explaining the reasons for the qualities ascribed to their descendants. Likewise, professors are selected on the basis of intellectual ability and rigid moral code, he said.

"I may be prejudiced," said Dr. Huntington, "but I am inclined to think that ministers get better wives than they deserve."

The nature of a preacher's calling brings him into contact with women of high types, the speaker said, and he logically chooses his wife from among them. Statistics were given by Dr. Huntington to show that among persons listed in "Who's Who in America" those who indicated a religious preference where more likely to survive because most of them were married and had children."

Dr. Huntington declared the birth rate among doctors, lawyers and professors was lower than among miners, farmers and other classes, but that in the professional groups those having religious preferences have had more children than persons with no particular religious inclination.

Heredity should not be overemphasized in discussing eugenics, according to Dr. Huntington, who characterized that tendency as "one of the sins of this movement." He stressed the importance of family training, declaring that in "families where the heredity is good, the training is good."

In a report on "The Sources of Our Ministers" Henry S. Huntington, Chairman of the Committee on Cooperation and a brother of Dr. Huntington, gave statistics to show that clergymen about 1870 contributed in proportion to their numbers about 2,400 times as many eminent persons as did unskilled laborers, thirty-five times as many as did farmers, four times as many as business men and more than twice as many as the average of other professional men. The clergymen of that time, he said, were of the period nearest the birth of persons named in the "Who's Who In America" of 1922-23.

"I do not think we need to speak of eugenics as a new religion," said Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, "but as a highest complement to old religion. If religion is to accomplish anything worthy in the end, it seems to me it must absorb some of this new science."

Others who spoke were Albert E. Wiggam of the editorial staff of The American Magazine and the Rev. Guy E. Shipler, editor of The Churchman.

Firm they stand in beauty—
—down they step in price

DOWN, down, have plunged the prices of Ovington's lamps. Down by at least 10% and often as much as 33⅓%. But only the prices have fallen from grace—the beauty and charm of the lamps has never, never faltered.

13 TIMES
WE TEST SOCONY GASOLINE AND MOTOR OIL

WE could tell you a great many technical details about Socony Gasoline and Motor Oil. They would not interest you.

The important facts are these:

A product is just as good as, and no better than, the Company that makes it.

Our Company has been refining oil for fifty-four years. We produce our own crude. We test our product 13 times between the time when it comes out of the ground and the time when it is put into your car.

Almost every invention for improving gasoline and oil is offered to us first. And whenever it is possible to make Socony Gasoline and Motor Oil better, they will be made better.

Meanwhile we know that you will prolong the life of your car if you standardize on Socony.

Do You Know the Socony Touring Service?

WHEN you are going somewhere, there is always the question of what road to take. That is exactly what the Socony Touring Service can tell you. They know road conditions and detours. And they know the best roads.

The U.S. Department of Commerce confirms Atlanta's Place as DISTRIBUTION CITY

FOR years business men have looked to Atlanta as the one strategic center from which to serve more economically the rich new market of the South. Now comes the Domestic Commerce Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce and dispassionately surveys this swiftly growing market. Emerging from the facts, gathered over many months of intensive study, is overwhelming evidence of Atlanta's importance in the plans of every business that pretends to thorough coverage of all its active markets.

More than 900 of America's outstanding concerns, realizing that the South is a tremendous, rich and permanent market for merchandise of all kinds, have studied the field and have selected Distribution City because from here they can best serve their Southern trade.

Sales offices here bring bigger volume, because men and merchandise may be more efficiently routed over the territory. Southern merchants, buying hand to mouth as elsewhere, have learned to look to Atlanta branches for the service to which they are entitled.

Branch factories spring from sales experience in the territory. Obviously the market is here. Obviously goods made here under the economies of efficient Southern labor, low taxes, plentiful and cheap raw materials, low-cost power, will have a dual "edge" on goods long-hauled from congested, high-cost centers, and these branch factories grow, and prosper.

Thus Atlanta has become one of the most important cities in America to those who must pay dividends. And Atlanta is ready to show you why it is important to your business. Without cost or obligation, and in the strictest confidence, the Atlanta Industrial Bureau will make a special survey of this region from your standpoint. Item by item, the Bureau will show you how you can save money on operation and make money on sales. A brief note from you will bring you this information promptly.

Write INDUSTRIAL BUREAU
201 Chamber of Commerce

"The Southeastern trade area, as considered in this survey (embracing the Carolinas, eastern Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida), . . . represents the territory covered by 50 per cent or more of 86 selected national concerns maintaining regional headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., . . . Atlanta is generally recognized as the principal headquarters city of this region, being the seat of a large part of the regional administrative machinery of concerns marketing their services and commodities in the territory. While the total number of such concerns* exceeds the number for which data were made available in the definition of the territory, those considered constitute a varied and important representation. . . ."

"The principal reason given by these concerns for the choice of headquarters was Atlanta's position as a radiating point for all the railroads traversing this region. . . . Overnight passenger and mail service permits ready travel and communication to any point in Tennessee, Mississippi, southeastern Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, western North Carolina, and northern Florida. This, it is said, makes management and supervision easy and enables ready contacts with customer and sales force. The large number of regional headquarters already long established in Atlanta and the city's position in respect to finance and insurance have a tendency to draw other similar organizations. Most of the commercial concerns reported actual handling and distribution of their merchandise, the principal exceptions being in the case of heavy machinery and similar items. The transportation and express companies reported that Atlanta is outstanding in the amount of merchandise received by freight and redistributed by parcel post, express or fast freight. . . ."

Discussing the Southeast as a whole the Survey points out that manufactured products have more than trebled in the twelve years from 1914 to 1925. While the entire U. S. industrial development was 158.6%, the Southeast's industry increased 202.9%. During the two years from 1923 to 1925, while the industry of the whole U.S. advanced 4.1%, the South's development was 9.6%. In discussing this growth, the Department of Commerce authorities point out that standards of living have advanced with the growth of industry. It is also shown that agriculture has developed during this period, and the combination of additional opportunities for income has increased the buying power of the people, making the Southeast an increasingly desirable market for goods of all kinds.

Copies of this survey are to be had from the various district offices of the Department of Commerce, and executives who will write on their letterheads may secure them from the Atlanta Industrial Bureau, without charge.

MARGARET D. KAHN WEDS J. B. RYAN JR.

Quiet Marriage in Banker's Home Owing to Illness of Bridegroom's Mother.

REV. F. P. DUFFY OFFICIATES

Simplicity marked the marriage of Miss Margaret Dorothy Kahn, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, to John Barry Ryan Jr., a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barry Ryan of this city, yesterday afternoon at the home of her parents, 1,100 Fifth Avenue. It was a small and quiet wedding owing to the serious illness of the bridegroom's mother, who only a few days ago left the hospital for her home. Consequently invitations were restricted to relatives and a few close friends.

The house, of Italian architecture, filled with art treasures, especially a notable collection of Italian primitives, needed very little in the way of floral decorations. There was, however, a simple arrangement of palms, cybotium ferns, Easter lilies and other Spring flowers. The ceremony took place in the ballroom which extends across the rear of the house on the second floor. An improvised altar was erected at one end of the room against a background of greens and lilies. The Rev. Francis P. Duffy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross in West Forty-second Street, performed the ceremony.

Father Escorts the Bride.

The bride was escorted by her father to the temporary altar, where she was joined by the bridegroom and his brother, Basil A. Ryan, who was best man. Her gown of soft ivory colored satin was made on simple lines and was embellished with old rose point lace. Her veil, also of old rose point lace, fell in graceful folds over her long court train of satin. The lace had been worn by the bride's mother at her marriage and also by her sister, the former Miss Maud Kahn, when she was married to Major John Charles Oakes Marriott of England in St. John's Church, Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., in June, 1920. The bride dispensed with attendants and there were no ushers. There was orchestral music during the ceremony and afterward.

There was no general reception, the bride and bridegroom received the congratulations and good wishes of their relatives and friends present immediately after the ceremony. Later tea was served. A feature of this was a huge Blanche bride's cake, four feet high and two feet in diameter. It was built to three graduating tiers, the first and second being separated by Corinthian columns of spun sugar that formed a temple of music in which were a musical troupe of cupids. This was in deference to the interest of the bride's father in music. Around the base of the second tier, which formed the ceiling of the temple, were suspended miniature wedding bells and orange blossoms. Three dancing cupids holding aloft a filigreed vase filled with orange blossoms surmounted the top. The whole cake was artistically decorated, spun sugar lilies of the valley and their leaves in natural color garlanding the base.

Sail Tomorrow for France.

Mr. Ryan and his bride will sail tomorrow on the Leviathan for the South of France and Northern Africa. They will be away several months and on their return will live in Long Island.

The bride's father is a member of the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. He is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Opera House, and a patron of the arts. She is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bernhard Kahn of Mannheim, Germany. On the maternal side she is a granddaughter of the late Abraham Woiff, one of the great bankers of New York in his day.

Mr. Ryan is one of the many grandchildren of Thomas Fortune Ryan, financier, and his first wife, the former Miss Ida M. Barry of Baltimore, who died in 1917. He is a member of the reportorial staff of The Newark Ledger, and it is understood that he will return to his duties there on his return from his wedding trip. Mr. Ryan and his bride have been friends since childhood, when their parents had Summer homes in Morristown, N. J. Their engagement was announced on Jan. 17.

LADY MARY CRICHTON WED; KING A GUEST

By Wireless to The New York Times.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Women waited today from dawn in the vicinity of the Church of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields to see the coming and going of the bridal couple and the guests at the wedding of Lady Mary Kathleen Crichton and the Marquis of Hamilton, which was attended by the King. It would have been attended also by the Queen, who is the bride's godmother, had it not been for a cold which kept her from Tuesday's opening of Parliament, but she went to the reception later at the bride's home.

Policemen, mounted and on foot, had to clear the steps of the church of the surging crowd, which craned necks to see the bride enter in her wedding gown of Brussels lace, attended by bridesmaids in yellow chiffon frocks with periwinkle blue ribbon sashes.

CLUB OF SOCIETY FOLK HAS SEMI-CENTENNIAL

F. Delano Weekes Host to the Thursday Evening Club at Anniversary.

The Thursday Evening Club, founded by persons well known in literary, scientific and society circles, observed its semi-centennial last night at the home of Frederic Delano Weekes, 10 Washington Square North, who for several years was Secretary and Treasurer.

The club met for the first time on Feb. 28, 1878, at the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Jay, 22 Washington Square North. Last night's meeting was held not far from the house where the first meeting took place. As the rules preclude gatherings during the Lenten season, it was not possible to have the meeting held on the actual date of the anniversary.

The program last night included introductory remarks on the history of the club by William Jay Schieffelin, a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Jay. Next came lantern portraits of former Presidents and members. Then came a short comedy, written and performed by members of the club. Finally, in keeping with the custom of the distant period when the club was formed, there was danced a cotillion, which was led by Mr. Weekes and for which there were favors. Supper followed.

The officers of the club are Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, President; Mrs. Paul Tuckerman, Vice President, and Hamilton Hill Durand, Secretary and Treasurer.

Among the active members are Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. de Forest, Mrs. Elihu Chauncey, Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler N. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. A. Murray Young, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Tams, Charles E. Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Philip J. Roosevelt, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William S. Rainsorfd, Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Polk, Bishop and Mrs. William T. Manning, Mrs. Pierre Mali, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Aldrich, Mrs. Shepard Fabbri and Richard Mortimer.

Others are Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate Jr., Mrs. Arthur W. Swann, Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Charles F. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. J. Nelson Borland, Miss Mabel Choate, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Knox Bell, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hermann Kinnicutt, Mr. and Mrs. L. Cass Ledyard, Mrs. Gustav E. Kissel, Mr. and Mrs. W. Barclay Parsons, Henry G. Barbey, E. de Peyster Livingston, Richard Welling, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Townsend, Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. R. Thornton Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Woods and E. Coster Wilmerding.

Musicale for Sir Thomas Lipton.

Mme. Bouvet de Lozier gave a musicale last night at her home, 44 West Seventy-seventh Street, for Sir Thomas Lipton. The artists were Miss Madeleine Monnier, 'cellist; Pavel Ludikar, basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Miss Blanche Mauclair.

The guests included Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, former Minister to Sweden, and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, Mr. and Mrs. John Woodruff, Miss Eugenie Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Turner, Maurice Leon, Parker Sloane, Mrs. Cosmo Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Voss, Miss Beverly de Lozier, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Taylor and Major William Bailey.

A. H. Wenzells Have a Second Son.

A second son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Adolphe H. Wenzell of 114 East Ninetieth Street on Tuesday at Miss Lippincott's Sanitarium. Mrs. Wenzell before her marriage was Miss Zillah Townsend Thompson, daughter of Mrs. George Thompson of 162 East Sixty-first Street. The child will be called Sidney Eugene after his paternal grandfather.

SEE RADIO PATENTS AS BASIS OF 'TRUST'

Witnesses at Senate Hearing Attack R. C. A. Control of Them as Club Over Independents.

DE FOREST RECEIVER HEARD

That Concern Forced Out of Business, He Charges—General Electric Criticized at House Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Allegations that a "radio trust" was endeavoring to force independent competitors out of business or absorb them were made by witnesses for the Radio Protective Association of Chicago at a hearing by the Senate Patents Committee today on the Dill bill for forfeiture of patent rights in case of conviction under the anti-trust laws.

The witnesses, led by Ernest Reichman, counsel for the association, argued chiefly against the patent grouping by the Radio Corporation of America, which they said amounted to a virtual monopoly, particularly regarding the vacuum tube trade.

Manton Davis, general counsel for the Radio Corporation of America, outlined the position his concern would take when the hearings are resumed on Feb. 20.

"The criticized agreements," he said, "were created by independent groups. There was no possibility of a radio industry until cross-licensing patents permitted lawful making of radio apparatus. Far from these devices restraining trade, they took the restraints off that made it possible."

Tells of De Forest Flight.

Arthur D. Lord, receiver for the De Forest Radio Company, said lawsuits, directed mainly against this company, had cost it $342,000 to protect its rights. He said the patents of the Radio Corporation were mostly "on refinements" and "are being used as a bludgeon over the independents."

No fundamental patents are held by the Radio Corporation, he testified, that have to do with the audion tube, which, he said, was invented in 1906 by Lee De Forest.

"There is no patent in existence today on the tube itself," he said. "All have run out. The great array of refinements the Radio Corporation of America displays are simply refinements on construction."

Pressure on the De Forest company, Mr. Lord asserted, forced it to cease operations. He charged the Radio Corporation with putting spies in the De Forest plant. His argument was directed principally against the patent license agreements whereby manufacturers licensed to use Radio Corporation patents must equip their receiving sets with tubes distributed by that concern. He said that 95 per cent. of the sets sold today were so limited.

The De Forest Company's bona fide distributors had dwindled from 166 a year ago to only twelve on Feb. 1 last, and relief had to be sought in the courts, Mr. Lord said. On Feb. 6, he said, Judge Hugh M. Morris, in United States District Court at Wilmington, directed a permanent injunction against the enforcement of "Clause 9" of its patent license agreements by the Radio Corporation. This clause related specifically to the equipment of licensed radio sets with particular kinds of tubes.

Company's Trade Dwindled.

George M. Salkeld, representing the Televocal Company of New York and the Independent Tube Company, said the latter concern had sold its entire output of tubes up to the time of the Chicago Radio Show. It had a plant operating with 100 employes, he said. When the Radio Corporation of America entered into its patent license agreements with twenty-five independent manufacturers, who agreed to Clause 9, the business was cut down to a fraction of its former size, he said.

Edward E. Nockels, Secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor and general manager of station WCFL, Chicago, told the committee that concentration of patents "defeated the constitutional purpose of the patent laws."

Fred S. Armstrong, President of the Mellotron Tube Corporation of Chicago and Treasurer of the Radio Protective Association, said that enforcement of the "illegal tube clause" had compelled his company to stop operations. As a former employe of the General Electric Company, he said that company had built up a "paper patent situation" to use as a club over independent manufacturers.

Oswald F. Schuette of Chicago, Executive Secretary of the Radio Protective Association, appeared today before the House Merchant Marine Committee on the White Radio Commission bill.

"Congress thinks that it controls the air and that, through the Federal Radio Commission, it can allocate wave lengths and determine who shall use them," he said. "But before the licensees of these wave lengths can operate on the channels that you give them, they must first go to the radio trust for a license to use them."

MUSIC CRITIC WINS A NEW FORD SEDAN

William J. Henderson's Name on Lucky Card, 1 of 40,000 Signed by Visitors to Exhibition.

William J. Henderson, music critic of The Sun, won the Ford Tudor sedan of the new Model A type yesterday which was offered as a prize to the visitors attending the recent Ford Industrial Exposition. Every visitor to the industrial show in the Ford motor building at Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street, which was held simultaneously with the larger Ford exhibition in Madison Square Garden, had the opportunity of signing a card which was deposited in a barrel.

When the drawing was held yesterday in the Ford building to select the winner, Gaston Plantiff, Eastern representative of the Ford Company, announced that more than 40,000 cards had been signed. They were emptied into a revolving barrel manipulated by a committee of automobile editors from the New York and Brooklyn newspapers. Twenty cards were then drawn out, and from these Mr. Plantiff picked the one designating the winner. It was the one signed by Mr. Henderson.

Incidentally Mr. Ford announced that actual delivery of the new sedan models would probably start sortedly in March. He said that during the week of the double Ford industrial exhibitions actual count showed that nearly 1,350,000 persons visited them.

110 PUBLIC SCHOOLS TO GET RADIO MUSIC

Damrosch's First Experimental Concert to Be Broadcast Here This Morning.

OTHER CITIES TO LISTEN TOO

Special radio sets and loud-speakers in more than 100 public schools in Greater New York and 200 schools in other cities will be prepared at 10 o'clock this morning to intercept Walter Damrosch's lecture and the music of the New York Symphony Orchestra broadcast by WJZ and twenty stations. It will be the first experimental program to be presented direct to children in elementary schools to supplement their regular musical education and to further an appreciation of music.

The program this morning, while designed primarily for children between the ages of 8 and 14 years, will not be received alone in the elementary grades, since many junior and senior high school auditoriums in New York have been equipped with apparatus for their students, according to George H. Gartlan, Director of Music of the Public Schools of Greater New York.

"I believe this movement to be one of the strongest influences in the socializing of education," said Mr. Gartlan. "By that I mean that the child is taken into an entirely different atmosphere than that created by textbooks. There are 110 schools in the Greater New York area, or forty-two elementary schools, thirty senior high and thirty-eight junior high schools which either have been equipped for this occasion or will utilize sets and speakers already possessed. The auditoriums will accommodate more than 100,000 children.

"I hope the movement will be extended throughout the country, not only for music, but for other subjects as well. History, drama and many other subjects might be wonderfully enhanced by having great exponents of those subjects speak to students regularly over a large chain of stations. If the program was shifted to the afternoon the scope of the chain might be extended throughout the entire country."

The State Board of Education of Connecticut has asked for comments from the authorities of all schools and several hundred individuals to be forwarded after the broadcast. Many schools in Chicago have been equipped. Other cities that have reported installations for the occasion are Baltimore, Des Moines and Davenport, Iowa; Nashville, Tenn.; Worcester, Fitchburg and eighteen other cities of Massachusetts; St. Louis, Mo., and Rock Island, Ill.

Linked with WJZ will be WTIC, WTAG, WCSH, WRC, KSD, WCCO, WOC, WHO, WOW, WDAF, WHAS, WSM, WBAL, WHAM, KDKA, WLW, WJR, KYW, WMC and WFI.

"Benefits of Cross Licensing in the Radio Industry" will be discussed by C. C. Hanch at a luncheon meeting of the Radio Manufacturers' Association on Feb. 16 at 12:30 P. M. in the Hotel Bismarck, Chicago.

The third anniversary of station WTIC of the Travelers' Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn., will be celebrated tonight with a special musical program broadcast at 8 and 9 o'clock.

Speeches at an Army-Navy Club luncheon in the Hotel Astor tomorrow afternoon, at which Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett and Major General Reason M. Ely will be chief guests, are scheduled for broadcast at 2 o'clock over WEAF and a network. Among the speakers will be Admiral Plunkett and General Ely.

ASSEMBLY POSTPONES WALLACE AUTO BILL

Proposal to Relieve Traffic Law Violators of Court Appearance Encounters Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 9.—A bill under which motorists charged with violating traffic laws would not have to appear in court but could be represented by counsel or members of their family was the subject of lively debate in the Assembly today.

The measure, sponsored by Assemblyman Wallace, Republican, of Nassau, was scheduled to be advanced to the order of final passage, but after it had been vigorously attacked Speaker McGinnies ordered that it be laid over until next week for further consideration.

In defending the measure, Assemblyman Wallace pointed out that it applied only to persons charged with misdemeanors.

Assemblyman Cuvillier, Democrat, of New York City, in attacking the bill, charged that it would result in more traffic violations and, indirectly, be the means of causing more deaths by careless drivers.

Under a bill introduced today by Senator O'Brien, Democrat, of New York, all deputies of the New York City Clerk and two regular designated clerks in his office would be permitted to perform marriage ceremonies.

Horse racing would be conducted much along the same lines as the New York stock market, under a bill which is to be introduced next week by Assemblyman Cuvillier. The bill will permit the chartering of companies under the Stock Corporation law for the purpose of breeding, buying, selling and dealing in horses.

It would permit a test of skill of horses on race tracks for which a special form of stock would be sold, and the dividends paid would be based upon the earnings of the horse, in which the share of stock would be part of the capital stock.

Willis Philosophy Books to Smith.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 9 (AP).—Smith College is to receive all of the books and manuscripts on psychology and philosophy in the library of Harry Norman Gardiner, Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Smith, who was killed by an automobile on Dec. 29. His will was filed for probate here today. His portraits of philosophers and a Spanish crucifix also are to go to the college.

ENGINEER'S CAUTION RESULTS IN HIS DEATH

Leaning Pole Kills Him as He Peers Through Fog for a Freight Wreck.

Caution exercised by David Bowen, Lackawanna Railroad engineer, was the cause of his death in a peculiar accident Wednesday midnight, according to the finding of James W. Baybury of the New Jersey Public Utilities Commission.

Piloting a South Orange accommodation train, Bowen came to a halt in the Kearny Meadows when his engine ran over a torpedo. From a brakeman he learned that two freight cars had been derailed on the Pennsylvania tracks, which run parallel at that point, but was advised that he probably could get by if he continued cautiously.

When the train reached the scene of the freight wreck passengers were jolted by the application of the emergency brakes, and the train again came to a halt. After several minutes Harry Tuttle, the fireman, climbed forward to investigate. The Lackawanna engines have separate compartments for fireman and engineer.

Tuttle found Bowen unconscious at his post. The train was rushed to Hoboken by an engineer who happened to be a passenger, but Bowen was dead when medical aid reached him. Investigation revealed that the derailed freight cars had dislodged a telegraph pole and left it leaning over the track. The pole had missed the train but caught Bowen's head as he leaned out and peered through the fog. Evidently his hand had been on the emergency brake, and the force of the blow applied the brake at the instant it killed Bowen, stopping the train and avoiding a further accident.

RADIO SERVICE PROTESTED.

British and Danish Object to French Shanghai-Manila Wireless.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 9.—Considerable interest has been aroused here by the new wireless service between Shanghai and Manila, which, it is reported, a French station is operating in cooperation with the Radio Corporation of America. The French send messages to Manila and the Radio Corporation relays them to America, reducing the rates greatly.

The Danish and British are protesting to the Nationalist Government, pointing out the treaty with Peking giving them a monopoly on telegraphic communication with China.

The Chinese, while passing on the protest to the French authorities, are inclined not to push the matter in view of Nanking's oft-repeated policy that it is not bound by Peking's compacts. In the meantime the French organization offers an 8-cent (Mex.) press rate to Manila and a 40-cent (Mex.) commercial, which is a great reduction.

AMERICANS IN TIE WITH DETROIT SIX

Rough Battle on Garden Rink Ends With Score Deadlocked at 2-2.

HIMES EVENS THE COUNT

Tallies in Second Period After Shot by Foyston Puts Cougars Ahead in First.

By SEABURY LAWRENCE.

In a game that sparkled with fast play, not to mention heavy checking, but marred somewhat by an oversupply of whistle blowing by the referees, the New York Americans and Detroit Cougars battled to an overtime tie at 2-all in Madison Square Garden last night before 4,000 fans.

The officials continuously whistled for invisible off sides and this slowed up the play at times and drew a lot of booing from the crowd. There were seventeen penalties handed out for rough play.

There also was one major which went to McKinnon of the Americans for a fracas with Foyston in the third period. The game was the second overtime tie played by these same teams at the Garden this season, the last one winding up 4-4. The Americans turned in a greatly improved brand of play, Burch, Conacher and Himes standing out conspicuously in a hard-fought game.

Forbes Thrills Crowd.

Jakie Forbes, tending goal once more for the Americans, showed his same old tendency to jump out of the net and give the customers nearheart failure. Jakie was credited with 53 stops, however, for the entire game, but did not put in as fine a performance as Holmes, in the Detroit net, who had 57 saves, many of the spectacular variety.

Traub put Detroit in front with an opening goal in the first period. Bowcher tied it for the Americans, and then Foyston put the Cougars ahead again just before the first period ended. It was nearly halfway through the second period that Normie Himes tied it again for the Americans.

Battle as they would through the third regular period and the two extra sessions of five minutes each, they could not break the deadlock, and the game ended a 2-all tie.

Burch Brilliant at Start.

Burch played brilliantly in the opening minutes and Holmes, in the Detroit net, was lucky to clear some of Billy's drives. At the other end Jakey Forbes, once more holding the fort for the Americans, did some of his familiar gymnastic stuff to fend off shots by Foyston, Aurie, Walker and Traub.

Forbes, however, is no taller than he was last season. If he had been he might have warded off a shot by Traub, which somehow bounced over Jakey's shoulder into the net. It was a long floater which Forbes stabbed at but missed, possibly being a trifle over anxious. Traub's goal was scored in 9:32.

The Americans kept stabbing through the defense and Bowcher, flaring down centre ice, finally put a bullet drive between Holmes's skates to tie the count in 16:22. This had the effect of warming up the Cougars and they went into the lead again on Foyston's goal in 17:40.

In whirling down to score Foyston left Conacher and McKinnon flat on the ice. The Americans put on a wild attack after this, but could not tie the score again and the first period ended with the count 2 to 1 in the Cougars' favor.

Aurie Goes on the Attack.

Young Larry Aurie started picking on Forbes again as the second period opened. This daring young wingman darted in close several times, but Forbes managed to save. Conacher carried down brilliantly twice, his shots missing by inches.

Bowcher of the Americans and Traub of Detroit were put off for swapping punches, and soon after they got back the Americans put on a superb play to tie the count. Conacher carried the disk down well inside the blue line, where he slipped a pass to Himes on left wing, who drilled it past Holmes. The tying goal was made in 13:06.

The game got a trifle desperate following this, and at one time the teams were down to four men each, while Conacher and Reise of the Americans and Traub and Fraser watched the sport from the penalty box. Neither team could score during the shortage, and the second period ended with the game still deadlocked at 2-all.

Both Attack Fiercely.

Himes, Burch and McKinnon combined on some fiery forays opening the third period. They were in close time after time and Holmes made some hair-raising saves to keep the net clear. Aurie was in close for Detroit and Conacher slid full length to save.

After Boucher and Noble had been benched for roughing, Lurch and Himes roused the crowd with a great attack that once more Holmes saved. Then McKinnon enlivened the fray by shooting a long left to Foyston's head and was penalized five minutes.

Cooper and Traub were also benched in the final minutes, but the Americans could not count and the game went into overtime at 2-all.

RANGERS DEADLOCK WITH OTTAWA, 0-0

Game Is Their Second This Week Ending in Scoreless Tie —Both Teams Flashy.

COOKS PLAY BRILLIANTLY

But Combination Efforts of the Brothers Fail to Pierce the Strong Ottawa Defense.

By The Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Feb. 9.—The New York Rangers and Ottawa Senators went through seventy minutes of National League hockey to a scoreless tie here tonight. It was the second scoreless game they have played this week.

Tonight it was a hard battle, with the teams putting up brilliant hockey at only separated minutes. The ten-minute overtime period sparkled as Ottawa drove hard for a victory, but they could not dent the strong Ranger defense.

The feature performance of the evening was furnished by the famed Cook brothers, who at times dazzled the crowd with their combination efforts.

Rangers Launch Drive.

The offense of the Rangers stood out in the first five minutes but it had to bow before the sterling Ottawa defense. Neighbors was in alone with only Chabot to beat, but he shot wide. Murdoch went off for hooking and the Rangers ragged the entire two minutes he was in the pen. With the return to full strength the New Yorkers again tried their short passing attack with little success.

Clancy and Kilrea both gave Chabot close calls on solo attempts. Bill Cook was chased for bumping Neighbor and when he offered argument Referee Marsh added a $10 fine. Both teams were shooting at long range as the period closed.

Bun Cook nearly caught Connell off guard with a snap shot on the initial thrust of the middle period. He repeated and then Clancy went in alone to give Chabot a hot one.

The teams finally gave the fans something to cheer about as they sped into renewed action in the last five minutes of the frame. The Cook brothers stood out for the visitors as they tossed many pucks netward after neat combinations. Captain Boucher and Clancy were strong offensively for the locals.

Clancy engineered the most threatening ruse of the evening on the opening of the final period when he split the Ranger backs only to hit the goal's cross-bar. Clancy dropped a long one at Chabot's feet and Bill Cook returned the play with a backhand shot.

Ottawa on Defensive.

Cook shook the Ottawa net man with his short drive on his brother's pass. With Bourgeault off for holding, Ottawa played a defensive game and held their net clear. The end of the third period found both teams in a scoreless deadlock and extra play was called.

Back checking viciously, the Senators held the Ranger charges around centre in the overtime play. Chabot was called on to turn back a bevy of Ottawa tries but he kept his cage clear.

The line-up:

Rangers (0).		Ottawa (0).
Chabot	Goal	Connell

U. S. BOBSLED WINS ST. MORITZ DERBY

Tampering Charged by Lambert of Belgium as Heaton of New York Wins.

SLEDS LOCKED IN SHEDS

By The Associated Press.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Feb. 9.—The United States was installed an overnight favorite in at least one event of the Winter sports Olympic program today when two American bobsleds competing in the annual St. Moritz Derby finished first and third. Forty-four representatives of twenty-two nations, all of them Olympic entries, took part in the race.

John Heaton of New York won the derby, which was held on the Olympic bobsled chute over a course five yards short of a mile. Each entrant made four trips down the winding incline. Heaton's aggregate time for the four dashes was 6 minutes 22 9-10 seconds, with a best single-trip mark of 1 minute 34 4-10 seconds.

The crack Belgian entry, Henry Lambert, finished second and William Fiske of Chicago third. Lambert had shown the way in three days of trials, but the best he could do for one trip today was 1 minute 40 seconds. The Olympic bobsled championship will be decided on Feb. 17.

Sleds Carefully Guarded.

Guarded like thoroughbreds, the sleds entered in the Olympic competition are being locked up overnight in sheds as a result of heavy betting on the international event. All the contestants are taking every precaution to prevent tampering.

After the derby today Lambert complained that some one had tampered with his sled, straining the runners and necessitating a last-minute readjustment.

Heaton had been made a heavy favorite by the gamblers' pool. The American's chances of winning brought 22,000 Swiss francs ($4,500) when the man holding his name in a pool auctioned it off to the highest bidder the other day.

"This bob is going under lock and key," Heaton said after his victory. "Any one tampering with it must pick a lock and know the combination of my safe deposit vault."

Hard Combination to Beat.

The fanciful names led one Englishman, who failed to place, to inquire how "any one was expected to beat such a diabolical combination as that."

American speed skaters, O'Neil Farrell, Eddie Murphy, Valentine Blais and Irving Jaffe, showed splendid form today in trials over the 1,500-meter course. All were close to 2:30 for the distance. The Olympic record is 2:20 4-10.

Lengthy leaps of Anders Haugen, foremost American ski jumper, who is outdistancing Olympic rivals in practice, have made him a second choice in this event. Jacob Tullin Thams of Norway so far has outclassed Haugen on form, an important factor in the judging.

U. S. EQUESTRIAN TEAM WILL ENTER OLYMPICS

Four Events Listed From Aug. 9-12—Training Has Started Already in West.

Announcement has been made that the United States will enter a team in the equestrian sports of the 1928 Olympic games at Amsterdam, Holland. These particular events will be held from Aug. 9 to 12. The nucleus of the American team already is in training at Fort Sill, Okla., and Fort Riley, Kan.

The team will be entered in the following events:

Endurance Test (schooling movements), ten minutes allowed.

Endurance Test, 22½ miles, 4 1-3 miles on roads and paths, at 9 miles per hour; 2½-mile steeplechase over obstacles, at 20 miles per hour; 9 2-5 miles on roads, at 9 miles per hour; 6 miles across country over obstacles, at 17 miles per hour; 1¼ miles on road to finish at 11½ miles per hour.

Obstacle Jumping in Olympic Stadium, 12 to 14 obstacles of every variety, heights not over 4 feet, width not more than 10 feet, speed 12 miles per hour.

Obstacle Jumping, Prix des Nations—About 16 obstacles varying in height from 4 feet 2 inches to 4 feet 9 inches, with broad obstacles up to 14 feet in width. Minimum speed 14 miles per hour.

The above events are open to amateur riders, including American Army officers, and the training, which has started already, is under the supervision of Brig. Gen. Walter C. Short, who has been selected as team manager by the American Olympic Equestrian Committee.

Amateurs provided with suitable mounts wanting to enter the tryouts for the American team should communicate with Pierre Lorillard Jr., Chairman of the committee, at Tuxedo Park, New York. These trials will be held at Fort Riley during April.

Eastern Ski Races Canceled.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Feb. 9 (AP).—The Eastern cross country ski championships, scheduled as the opening event of the Greenfield Winter carnival tomorrow, have been canceled, due to lack of snow. Unless more snow falls within the next twenty-four hours the jumping championships in both A and B classes may be abandoned.

ICE SKATING RESULTS.

Class A, One-Mile Race—Won by Paul O'Brien; Walter Rutter, second; Red Grumman, third. Time—3:21 4-5.

Class B, Quarter-Mile Women's Race—Won by Miss Eva Johnson, Miss Mildred Block, second; Miss Mabel Smith, third. Time—0:37 4-5.

Class B, Quarter-Mile Race—Won by Al Nibur; Bob Muller, second; Emilio Di Como, third. Time—0:46 3-5.

Length of Skirts Worn by Skaters Engages St. Moritz More Than Olympic Prospects

By The Associated Press.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Feb. 9.—The color and length of the skating skirts of Beatrix Loughran of the United States, Sonja Henie of Norway and Andrée Joly of France, who are favorites in the women's fancy skating Olympic events, have captured the interest of the cosmopolitan population here.

In fact they are being considered of much greater importance to the St. Moritz colony now quadrupled, than whether O'Neill Farrell of the United States, Thunberg of Finland, Larsen and Eversen of Norway can break the time of 44 seconds for the 500-meter event or whether Canada triumphs at hockey.

The petite Norwegian, Sonja Henie, with yellow skirt two inches above the knee, appeared favorite, with Miss Loughran's knee-high dark blue second and the French girl's extremely abbreviated red last.

While the women's fancy skaters perform on the ice before a gallery of a thousand spectators the lightning-like combinations of the Canadian hockey team are executed without onlookers.

To short or too long, too bright or too dull are descriptions of the countless arguments among the grand stand habitues.

The Norwegian girl finds favor because she is only 13 years old and at the Olympics in Chamonix in 1924 she finished fourth.

"I just want to be comfortable," Miss Loughran said when queried as to the length of her skirt and the chances of adding a few inches thereto.

MILLROSE A. A. ADDS $1,750 TO OLYMPICS

Donation, Made From Proceeds of Games, Raises Met. A. A. U. Fund to $25,000.

LOCKE TO BE HERE SOON

Sprint Star and Elkins to Leave Lincoln, Neb., on Sunday— Other Track News.

By BRYAN FIELD.

The Millrose Athletic Association yesterday contributed $1,750 more to the American Olympic Fund and brought the total of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. up to $25,000. The contribution was made possible through the success of the recent Millrose games and brings the total Millrose contribution to $2,000. John G. Anderson, Millrose President, made the donation in a letter to Joseph A. Reilly, President of the Metropolitan Association, and said that his club was solidly behind the Olympic Fund.

It is expected that $100,000 will be raised in the metropolitan district. There are 230 clubs in the metropolitan district, and thus far approximately one-third have made contributions. Another organization which contributed was the Madison Square Garden Club. Tex Rickard's 600 millionaires sent in $500. It is expected that the largest donation will come, as in the past, from the New York A. C.

Roland Locke and Chief Fait Elkins, famous Nebraskans, will leave Lincoln, Neb., for the East on Sunday, according to an announcement made yesterday. Locke is credited by the Amateur Athletic Union with having run 220 yards faster than any other human. Elkins won the national decathlon championship at Lincoln last Summer and set a new American record. He is an Iroquois Indian and considered one of the greatest all-round athletes since the days of Jim Thorpe, Carlisle School Indian, who won both the pentathlon and decathlon at the Olympic games in Stockholm in 1912.

Both men are anxious for places on the Olympic team. Locke will make his first New York appearance at the New York A. C. games on Feb. 20.

Elkins will make his first New York appearance at the Knights of Columbus games on Feb. 29 in the septathlon. Locke will become a member of the New York A. C. Elkins may also become a member of a metropolitan club.

New York University's great relay team, which won again at the Newark games last Thursday night, will face a severe test tomorrow night in the Knights of St. Anthony games scheduled for the 106th Infantry Armory in Brooklyn. The Violet quartet will face the New York A. C. relay team which ran the fastest mile relay turned in at the Boston A. A. games last Saturday. George Leness, national 600-yard champion and winner of the Millrose 600 and the Keith Memorial 660, will run anchor on the Winged Foot team. Phil Edwards, national junior half-mile champion, and unbeaten by anybody save Lloyd Hahn, will anchor the N. Y. U. team.

DR. PELTZER RACES IN CHICAGO TONIGHT

Clash With Dodge in 1,000-Meter Run Promises to Develop Into Grudge Affair.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—The second, and perhaps the final, appearance of Dr. Otto Peltzer, noted German runner, in indoor races in this country, developed today into a "grudge affair." Ray Dodge, who meets the doctor over a 1,000-meter distance in tomorrow night's meet of the Illinois Athletic Club, charges Dr. Peltzer elbowed him out of victory at the Millrose games in New York last week.

"There will be no bumping tomorrow night," Dr. Peltzer said today, somewhat nettled at Dodge's accusation, "unintentional or otherwise. There will be no one close enough to me to get bumped."

The doctor added an indignant denial that he had elbowed Dodge off the track at New York. A wide cinder track will be the scene of the I. A. C. events, while the Millrose races were held on an indoor board track, with which Dr. Peltzer is unfamiliar. Since his arrival from New York Dr. Peltzer has been working out daily at Northwestern University on an indoor cinder track of the same dimensions as the oval at the Chicago Riding Club.

"Any one who has ever seen me run knows that I do not follow the orthodox style," said Dr. Peltzer. "With my arms swinging sidewise in my natural style I may have bumped Dodge. I am not sure, and he accidentally fell off the track, but it was unintentional if I did. No one will get close enough tomorrow night to get bumped."

Dodge has announced this will be the final race of his career, as he expects to give up track athletics to devote his time to business.

After his workout in the Northwestern gymnasium today, the German runner expressed a desire to compete in the Olympic Games at Los Angeles in 1932. He said he would endeavor to [illegible] shape so as to win a place on the German team at that competition.

N. Y. A. C. CAPTURES SABRE TEAM TITLE

Leads a Field of Six in Competition for the National Senior Championship.

CONQUERS SALTUS, 5 TO 2

Then Triumphs Over Washington Square Fencers, 5 to 1—Nunes Tallies Five Points.

The New York Athletic Club won the national senior sabre fencing team championship last night at its own clubhouse by finishing first in a field of six teams. The J. Sanford Saltus Club and the Washington Square Fencers reached the final round together with the N. Y. A. C. but were eliminated in decisive fashion in the final round-robin matches.

Leo Nunes garnered most of the Winged Foot points in the final. The N. Y. A. C. defeated the Saltus team 5 to 2, Nunes accounting for three of the victor's points. Against the Washington Square Fencers the New York A. C. combination triumphed, 5 to 1, Nunes scoring two of the points. Nikolas Muray scored two against the Saltus team and one against the Washington Square Fencers. The third member of the team, Dr. J. E. Gigmoux, tallied twice against the Washington Square Fencers.

The J. Sanford Saltus team was composed of Warren Dow, Herbert Twyeffort and K. Inukai and the Washington Square Fencers of Albert Strauss, E. J. Guggenheim and Peer Miller.

The three other teams in the competition were New York University, which was eliminated by J. Sanford Saltus, 5 to 1; Columbia University, which was eliminated by the Washington Square Fencers, 5 to 0, and the Fencers Club, which was eliminated by the N. Y. A. C., 5 to 1.

WORLD'S SWIM MARK SMASHED BY LAUFER

Clips 150-Yard Back Stroke Record—Illinois Women's A. C. Team Sets Mark.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 (AP).—Walter Laufer, former Cincinnatian, now competing for the Lake Shore Athletic Club of Chicago, broke the world's record for the 150-yard backstroke swim tonight in a Central A. A. U. meet here in the Lake Shore A. C. pool. His time of 1 minute 40 4-5 seconds lowered the world's mark by four seconds, and also lowered the present American record by one and one-fifth seconds. Richard Hinits of Northwestern University, Laufer's only competitor, lost by ten yards.

The quartet of girls swimming under the colors of the Illinois Women's A. C. set a new Central A. A. U. record of 4:31 2-5 for the 400-yard relay free style. The time was nearly 20 seconds better than the old mark. Ethel Lackie, world's record-holder for 100 yards and 100 meters, swam the last 100 yards of the relay in 1:04 4-5.

In the 500-yard senior free style swim for women Fanny Homar of Milwaukee led until the last lap, when Mary Lou Quinn of the Illinois Women's A. C. sprinted to win by six inches in 7:41 1-5.

Two new Central A. A. U. marks were set by junior girls, Ruth Dierolf of Milwaukee winning the 100-yard breast stroke in 1:23 4-5, 1 1-5 seconds under the former mark, and Helen Mae Quinn of the I. W. A. C. establishing a mark of 8:05 3-5 in inaugurating the 500-yard free style. Violet Morton of the I. W. A. C. won the 100-yard back stroke for juniors in 1:23 2-5.

ROPER APPROVES FOOTBALL CHANGES

Sees No Drastic Consequences Except That Officiating Will Be Made Easier.

WITTMER AGAINST REVISION

New Rules Eliminate Too Far the Chance Element of Game, Says Princeton Line Coach.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 9.—That a difference in opinion exists in the Princeton football coaching staff in regard to the relative merits of the recent changes in football rules is revealed in interviews with Head Coach Bill Roper and Line Coach Al Wittmer, which appeared in the columns of The Daily Princetonian here today.

Coach Roper, a member of the Rules Committee, defended the rules in his interview as changes mainly in the officiating of the game and not in the play. "There have been no drastic changes made in the rules," Roper stated. "The only changes have been toward simplifying the tasks of the officials, especially in regard to the point about possession and control of the ball.

Changes Great Improvement.

"Formerly in the case of a fumbled punt there often arose a question as to how many steps the receiver had taken before he dropped the ball. Now, because of the changes, that question will not arise, so the officials will have just one less thing to worry about. The same is true in the case of the lateral pass, where the task of the officials is also simplified. On the whole I think the changes will be a great improvement."

Wittmer declares that the new rules eliminate too far the chance element of the game, which, in his estimation, marks its greatest interest. "I do not think the changes will be a benefit to the game," he states. "It is the elements of chance and surprise which make football so popular, and the changes do a great deal toward taking these elements out of the game.

Impossible to Recover Punt.

"In my opinion, the ruling in regard to the fumbled punt is a poor one because it makes it impossible for a man to recover such a punt and run with it. I think that was one of the most beautiful sights in the game, but now all the man can do is to fall on the ball.

"To my mind, the simplification about the lateral pass will not make officiating any easier, because now there will be a question as to whether the ball has or has not been passed a distance of two yards. I think the changes were unnecessary and will not be an improvement."

Protest Britain's Olympic Six; Canadians on Team Is Charge

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Feb. 9 (AP).—Great Britain's entry in the Olympic hockey competition was protested today by French officials, who charged that the British squad included two Canadians. The protest, made to the Swiss Olympic Committee, was filed by Frans Reichel, Secretary of the French committee. The identity of the two players involved was not disclosed. The Swiss body will make known its decision on the protest tomorrow.

24 VARSITY OARSMEN OUT AT COLUMBIA

6 of Championship Eight Start Training, Danneman and Douglas Completing Boat.

SHORT WORKOUT IS HELD

Showing of Both First and Second Crews Pleases Glendon—Yearling Squad Swelled to 50.

Columbia's championship varsity crew, winner of the Poughkeepsie Regatta last June, started its training yesterday when six members of the eight reported to Coach Richard J. Glendon for preliminary practice on the rowing machines. The two absentees were George French, No. 3, who graduated last Spring, and Eric Lambart, last season's captain and stroke, who will return in a few days from Chicago, where he is visiting friends following the semester examinations.

Eighteen other men reported for the varsity, and while larger squads have been on hand on Morningside Heights Glendon was pleased with the calibre of the men.

With three exceptions, the make-up of the first boat was similar to that which rowed at Poughkeepsie. In the absence of Lambart, Glendon placed Captain Al MacBain at stroke and put Henry Danneman in MacBain's regular seat at No. 2. Art Douglas, stroke of the jayvees at Poughkeepsie, took over the vacant No. 3 seat. The rest of the crew was composed of Sam Walker, bow; Bud Piercy, No. 4; Bill Lightbowne, No. 5; Tom Kerrigan, No. 6, and Horace Davenport, No. 7.

Varsity Crews in Workout.

Glendon sent the varsity crews through a short workout, the heaviest part of which was a two-minute sprint with the stroke up to 28 or 30 a minute. When Lambart returns he will take over his stroke oar seat and MacBain will be sent back to the No. 2 position. Douglas, a junior, stands a good chance of retaining his place as he was a member of the championship freshman squad of two years ago and is highly regarded by the Columbia mentor.

The first varsity eight performed well and Glendon was well pleased with the condition of the men. The practice drills today and tomorrow will be lengthened and on Monday activities will be transferred to the scow in swimming pool.

The second varsity crew had six members of the 1927 freshman eight in it, the only veterans being Jim Reynolds and Johnny Born. This crew also showed up well and Glendon believes that he has the making of a good crew in this outfit. The junior varsity boating was: Bow, W. Sanford; No. 2, Bonynge; No. 3, Reynolds; No. 4, Swanson; No. 5, Biesse; No. 6, Murphy; No. 7, Born; stroke, Meinig.

Lightweight Veterans Out.

Seven members of the varsity lightweight crew of last year also were on hand for their first workout. Gordon Ferris, stroke and captain, has been lost by graduation. Kilroe was shifted from No. 6 to stroke and Hugh Gardner, a substitute last year, took over Kilroe's place. The rest of the boat was seated as it was last season: Raff, bow; No. 2, Woodworth; No. 3, Fisk; No. 4, Ames; No. 5, Reidy, and No. 7, Rousselot.

Besides the regular first-string boat of lightweight men, sixteen crew candidates, mostly freshmen from last year's large squad, were seated in the second and third boats. Glendon expects the lightweights to have one of the best crews in its class this season but the holding of the semester examinations late in May will prevent it from competing in the American Henley, which event practically decides the best 150-pound crew in college circles.

The freshman squad was increased to fifty yesterday, when three new men reported. Glendon has not changed his original boatings, but it is likely that a shift or two will be made when the men commence drills in the scow next week. The first and second crews looked powerful yesterday, but the third eight, made up entirely of men weighing on an average 180 pounds, came in for considerable coaching.

166 Days of Racing Are Set by the Jockey Club for 1928

JOCKEY CLUB SETS 166 DAYS OF RACING

SPA PROGRAM IS LENGTHY

To Start July 30 and Have 30 Racing Days—Belmont Park to Open on May 17.

There will be 166 days of racing on the tracks under the jurisdiction of the Jockey Club this season, according to the dates announced yesterday by the Jockey Club through Algernon Daingerfield, its Secretary. In addition there will be the United Hunts meeting at Aqueduct, starting April 19, and running two days, besides a two-day meet in the Autumn.

The first regular flat race meeting will be staged by the Metropolitan Jockey Club at Jamaica, the session starting on Monday, April 23, and ending Wednesday, May 16, comprising twenty-one racing days. The start of the season is two days later than last year.

The Saratoga meeting will consist of thirty days of racing into which have been squeezed five Saturdays. The opening will be on July 30 and the final day on Sept. 1.

First Holiday at Belmont.

The total number of days of racing for all of the Jockey Club tracks remains the same as last year. The individual sessions with the exception of the Saratoga meeting also remain the same. Belmont Park, the second course to stage a Spring meeting, will get under way on May 17. Belmont Park draws the first holiday date, Memorial Day. The meet ends June 9, a Saturday.

Aqueduct opens on the following Monday and runs to July 4. Empire City gets started July 5 and ends July 28, allowing one day without racing before Saratoga's inaugural, that day, however, being a Sunday.

Empire City to End Season.

The Autumn season starts at Belmont with the opening on Sept. 3, and the ending Sept. 17, with Labor Day occurring during the session. Aqueduct gets thirteen days, from Sept. 18 to Oct. 2. Jamaica follows from Oct. 3 to 17, and Empire City, as usual, rings down the metropolitan turf season's curtain with its meeting from Oct. 18 to Nov. 1.

This closing is two days earlier than last year, when the Empire course closed on Nov. 3.

Dates for 1928 Racing Season Announced for New York State

101ST CAVALRY TRIO ROUTED IN CLASS C

Bows to Drive of Riding Club of New York, 17-2½, in Brooklyn Tourney.

SQUADRON A IN TRIUMPH

One of the most complete routs of the indoor season developed in the Class C invitation polo tourney of the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club on its own tanbark last night. The Riding Club of New York, given a one-goal grant, unloosed a sustained drive which overwhelmed the 101st Cavalry of Brooklyn trio, 17 to 2½.

Sherman and Kent, Nos. 2 and 3 for the victors, played the top polo of their campaign so far, coordinating to total thirteen clean goals. Sherman shot eight and Kent five. A far more even and spirited engagement was the feature match of the Class D round in which a well-balanced Squadron A team was forced to come from behind and score nine goals in the second half to defeat a plucky Ramapo Club trio of New Jersey, 13 to 12½.

In the other Class D contest the Long Island Polo Club unit had little difficulty vanquishing the New York Athletic Club, 14½ to 4.

The line-ups:

Riding Club (N. Y.) (17).	101st Cavalry (2½).
1—Fleming.	1—Beattie.
2—Sherman.	2—Wilson.
3—Kent.	3—O'Donnell.

Squadron A (13).	Ramapo (12½.)
1—Bertrand.	1—Clark.
2—Pate.	2—McConnell.
3—Simmons.	3—Ash.

Goals—Squadron A: Browne 8, Pate 4, Simmons 3; Ramapo: Clark 4, McConnell 2, Ash 5, handicap 4. Foul—Ramapo: Ash.

Long Island P. C. (14½).	N. Y. A. C. (4).
1—Heatley.	1—Pistras.
2—Sickinger.	2—Lennon.
3—J. Heatley.	3—Cavanaugh.

Goals—L. I. P. C.: S. Heatley 5, Sickinger 4, pony goals 4, handicap 2; N. Y. A. C.: Lennon 2, pony goal. Foul—J. Heatley. Referee—Jack Henley. Time of periods—10 minutes.

TIME MAKER TAKES SPANISH FORT PURSE

NOR'EASTER WINS FOURTH

Finishes Ahead of Algol and Kentucky Cardinal—Retaliate Leads Field in Tulane Handicap.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 9.—Clipping one and three-fifths seconds off his previous time for the six furlongs, and furnishing the smartest race he has ever run, Time Maker, the fast-running three-year-old colt recently sent to the races for the first time by E. R. McLean, captured the Spanish Fort Purse, the best number on the card at the Fair Grounds this afternoon, in 1:13 1-5. Time Maker, eased up, won by two lengths from the Idle Hour Stock Farm's chestnut colt Bruno.

Trainer Johnny Schorr saddled the son of The Porter for the third race of the colt's career when he sent him to the post in this race, his two previous races having been at this track within the last ten days. In his first outing Time Maker ran six furlongs over a slow track in 1:14 4-5. In his next effort he ran a mile, beating William Penn by a length and a half and doing the distance in 1:39 1-5. In both races he was never seriously pressed.

On these showings the form players installed the colt as the odds-on favorite for the purse, the quotations being 6-1 cents $1. The public confidence was more than deserved, for had he been pressed Time Maker could have finished much stronger, the colt being under a heavy pull as Jockey Eddie Ambrose sat calmly in the pilot's seat looking back at the field in the last sixteenth.

Rosinante Sets Opening Pace.

The Greentree Stable's Rosinante, with Gordon Arnold in the saddle, first away when the word came, set a dizzy pace for the first quarter, which was negotiated in 0:23 2-5. Bruno then assumed the pace making and turned the half in 0:47 2-5, which equalled the track record for that distance. All of this time Ambrose had held Time Maker under stout restraint in third position.

However, turned for home, Ambrose set the Mc Lean colt down and Time Maker responded with a burst of speed that took him by Bruno like a flash.

Bruno had a length to spare to save the place from Rosinante. Bookie, off slowly, finished fast to lack only half a length of getting the short end of the purse. The others, Calvados, Herendeen and Biloxi, were never contenders and trailed home.

Senator Johnson N. Camden's good four-year-old colt, Nor'easter, which had been matched against the smartest of the handicap division here this Winter in four previous starts at this session, finally put in a winning effort in the fourth race, billed as the James J. Corbett Trophy, a race at six furlongs for three-year-olds and over.

Kentucky Cardinal in Field.

His last effort had been to run last in the New Orleans Handicap. Today he was asked to measure strides with such good ones as Algol, Kentucky Cardinal, Pigeon Wing, Brilliant, Superfrank and Adios.

The public did not look upon his chances with any great optimism, preferring to rest faith in Algol, another of the E. R. McLean stars, which had finished second in his last outing after three previous straight victories. Algol was made the favorite at $2.22 for $1, while Kentucky Cardinal was the second choice at $2.84 to $1. Nor'easter was held at $10.56 for $2 in the mutuels.

Retaliate, sporting the silks of Bud Fisher, scored a victory for that stable in the Tulane Handicap at a mile and three-sixteenths. The four-year-old colt ran in front of the field of five all the way to win by two lengths from Rejuvenation. Serajevo drew third, a length back of Rejuvenation, while Feu Follet, the favorite, was last. The winner paid $10.46 for $2.

The ride that W. Bowden put up on Feu Follet did not please the stewards appreciably, and after the race they instructed Bowden not to accept any more mounts until further notice. This is the second rider disciplined in this manner within the past few days.

35 Players Will Be Taken to St. Petersburg by Yankees

YANKEES WILL TAKE 35 PLAYERS SOUTH

And All Except Four of These, According to Barrow, Already Have Accepted Terms.

NEW ROSTER ANNOUNCED

Includes 14 Hurlers, 5 Catchers, 9 Infielders and 7 Outfielders—Giants Sign Fitzsimmons.

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Barring a few additions in the next couple of weeks, the Yanks will take thirty-five players to St. Petersburg, Fla., for Spring training activities. That number appears on the club roster as given out yesterday by Edward Grant Barrow, and M. Barrow vouches for the accuracy of the list.

The squad will be divided into fourteen pitchers, five catchers, nine infielders and seven outfielders. All except four of the thirty-five, according to Professor Barrow, have signed contracts for 1928. The four are Waite Hoyt, Mike Gazella and, at a guess, Tony Lazzeri and Earl Combs.

One more member joined the Signed-up Club yesterday, M. Barrow announced with pardonable pride. There are those who say that Edward is talking through his hat when he asserts that only four athletes remain unsigned, but until contradictory evidence is uncovered the experts will have to take his word for it.

List of New Yanks.

Catchers—Herbert Bryant, Raleigh, N. C., and William Dickey, Jackson (Stats not given on roster).

Infielders—Ben Chapman, semi-pro, from Ensley, Ala.; Leo Durocher, recalled from St. Paul; Vic Hanson, former famous football, baseball and basketball star of Syracuse University, and Gene Robertson, bought from St. Paul.

Outfielders—Sam Byrd, from the Knoxville (Tenn.) club, and Allen D. Cooke, from Durham, N. C.

24 Will Be Limit of Squad.

In pursuance of his usual custom, Mr. Huggins will carry twenty-four players, which means that eleven of the squad will be shipped elsewhere.

Pitchers—Hoyt, Moore, Pennock, Pipgras, Shocker and Thomas.

Catchers—Bengough, Collins and Grabowski.

Infielders—Gehrig, Lazzeri, Koenig, Dugan and Gazella.

Outfielders—Ruth, Combs, Meusel, Durst and Paschal.

Freddy Fitzsimmons, the bulky right-handed pitcher, was the only Giant to forward a signed contract yesterday. The Giants still have about a half dozen unsigned, including Burleigh Grimes, Virgil Barnes and Frank Hogan. But the situation isn't serious.

POMERANIANS ON VIEW IN SHOW HERE TODAY

Score of Canadian Dogs to Offer American Animals Stiff Competition—105 Entries.

In the roof garden of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel today will be held the eighteenth annual specialty show of the American Pomeranian Club, Inc., with the second largest entry in the history of the organization. A total of 105 dogs will be benched, just four short of the record established at last year's exhibition.

Never has the Pom had a greater appeal, and the number of fanciers is constantly increasing. Many new faces will appear at today's exhibition and American fanciers will face the stiffest competition from Canada they have ever had. About a score of dogs have arrived from across the border. Mrs. W. Wylie of Vineland, Ontario, leads the invaders with a string of seven.

The show will open at 10 A. M., with the judging to begin an hour later. The exhibition will remain open until 11 P. M. R. A. Barker, the Pom expert from Abington, Pa., will make the awards in the regular classes and more than one hundred specials. Thomas Hissey, President of the Queensborough Kennel Club, will be the steward.

Chief interest, of course, will centre in the award for the best in the show, which will carry with it the President's Trophy, offered by Mrs. F. C. Brown. Miss Elsie Hydon is offering the Vice President's Trophy for the best of the opposite sex.

After the close of the show many of the exhibitors will entrain for Baltimore with their charges, which will be judged tomorrow on the second day of the show of the Maryland Kennel Club.

Hickey on Baseball Board.

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—The appointment of T. J. Farrell, Secretary. Hickey succeeds J. C. Toole of New York, who resigned.

Root Signs With the Cubs.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 (AP).—Charley Root, the pitching ace of the Chicago Cubs, came to terms on his 1928 contract today after a conference with Manager Joe McCarthy in Los Angeles, according to word received by President William Veeck. The agreement price was not disclosed, however.

Sartorial Championship Won By Cubs Before Season Opens

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs may not win the National League pennant this year, but they expect to be the best dressed club in organized baseball. Like most other major league clubs, they will have three uniforms each, but unlike other teams they will be of different colors. Strict orders will be issued so the players appear daily in fresh, clean uniforms, club officials said.

TAYLOR IS STOPPED BY SANGOR IN 7TH

Claims Low Punch and Gets Five Minutes to Recuperate, but Fails to Resume.

CLASH ATTRACTS $40,000

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—Joey Sangor of Milwaukee, contender for the world's featherweight championship, was declared the winner over Bud Taylor, bantamweight titleholder, in the seventh round of a scheduled ten-round battle here tonight.

Taylor at the time fell victim to what appeared to be a foul blow, but was ordered to resume fighting after a five-minute rest. He was unable to do so, with the result that the judges awarded the bout to the Milwaukee youth.

The bout, the fourth meeting between the pair since 1926, attracted a crowd of 10,000 and gate receipts of $40,000. The battle was unequaled in the Middle West for viciousness and desperate punching since the memorable fight between Stanley Ketchel and Billy Papke in Milwaukee twenty years ago.

The pair slugged freely for six rounds, with little to chose between them. They stood toe to toe in the centre of the ring and traded punches, first one having the lead, then the other.

Sangor's best showing was in the third round, when he forced Taylor to the ropes under a wicked shower of lefts and rights to the head. Taylor weighed 121 pounds and Sangor 126.

In a five-round semi-final, Joey Medill of Chicago won from Marty Silvers of Brooklyn. Medill was knocked to his knees in the first round but came back strongly, carrying the fight to the end. Both weighed 132 pounds.

Manny Sharkey, Baltimore, won from Jimmy Mahoney of Scranton, Pa., in a five-round bout. Sharkey forced the issue, having Mahoney in retreat most of the time. Both weighed 123 pounds.

Johnny Nesser, Terre Haute, fly-weight protégé of Taylor's, and Young Dencio of the Philippines boxed a five-round draw. Both weighed 105¼ pounds.

Jimmy Black, Los Angeles, defeated Warren Levy of New Orleans in a five-round match. Black had a decisive margin on his aggressiveness and clean punching.

Frankie Baumann, Brooklyn, was too fast and punched too hard for Smiley Springer, Chicago, and had no trouble in winning their five-round bout. Springer was on the receiving end until the last round, which he won.

FLOWERS OUTPOINTS FINNEGAN IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Bruce Flowers, negro lightweight of New Rochelle, N. Y., defeated Dick (Honeyboy) Finnegan of Dorchester in a sensational ten-round bout here tonight. In the final round the boxers exchanged blows toe to toe from gong to gong.

Flowers was credited with winning five rounds and Finnegan three, while two were even. Finnegan weighed 133¾ pounds and Flowers 134½. A crowd of 10,000 attended.

Young Al Delmont of Boston defeated Kid Adams of Lawrence in another six-rounder. Frank Curcio of Providence defeated Freddie Bender of Newport, R. I., in six rounds.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT WINS.

Education Quintet Also Triumphs in Municipal League Games.

The Department of Health and the Department of Education were the winners yesterday at the Twenty-eight Street gymnasium in Municipal League basketball games. The Department of Health rallied after trailing, 9 to 8, at half time to win from the Department of Water Supply, 20 to 16. The Department of Education conquered the Department of Finance, 15 to 10, after the score had been deadlocked at 6—6 at half time.

Spartans Win Two Games.

The Spartans won two out of three games from the Walton Academy team in the American National Bowling tournament at Thum's White Elephant Academy last night, thereby gaining third place. The Spartans rolled 1,024, 1,008 and 1,071, while the Walton combination tallied 982, 1,032 and 986. Walter Robertson of the Walton team was high scorer with 279.

CANZONERI BATTLES FOR TITLE TONIGHT

CANZONERI IS FAVORITE

The mooted featherweight title will be decided tonight when Tony Canzoneri and Benny Bass clash at Madison Square Garden. Canzoneri is recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission as champion in this division, while Bass is recognized by the National Boxing Association.

As far as ring tradition goes, Canzoneri must be rated as the title-holder, because he defeated Johnny Dundee, who had not lost in the division before, and the feeling prevails that titles can only be won and lost in the ring regardless of what boxing boards may do.

However, the main consideration is that tonight's winner will be undisputed champion, and one more class of boxers will be cleared.

Under the State regulations for championships the bout is scheduled for fifteen rounds. Plenty of action is promised and in anticipation of it boxing fans have responded eagerly, judging from the box-office demand. There is every likelihood that the bout will be a sell-out.

Bass Has Many Backers.

Canzoneri has been installed the favorite at 8 to 5, and there appears to be plenty of wagering on the outcome. On recent performances these odds appear justified. The short-end money seems to be counting on the chance that Bass will land a decisive punch. Otherwise the expectation is that the clever Canzoneri will readily outbox his Philadelphia rival. Besides his victory over Dundee, Canzoneri has defeated Bud Taylor and Ignacio Fernandez recently.

Canzoneri has been an industrious fighter and has won great popularity by virtue of his willingness to mix, gaving and taking freely. His chief weakness is the absence of a real punch, though his boxing ability and head should offset that.

The featherweight division promises to win back some of its popularity once tonight's battle definitely clears up the title issue. It is a division in which there have been many notable names among the champions.

Kilbane Once Led the Field.

For a long time Abe Attell ruled the class; then came Johnny Kilbane, who in turn lost to Eugene Criqui; Criqui lost to Dundee in a memorable fight. Dundee retired undefeated and Louis Kid Kaplan ranked at the top when he stopped Danny Kramer. Since then the championship has been in a muddle.

Three eight-round battles and a four-rounder will precede the title bout. The semi-final will be between Al Winkler and Bobby Burns. The other eight-rounders are Benny Schwartz vs. Johnny Green and Joey Kaufman vs. Armando Schekels. The four-rounder is between Sammy Farber and Frankie Conley.

The measurements of Bass and Canzoneri follow:

BASS.		CANZONERI.
22	Age	21
126	Weight	126
5 ft. 3 inches	Height	5 ft. 5 inches
64	Reach	66½
34½	Chest Normal	31½
37½	Chest Expanded	35
10	Forearm	10
12¾	Biceps	12

28	Waist	28½
9	Ankle	8½
13½	Calf	13½
19½	Thigh	18
9¾	Wrist	6¼

At the 106th Infantry Armory in Brooklyn tonight the feature bout will be between Joey LaGray and Willie Herman, who are scheduled to go ten rounds. There also will be two eight-rounders and two sixes.

AMATEUR CARD IS LISTED.

Fourteen Named for Bouts at Intercity Show Here Tomorrow.

The complete program of amateur boxing bouts tomorrow night at the international intercity tournament at Madison Square Garden was announced yesterday. Fourteen of the leading amateurs from Canada, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, New Haven and New York will be seen in action. There will be bouts in every class, from flyweight to heavyweight. In addition there will be two special matches between local boxers.

Heavyweight Class—George Hoffman, New York, vs. Frederick Taylor, Canada.

GANS VICTOR AT 102D.

Italian Joe Gans, 161 pounds, gained the verdict from Mickey Taylor, 162, in the feature ten-rounder at the 102d Medical Regiment Armory last night. In the semi-final eight Charlie Nelson, 130 pounds, defeated Jack Kid Hurk, 133.

Soldier Buckley, 130½, and Joe Maastrion, 130, fought a six-round draw. In the opening six-rounder Ray Donahue, 122, outpointed Young Marino, 123½.

Adgie Stops Will Matthews.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9 (AP).—Matt Adgie, Philadelphia, knocked out Will Matthews, Baltimore, in the fourth round here tonight. Adgie weighed 138 pounds, Matthews 177. Mickey Martell, 149, Philadelphia, gained the decision over Red Rousch, 142, Bellefonte, Pa., in eight rounds.

Faithful Sub Who Never Got Into Game Rewarded With Trophy for Loyal Work

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—The old and well-founded story of the faithful sub who toils through season after season of football, helping the varsity starters to get into championship form, but himself denied the applause of the multitude, has been given a bit of reverse twist.

Stewart Joseph, a substitute centre of the Lafayette High School squad, it was announced today, has received the Merlau Cup, a trophy carrying recognition as the hardest worker on the squad.

For three years young Joseph has turned out for play, never missing a call for practice. During all that time his opportunity to play in a game never came. For his fidelity through rain and shine, cold or sleet he was on hand to give his best if needed.

The high school alumni have seen to it that his loyalty and school spirit shall not go unrewarded, and today the bench warmer is the envy of the stars.

NIMZOWITSCH GOES INTO CHESS LEAD

Resorts to French Defense and Defeats Loenhardt in 46 Moves in Berlin.

BOGOLJUBOW IN 3D PLACE

STANDING OF THE PLAYERS.

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Nimzowitsch	4	1	Steiner	2	3
Reti	3½	½	Brinckmann	2	3
Bogoljubow	3½	1½	Stoltz	2	3
Ahues	3	2	Koch	1½	2½
Johner	3	2	Saemisch	1½	2½
Tartakower	3	2	Leonhardt	1	4
Helling	2½	2½	Schlage	½	4½

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—With four rounds completed, except one adjourned game from the third, the fourteen chess masters engaged in the international tournament in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Berlin Chess Society at Charlottenberg contested seven more games in the fifth round this afternoon and evening.

When play stopped at the end of the second session, Richard Reti of Czechoslovakia had dropped to second place on account of an adjourned game. A. Nimzowitsch of Copenhagen temporarily took the lead by his victory over P. S. Leonhardt of Koenigsberg. Karl Ahues of Berlin and Dr. S. Tartakower of Paris both dropped half a point. E. D. Bogoljubow of Triberg, profiting by an oversight on the part of his opponent, moved into third place. Of the six games finished, three were drawn and one adjourned.

An unaccountable blunder on the part of A. Brinckmann of Kiel enabled Bogoljubow to score an early victory in a Zukertort opening after only ten moves.

Helling Draws With Ahues.

Ahues was held to a draw by K. Helling of Berlin, who had the black side of a queen's gambit declined. A truce was declared after thirty moves.

F. Saemisch of Berlin also reached an early conclusion in his game with Dr. Tartakower, who could not avoid a series of exchanges which simplified the position. After twenty-two moves a draw was agreed upon. The opening was a queen's pawn.

Reti, who declined a queen's gambit offered by B. Koch of Berlin, played for forty-six moves without reaching a decision. However, when play ceased the Czechoslovakian representative had the superior position and is expected to win upon resumption.

Leonhardt Hastens Defeat.

Nimzowitsch resorted to the French defense and obtained a superior development, but was sided to victory when Leonhardt, hard pressed, lost a piece. The game lasted forty-six moves.

Winning the exchange in the middle game from W. Schlage of Berlin, who had the black side of a queen's gambit declined, P. Johner of Switzerland scored in forty-five moves.

A draw was registered between G. Stoltz of Stockholm and L. Steiner, Budapest, in an evenly contested queen's pawn opening which went to fifty moves.

The pairings for the sixth round tomorrow are: Brinckmann vs. Leonhardt, Schlage vs. Bogoljubow, Reti vs. Johner, Steiner vs. Koch, Helling vs. Stoltz, Saemisch vs. Ahues and Tartakower vs. Nimzowitsch.

MIXSELL BEATS BULL FOR VETERANS' TITLE

Rallies to Take Third Squash Crown in a Row—Scores Are 15-10, 12-15, 18-16.

Standing on the brink of defeat in the third and final game, H. R. Mixsell of the Princeton Club rallied to overcome Charles M. Bull of the Crescent A. C. at 15-10, 12-15, 18-16 in the final round of the veterans' national squash tennis championship at the Princeton Club yesterday and win the title for the third year in a row. The trophy is now out of competition and goes to the Princeton Club.

Mixsell has been playing the finest squash of any player in the amateur ranks this season, but no one in the first ten ranking has come so close to defeating him as did the veteran Charles Bull yesterday. Playing a beautiful, soft game, anticipating every stroke of his opponent and making almost no mistakes that were not forced, the Crescent A. C. representative handled the champion's speed and slow-down shots so well that Mixsell had to extend himself to the limit in every game.

In the final game Mixsell gained a lead of 12-6 and it looked as though Bull had shot his bolt, for he was not getting to the ball as he had been up to this time. But Bull surprised by rallying to pull up to 13-all and setting a game of 5. In this game he gained a lead of 3-0, only two points away from victory, and Mixsell was in a precarious position. But the Princeton veteran showed his championship calibre at this critical juncture by taking 5 points while holding Bull scoreless to win the match.

Benefit Bouts on Tuesday.

An amateur boxing tournament will be held at the Broadway Arena next Tuesday for the benefit of the Hospital of the Holy Family, according to an announcement yesterday. Competition will range from flyweight to heavyweight.

RUBINSTEIN HERE FOR CHESS DEBUT

Polish Champion Pays First Visit to U. S. and Will Make Extensive Tour.

MAY OPPOSE CAPABLANCA

Plans Laid to Have Two Masters and Marshall Take Part in Tourney in April.

Delayed by the heavy fog which kept the steamship Berengaria down the bay for nearly two days, Akiba Rubinstein of Antwerp, a native of Poland, of which he holds the chess championship at the present time, landed in New York yesterday for his first visit to America.

The famous international master, who has a long string of successes to his credit since he broke into the ranks of the masters in 1906, including five first prizes during 1912, came to give Americans a practical demonstration of his skill in exhibition play.

Although he expects to spend considerable time in this city, he plans to visit some of the leading chess centres in the East and Middle West. He will remain here several months.

Capablanca Pays Respects.

At the pier to meet Rubinstein and his wife was a reception committee headed by Morris Rothenberg, President of the Rice-Progressive Chess Club. Headquarters were established for him at the Hotel Majestic, where, during the afternoon, he was visited by José R. Capablanca, former world's champion, who arrived on Wednesday from South America.

In the evening Rubinstein made a round of calls in order to pay his respects to the members of the Manhattan, Marshall, Rice-Progressive and Stuyvesant Chess Clubs, at all of which he received a warm welcome. It is expected that the Polish champion will get into action, either in match or consultation play, at the Manhattan Chess Club next week.

The Marshall Chess Club has reserved Feb. 18 for a simultaneous exhibition by him, and on Feb. 22 a dinner will be arranged in his honor at the Rice-Progressive Chess Club.

April Tourney Planned.

In order to take advantage of the presence of both Capablanca and Rubinstein, the Polish chess champion, a masters' tournament with ten competitors, including Frank J. Marshall, the United States champion, is planned for the second week of April at the Manhattan Square Hotel, the scene of the great international tournament last Spring.

The proposition was made yesterday to Joseph Nemerov, the proprietor, by Dr. N. L. Lederer, who will act as secetary and manager. Leading American players will be selected to complete the entry list. Play will last about ten days.

DUFTON DEFEATS REID IN EXHIBITION SQUASH

N. Y. A. C. Star Wins at Shelton Club, 11-15, 15-2, 15-6, 15-3—Collins Is Victor.

Stroking with faultless precision and smoothness, Rowland Dufton of the New York Athletic Club, runner-up for the world's professional title, defeated James Reid of the Crescent A. C. in an exhibition squash tennis match at the Shelton Club last night. The score was 11—15, 15—2, 15—6, 15—3.

For the first game Reid had a slight edge, the Crescent professional playing magnificent squash and forcing Dufton into errors, but in the second game the tide turned abruptly and thereafter the N. Y. A. C. player was in clear command, carrying the attack to his opponent with such unrelenting speed that Reid was unable to maintain control. It was one of the prettiest matches of the season.

In another professional exhibition Leo Collins of the Fraternity Club defeated Charles Costello of the Crescent A. C., 4—15, 18—6, 15—4. Edward Larigan, another Crescent player, and Frank Loughran of the N. Y. A. C., both ranking amateurs, met in another exhibition, which was won by Larigan at 15—6, 15—7.

KUPCHIK LEADS TOURNEY.

Holds 1½-Point Margin in Manhattan Chess Club Play.

At the close of the first half of the annual tournament for the championship of the Manhattan Chess Club yesterday A. Kupchik, former State champion, led with a score of 3½-½. A. S. Pinkus and H. Steiner, each 2-2, came next. In the game of the fourth round Kupchik defeated I. Kashdan and Steiner won from I. Horowitz.

The standing follows:

	Won.	L.		Won.	L.
Kupchik	3½	½	Kashdan	1½	2½
Pinkus	2	2	Horowitz	1	3
Steiner	2	2

BALDWIN IN SEMI-FINALS.

Short Hills Golfer Beats Hoffman in Ormond Beach Tourney.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—A. Baldwin of Short Hills, N. J., goes into the semi-finals of the Ormond Beach golf tournament tomorrow through his victory today over H. A. Hoffman of the Rhode Island Country Club, 3 and 4.

T. L. Whitcomb Jr. of Boston eliminated B. H. Colburn of Biltmore Forest, N. C., 2 up and 1 to play and has been paired with Baldwin for the semi-final play.

M'LAUGHLIN GAINS IN SQUASH TENNIS

Columbia Club Player Beats Mason, 15-12, 8-15, 15-7, to Enter Class B Semi-Finals.

HIRONS, CLUBMATE, VICTOR

Outsteadies Davidson in Hard-Hitting Match—Larner, Yale, and Wood, Princeton, Also Win.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Following his notable victories over S. M. Sperry of the Princeton Club and Frank A. Sieverman Jr. of the Fraternity Club, E. G. McLaughlin of the Columbia University Club defeated C. J. Mason Jr., the lead-off man on the Harvard B team, last night in the fourth round of the national Class B squash tennis championship at the Harvard Club. The score was 15—12, 8—15, 15—7.

This triumph placed McLaughlin in the semi-final round, and he was joined there by one other Columbian, Gardner Hirons; R. J. Larner of the Yale Club and Arnold Wood Jr. of the Princeton Club. This afternoon at 5:30 o'clock Larner will play McLaughlin and Hirons will meet Wood.

Larner, playing with a smoothness and accuracy that made it almost impossible for Barnwell Elliott to put over a finishing shot against him, defeated the New York A. C. representative 15—5, 15—12. After Larner had gained a commanding lead in the second game Elliott suddenly rallied and threatened to carry the play to a third game as he scored on cleverly placed forcing shots, but the Yalensian came out of his slump to halt the spurt just in the nick of time and end the match in the second game.

Davidson Loses at 15—7, 15—9.

Hirons put out the hard-hitting J. S. Davidson of the Yale Club at 15—7, 15—9. Both men punished the ball severely with powerful forehands, while Hiron's backhand was equally destructive. The Columbian was the steadier of the two and his service was more effective. Davidson took little pains with his serve and as a result gave Hirons set-ups and marred his chances of scoring.

Wood gained his bracket in the semi-final after a battle royal with J. C. Lyons of the New York A. C. The match ended in the second game but both chapters went to extra points and each time Wood came through in the pinch. In the opening game Lyons pulled up from 2—10 to 13—12 and in the second game he started promisingly only to dissipate his lead. Service was the deciding factor in this match, which saw both men hitting splendidly and Lyons making remarkable gets. The score was 18—15, 18—16.

McLaughlin's deadly forehand drive straight up and down the court served him in good stead against Mason just as it had against his previous opponents. The Harvard man played a little the cagier squash, but his changes of pace did not count for much against so thorough a court coverer as the Columbian. In the first game it was an even struggle all the way, with McLaughlin getting the jump near the end.

McLaughlin Wild in Second Game.

In the second game the Columbian lapsed badly in control and his errors mounted rapidly after the score had gone to 8—7 in his favor. He steadied in the third and had a little more in reserve than his opponent, with the result that Mason could not quite cope with his wallops, particularly his returns of service.

The summaries:

Fourth Round—R. J. Larner, Yale, defeated Barnwell Elliott, N. Y. A. C., 15—5, 15—12; E. G. McLaughlin, Columbia, defeated C. J. Mason, Jr., Harvard, 15—12, 8—15, 15—7; Gardner Hirons, Columbia, defeated J. S. Davidson, Yale, 15—7, 15—9; Arnold Wood Jr., Princeton, defeated J. C. Lyons, N. Y. A. C., 18—13, 18—15.

HUNTER AND VAN RYN HEAD FIELD AT CASINO

Alonso, Washburn, Shields and Other Tennis Stars to Begin Play Tomorrow.

Francis T. Hunter of New Rochelle, national doubles champion with William T. Tilden and member of the Davis Cup team last year, and John Van Ryn of Princeton, one of the leading younger candidates for the 1928 combination, head the upper and lower halves, respectively, of the draw for the men's invitation indoor tennis tournament which will start tomorrow at the Heights Casino in Brooklyn.

In addition to Hunter and Van Ryn, many other prominent players of the East will take part, including Manuel Alonso of Philadelphia, Watson Washburn, Dr. George King, Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem, Pa.; Walter Merrill Hall, Hugh G. M. Kelleher, Herbert L. Bowman, Fred C. Anderson, Dean Mathey, Elmer Griffin, Percy L. Kynaston, E. T. Herndon, Jerry Lang, Cedric Major, Kenneth Appel of East Orange, John F. Whitbeck, captain of the Harvard team last year; Frank Shields, national junior titleholder, and A. W. Asthalter, former winner of the national indoor doubles with Jean Borotra of France.

Almost every match from the first round will bring together two prominent contenders in the field of twenty-six. Hunter, who drew a bye, will meet Whitbeck in the second round, while Van Ryn's first round opponent will be Kelleher.

The draw follows:

Upper Half.

First Round—Elmer Griffin vs. Carl Gray; Dr. George King vs. Anton F. Von Bernuth; William Aydelotte vs. Percy L. Kynaston; Frank Shields vs. Louis B. Dailey Jr.; Dean Mathey vs. Melvin Partridge.

Second Round (first round byes)—Francis T. Hunter vs. John F. Whitbeck; Fritz Mercur vs. winner of first round match between Griffin and Gray.

Lower Half.

First Round—John Van Ryn vs. Hugh G. M. Kelleher; E. T. Herndon vs. Walter Merrill Hall; Jerry Lang vs. Cedric Major; Fred C. Anderson vs. Harry C. Brunie; Watson Washburn vs. A. W. Asthalter.

Second Round—Herbert L. Bowman vs. winner of match between Washburn and Asthalter; Manuel Alonso vs. Kenneth Appel.

Horace Mann Swimmers Win.

The Horace Mann swimming team defeated the McBurney School team, 43 to 19, in a dual meet yesterday afternoon in the pool of the winners. Horace Mann captured first place in five of the seven events.

True merit always wins in the end. But it will win much more quickly and easily if it is clothed with the outward appearance of success.

Miss Richards Wins St. Valentine's Golf Tourney

MRS. FRENCH LOSES FINAL AT PINEHURST

Beaten, 2 and 1, by Miss Richards in Women's St. Valentine's Golf Tourney.

VICTOR IS 2 UP AT TURN

Holds Margin After Losing the 16th and Then Halves the 17th for the Victory.

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 9.—Miss Dorothy Richards of Cleveland won the women's St. Valentine's golf tournament on the No. 1 links here today when she defeated Mrs. Emmet French of Youngstown and Southern Pines by 2 and 1. Miss Richards's superior long game was somewhat offset by Mrs. French's work around the greens.

The Cleveland player took the second hole with a par four, getting to the edge of the green, 380 yards, in two. The next four holes were halved. Miss Richards won the 472-yard seventh with a par three. Mrs. French pulled her iron shot into the woods and conceded after playing four.

Makes Beautiful Approach.

At the eighth Mrs. French retaliated by playing a beautiful approach to within ten feet of the pin after being outdriven by thirty yards. Both overplayed the ninth green, Mrs. French getting on in five from a bad place and taking three putts. Miss Richards recovered but needed a six. The Cleveland woman was two up passing the turn.

At the tenth Mrs. French put her third into a trap, losing the hole. She won the next by putting her tee shot four feet from the cup and taking two putts for a par three. At the twelfth Mrs. French missed her second shot on the fairway. Miss Richards was trapped in two and played a recovery from the crossway, eighty yards to the green. She rolled to the back edge and got a five.

Next Three Are Halved.

The next three holes were halved, Mrs. French missing a four-foot putt for a win at the thirteenth. Mrs. French took the sixteenth, Miss Richards having her second shot in the roadway and playing over the green. The match ended when Miss Richards kept her lead and halved the seventeenth.

The cards:

BUTTERFIELD SCORES IN BERMUDA AMATEUR

Defending Champion Eliminates Edwards, 4 and 3—Gates Beats McMillen, 5 and 4.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Feb. 9 (AP).—George Butterfield of Bermuda, defending champion, eliminated Ralph Edwards of the Bellclair Golf Club by 4 and 3 in the second round of the amateur golf championship at the Mid-Ocean Club today.

Butterfield, driving badly but putting well, was four up on the turn and played even coming in. Edwards was the winner of the 1926 championship.

F. H. Gates of Montclair, N. J., defeated C. R. McMillen of the Essex Country Club, last year's medalist, 5 and 4. Gates had an easy time with McMillen with an advantage of 6 up at the eleventh hole.

A. A. C. Gosling of Bermuda triumphed over R. K. Osborne of the Rockaway Hunting Club 2 and 1. H. R. Gens of the Fox Hills Club defeated Charles Brewer of Concord, Mass., 3 and 2.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

THE Army and Navy are not going to play football against each other next November, and it is just as well that the matter is settled, even though the settlement was on the basis of agreeing to disagree. Anything for a quiet life. The debate was bitter and somewhat confused. There were smoke screens thrown out by both sides, and there was considerable fighting and sniping by civilians, which is contrary to the rules of international warfare.

It was worthy of note that the football players themselves took no part in the fierce oratorical campaign. This time it was what Kipling called the "gilded Staff" that went to war. Belligerent Congressmen and various Under-Secretaries wheeled their batteries into action when the firing became general. Private citizens rushed into the trenches and tossed more or less deadly arguments at the opposing side.

It is just possible that if the whole matter had been left to the boys who play the game, there would have been no break in the Army-Navy football series. But the boys couldn't get a word in edgewise. And the older gentlemen talked the game right out of existence.

Natural Rivalry.

West Point and Annapolis are natural rivals in sport, but natural rivalry in sport too often leads to unnatural bitterness. Harvard and Princeton broke off diplomatic and athletic relations. So did Columbia and N. Y. U. So did Holy Cross and Georgtown, as far as football is concerned. Why doesn't Princeton play Pennsylvania? Just another case of natural rivalry gone wrong.

The same feeling is carried right on down through the high schools and grammar schools. Up at the north end of the city the boys of Horace Mann and Barnard have school buildings just a block apart. Do they play each other at baseball, basketball and football? Nay, nay. Natural rivalry has given way to armed neutrality.

Perhaps Harvard adherents will protest that Princeton is not a natural rival of the Crimson. And perhaps Princeton supporters will deny that Pennsylvania is a natural rival of the Tiger. But as far as most football followers are concerned, Harvard and Princeton are at least traditional rivals, and Princeton and Pennsylvania are geographical rivals. It's less than an hour's run by train from Franklin Field to the Palmer Stadium.

But if they don't care to play each other, it's quite all right. There are plenty of good football games every Autumn.

A Military Problem.

Major Philip Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at West Point, has characterized the Army football schedule for 1928 as "probably the most strenuous schedule ever attempted by an Army team." There's something in that, even though the cadets played ten games last year and have scheduled only nine this year.

The Army's "big" games in 1927 were against Yale, Notre Dame and the Navy. The Navy game, of course, is lost from this year's schedule, but the lads from the Plain will be called upon to face Southern Methodist, Harvard, Yale, Notre Dame and Nebraska.

The scrimmage with Southern Methodist is the second game on the Army schedule, and it should be a lively affair. Those Texas boys know how to play football. This will be their first invasion of the East, and doubtless they will try to make the most of it. In five years they have lost but five games, and they have played the strongest teams in the Southwest over that period.

The Army-Southern Methodist clash may not be considered a "big" game by conservative critics, but on the records of the two teams, it should be a brisk medium-sized war while it is on.

The Battle of Boston.

The Army-Harvard engagement at Boston, of course, will be a "big" game regardless of the score of the ultimate winner. On the basis of the relative strength of the West Point and Cambridge teams of 1927, this should result in an easy victory for the Army. But Arnold Horween hopes to have something better on exhibition when the bold soldier boys troop into the Stadium.

It isn't natural to see one the "Big Three" dropping a football game every other Saturday as Harvard did in the last campaign. Every college has its ups and downs on the gridiron, and undoubtedly Harvard was down last year. Perhaps it touched bottom, and the trend henceforward will be upward.

Nothing need be said of the Yale-Army and Army-Notre Dame games except that the news that Notre Dame expects something of an "off year" should be viewed with suspicion. It's true that Rockne will lose many of his South Bend regulars by graduation in June, but playing Notre Dame in one of its "off years" is no picnic. An "off year" for Notre Dame means that the South Bend boys might lose as many as two games by close scores in a schedule that includes some of the strongest teams from coast to coast. That's as many as they have lost in any one season in the past decade or two.

The Basketball Situation.

Not a single "major" football team went through last year's gridiron campaign with a clear run of victories. Perhaps the same thing will be true of the current basketball campaign. The only court team in the Eastern sector that has escaped defeat so far this season is Pittsburgh, and the Panthers still have some fast and furious opponents to face, including the Notre Dame quintet.

The leading teams in the "Near East" sector last year were Fordham, Princeton, Dartmouth and possibly the Navy. Dartmouth, Princeton and the Navy were humbled early in this campaign. St. John's of Brooklyn, Manhattan College, Syracuse, Colgate and other teams stepped out with winning streaks, but one by one they were halted. Fordham kept up a winning gait for quite a while, but the Maroon players were forced to run second to a fast C. C. N. Y. team in the Lavender gymnasium.

The Intercollegiate League race is an open affair, with Princeton, Dartmouth and Penn favored to fight it out. The Pitt Panthers seem to have the best team east of the Mississippi. And on the record so far Fordham seems to have the best team east of Pittsburgh.

LONG DRIVE EVENT IS WON BY LAFFOON

Captures Hot Springs Contest With Tee Shot of 293 Yards One Foot Six Inches.

ACKERBLOOM-RAPLEY SCORE

Triumph in Pre-Amateur Four-Ball Play With 71—South Central Open Starts Today.

Special to The New York Times.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 9.—Kenneth Laffoon of Miami, Okla., with a tee shot of 293 yards 1 foot 6 inches, today won the long driving contest, the feature preliminary event of the South Central open golf tournament. Johnny Rogers of Denver, winner last year, was second, his longest drive measuring 285 yards 2 feet.

The contest was held in a perfect calm. When Rogers won a year ago with a drive of 331 yards there was a fairly strong following wind.

The cash prizes were $50 and $40. Third prize of $25 went to Julius Ackerbloom of Little Rock. His longest of three drives measured 276 yards 3 inches.

Ackerbloom, with Frank Rapley of Hot Springs as his partner, also won first prize of $100 in the professional amateur four-ball competition. Their score was 36, 35—71, one stroke under par for the No. 1 course of the Hot Springs Golf and Country Club.

Tie for Second.

Angel De La Torre of New York, with a Los Angeles amateur, John Reid, had a card of 72. They tied for second with Ed Dudley, Hollywood (Cal.) professional, and G. B. Willard of Fort Smith, Ark.

Sam Rice, veteran outfielder of the Washington baseball club of the American League, teamed with Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, Mich. Their score was 73. Another major league ball player who was an amateur competitor was Jess Petty, pitcher on the Brooklyn Nationals. He played with Tom Boyd, professional at the Fox Hills Golf Club on Staten Island. Their score was 81.

Macdonald Smith of New York and Willis Johnson, the latter a Little Rock amateur, had a card of 78. A score of 76 was posted by Bobby Cruickshank, New York professional, and Harry Hill, also of Little Rock. Bill Mehlhorn of Pittsburgh and Galloway Harrison of Little Rock had 76 and Billy Burke of New York and Heinie Loesch of Little Rock returned 75.

Tourney to End Sunday.

The South Central open tournament, won last year by Cruickshank, will start tomorrow, when the first eighteen holes will be played. The last thirty-six holes will be played Sunday.

Tommy Armour, national open champion, and Joe Turnesa of New York, did not compete today. They motored north from San Antonio and did not arrive in time to play.

The leading scores in the pro-amateur event follow:

Angel De La Torre, New York, and John Reid, Los Angeles	35 37—72
Ed Dudley, Hollywood, and C. B. Willard, Fort Smith, Ark.	35 37—72
Harry Cooper, Buffalo, and L. D. Cooper Jr., Hot Springs	36 37—73
Al Watrous, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Sam Rice, Washington	37 36—73
John Golden, Paterson, N. J., and J. A. Dickinson, Little Rock	38 35—73
Joe Kirkwood, Albany, Ga., and T. K. Martin, Hot Springs	38 36—74

MISS HOLLAND GAINS ST. AUGUSTINE FINAL

Grants Miss Hopwood 5 Strokes and Wins, 2 and 1—Mrs. Weber Defeats Miss Clark.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 9.—Miss Lillian Holland of New York, winner of the qualifying medal today again evaded the jinx that pursues the medalist in the semi-final round of the first annual St. Augustine championship tournament for women. Granting an allowance of five strokes to her opponent, Miss Holland defeated Miss Edith Hopwood of Uniontown, Pa., by 2 and 1. In the other half of the draw, Mrs. Harold Weber scored by 1 up over Miss Mary Clark of Minneapolis.

A six-foot putt on the seventeenth settled the issue in favor of Miss Holland. Her medal round was 44—47—91 to her rival's 49—51—100. On the second and third holes, both rimmed the cups with long putts. Miss Hopwood after being trapped on the fifth, sank a twelve-footer.

Miss Holland drove the eighth green, this hole being only 135 yards, where she took a par 3. She sank a long putt to win the tenth. Miss Hopwood displayed a tendency to over-putt, for which she made up with her long drives and steady approaches.

The cards:

Out—
Miss Holland	5	5	5	6	4	5	6	5	5—44
Miss Hopw'd	7	5	5	6	3	7	7	4	5—49
In—
Miss Holland	3	6	6	7	5	6	6	4	5—47—91
Miss Hopw'd	5	6	6	6	6	7	5	6	5—51—100

PLAN SPEED CLASSIC FOR WOMEN DRIVERS

Outboard Motor Boat Race to Be Held in Connection With Detroit Regatta.

The first national championship speed classic ever staged solely for women outboard motor boat drivers will be inaugurated this Summer in connection with the Detroit regatta on Labor Day in Detroit, according to an announcement yesterday by the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers through The Associated Press.

Each woman driver will represent her own city in this national contest. The nation's leading woman outboard driver at present is Miss Helen Hentschel of Whitehouse Landing, L. I., who holds the mile trial record for Class G motors of 30.516 miles an hour and the mile trial record for Class B motors of 25.593 miles an hour.

The New England Outboard Motor Boat Association will select the woman outboard driver to represent Boston in the speed classic.

ROBERTS TRIUMPHS IN MIAMI GOLF PLAY

New Yorker Forced an Extra Hole to Beat Henkle, 1-Up, in Invitation Tourney.

SAPPENFIELD WINS, 4 AND 2

Medalist Has Little Difficulty Defeating Dockerty—Bob Shawkey Is Victor.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9.—Three extra-hole matches in the first sixteen added interest to the first round of competition today in the Miami-Biltmore invitation tournament on the east and west courses of the country club at Coral Gables. In one of them a New York player was a winner, Charles A. Roberts scoring over R. P. Henkle of Pittsburgh, 1 up.

R. E. Sappenfield of Coral Gables, the twenty-year-old star who won the qualifying medal from a record field of more than 150 starters, experienced little difficulty in winning his match from George Dockerty of Miami. His margin was 4 and 2.

Roberts faces another troublesome opponent tomorrow, as he is drawn against James W. West of Atlanta, who has set several amateur course records in the vicinity during the current season. Today the Georgian overcame the Boston veteran, C. S. Annis, by 4 and 2. Roberts is in the lower half of the draw, while Sappenfield is in the upper section.

A number of New York players scored in their matches today, among them being Bob Shawkey, the veteran pitcher of the Yankees. The ball player registered one of the easiest victories of the day, winning in the fourth division from A. J. Jones of Chicago by 6 and 4.

MRS. HILL REACHES MIAMI BEACH FINAL

Missouri State Champion Eliminates Mrs. Webster, 5 and 4, in Annual Tournament.

MRS. E. BROPHY LOSES, 4-3

Trails Mrs. Prout in Other Semi-Final—Mrs. Hubbell and Mrs. Haywood Also Triumph.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9.—The East was eliminated from further competition in the annual Miami Beach golf tournament for women over the course of the Bay Shore Country Club today when Mrs. W. A. Webster Jr. of Boston, former Miami titleholder, was defeated in the semi-finals.

Mrs. Webster was drawn against the medal winner, Mrs. O. S. Hill, Missouri State champion, who continued her victorious march with another easy triumph, winning 5 and 4.

Mrs. Hill, rated among the first ten women players in America, was never down to her opponent at any stage of the match. The Kansas City star established a winning margin on the first nine holes, being 3 up at the turn.

The victor in the other semi-final was Mrs. Harold Prout of Springfield, Ohio, who registered an upset by defeating Mrs. Edward M. Brophy, another former Miami Beach winner, by 4 and 3.

Mrs. Raymond Hubbell of the metropolitan delegation in the tournament, beat another Long Island player, Mrs. John Brophy of Montauk, by 4 and 2 in the second flight. Mrs. Hubbell will engage in an international match tomorrow, playing Mrs. P. K. Haywood of Canada, the other second flight victor. Mrs. George Nicols of the Lakeville Golf and Country Club won her final in the fourth flight.

The summaries:

First Sixteen—Semi-Final—Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, defeated Mrs. W. A. Webster Jr., Boston, 5 and 4; Mrs. Harold Prout, Springfield, Ohio, defeated Mrs. Ed Brophy, Cincinnati, 4 and 3.

Second Sixteen—Semi-Final—Mrs. Raymond Hubbell, Garden City, L. I., defeated Mrs. John Brophy, Montauk, L. I., 4 and 2; Mrs. P. K. Haywood, Toronto, Canada, defeated Mrs. J. H. Jefferson, Utica, N. Y., 3 and 4.

Third Sixteen—Semi-Final—Miss Florence G. Wells, Kenosha, Wis., defeated Mrs. Monroe E. Miller, Washington, D. C., 4 and 3; Mrs. A. M. Martin, Hollywood, Fla., defeated Mrs. Henry G. Rogers, Lake Forest, N. Y., 2 up.

HALSELL WINS TOURNEY.

Tops Field in Senior Golf at Belleair, Fla., With a 75.

BELLEAIR, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Leading the field with a gross of 79, Hugh Halsell of Dallas, Texas, added the senior tourney of Belleair to his long string of golf triumphs today. Halsell holds the championship of the Senior Golf Association of the United States.

Low net for the tournament, which was a one-day event, went to E. A. Gordon of Boston, whose gross was 88, but who had a handicap of 21 strokes, giving him a 67.

Runner-up honors in the gross score went to David N. Hallman, senior champion of Minnesota, who turned in an 83. H. L. Edwards, 72 years old, of Dallas, Texas, who in 1906 was Lone Star State champion, turned in a 92.

NOT AS ADVERTISED.

Publication by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of the text of the new treaty of arbitration with France discloses that document as a very modest performance. There would be no ground for disappointment with it had not vivid expectations been raised of something much more epoch-making. What we have now, in the place of a positive agreement to renounce war, is little more than the expression in the preamble of a pious hope, not binding on either party, that an example may have been set by the "condemnation of war," as between the United States and France, which will lead in time to eliminating forever the possibility of war anywhere in the world. The articles of the treaty itself are conceived in a broad spirit, with the obviously honest intention of preventing any dispute between the two countries from issuing in hostile measures. Every controversy, of whatever nature it may be, is to be arbitrated or adjudicated. But the treaty is compelled to exclude questions purely within the domestic jurisdiction of either nation, or which involve either the Monroe Doctrine or the obligations laid upon France by the Covenant of the League of Nations.

This arbitration treaty is said to be the model which our State Department is now offering to other nations. It has been proposed to Japan. The guarded statement of the British Foreign Secretary, Sir AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, makes it clear that a similar agreement has been laid before the British Government. In view of all that has gone before, it is not surprising that no great enthusiasm for the new scheme of arbitration has been aroused in England. Hopes were pitched too high by reports of the great move forward which France and America were going to make, to leave people satisfied with what they regard as a result greatly cut down below the promises. They may even think it better not to pin so much confidence to any written form of agreement as to the tacit understanding which binds two countries in the position of Great Britain and the United States to keep the peace with each other. There is undoubted force in Sir AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN'S declaration that a great safeguard of international security lies in the fact that war between Great Britain and America is "unthinkable." Unluckily, it is not the thinkers about war who rush into it.

The outcome of the long negotiations with France deepens the impression that our State Department has been too casual and inconsequent in the diplomatic notes which it has written and the public statements which it has made. It met the French proposal of a clear-cut agreement to outlaw war with a benevolent but indefinite plan to include all nations in a multilateral treaty renouncing war as an instrument of national policy. When this project proved to be too vague and too grandiose, it was dropped; and then the process of whittling down even the first limited offer of France began. The inevitable effect upon public opinion of both countries and of the outside nations has been that of a steady diminuendo. The case of the treaty is not unlike that of the abolition of submarines, as proposed by Secretary KELLOGG. He explains now that it was never intended very seriously; that his letter was only a routine reply to a request for information by a committee of Congress, which he did not even know would be made public. But in fact it was printed, and went echoing round the world as if it represented a settled policy of our Government. Such misunderstandings and mischances, too often repeated, cannot fail to raise queries concerning the consistency and caution of American diplomacy as conducted today.

ALL SHOULD BE QUESTIONED.

Ever since the elder LA FOLLETTE began his Teapot Dome inquiries, and especially since Senator WALSH of Montana uncovered the Continental Trading Corporation's profits, there has been a persistent story that a national political organization was the final recipient of the bulk of these profits, in the form of bonds. Since the Republican National Committee and the Democratic National Committee are the only major national political organizations, the rumor went in their direction. And since the Republican committee quickly wiped out its huge deficit of 1920, and the Democratic committee is always broke—or nearly so—the story centred on the former. Now, having exhausted every other effort to discover the final lodgment of the Continental's missing bonds, Senator WALSH proposes to call WILL H. HAYS and GEORGE WHITE, who were the respective National Chairmen in the 1920 campaign, and ask them the direct question.

Previously political officials had been asked whether the grateful oil interests—grateful for the 1920 Republican nominations and for parts of the Harding Cabinet—presented them with any stocks. Now the trail leads to bonds. The public feels with Senator WALSH that the Continental deal was very queer, even though the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and its subsidiaries are as certain the oil was "a good buy" as the Sinclair interests are certain it was "a good sell." Some of the bonds have been traced to former Secretary FALL; two material witnesses, O'NEIL and BLACKMER, have fled the country rather than testify; Colonel STEWART'S unwillingness to answer all of Mr. WALSH'S questions about the deal has brought the Senate contempt machinery into play against him, and the real inwardness of the Continental's coup, as well as the complete disposition of its colossal, one-day profits, is generally felt to require much more explanation. Every possible obstacle has been put in the path of Senator WALSH, but he has surmounted many of them, and public opinion is behind him in the wish to learn finally all about the evil alliance between parts of the oil industry and the public service.

When we say every possible obstacle, we must not forget the shining exception of JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER Jr. As Chairman of the Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, which controls the stock of the Indiana Standard, he did all in his power to persuade Colonel STEWART to appear and to answer all questions. He alone of the great powers in the oil industry has shown an appreciation of the fact that the imperial commerce which his father largely erected is on trial for its morals. His testimony at Washington, no matter what its context, will be in spirit a refreshing contrast to the general run of behavior in Teapot Dome witness chairs.

COSTES AND LE BRIX.

Although notice of their coming does not allow much time for preparation, the French aviators, Lieutenant COSTES of the army and Lieutenant LE BRIX of the navy, should have a reception in New York worthy of their wonderful tour of South, Central and North America after flying from Paris to St. Louis, Senegal, and thence across the South Atlantic to Port Natal. Like our own LINDBERGH, they are masters of the art of flying. He is especially distinguished by his title of the Lone Eagle. These Frenchmen have ranked him as the greatest of aviators, but this tribute should not blind us to their own merits.

In the handling of a plane there can be little to choose between the skill of LINDBERGH and that of the veteran COSTES, who made non-stop flights from Paris to Siberia and to Persia, before entering upon his latest adventure. The four-continent flying tour of the French pair could hardly have been undertaken by one man in a small machine. The Breguet which they have used requires the attention of two men. It is a big and powerful biplane, and had been flown 40,000 miles before the "good-will" flight to the Americas, in which more than 20,000 miles already have been covered. When one considers that the French comrades began by making a non-stop flight of 2,000 miles to Senegal, were the first to cross the Atlantic from east to west (others had made intermediate landings), and visited the principal cities of South America on both coasts and in the interior, afterward Guatemala and the City of Mexico before coming to the United States, they must be regarded as among the foremost pathfinders in the air.

Not even the accomplished PINEDO, who made a four-continent flight, has quite matched COSTES and LE BRIX. Nothing stands ahead of their performance except the achievement of Lieutenant SMITH and his companions in making the circuit of the world. Major DARGUE'S army fliers toured Central and South America and the West Indies, but they were not called upon to cross the Atlantic. COSTES and LE BRIX have written their names high in aeronautics. They are of the same mold as CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, who would have been delighted to welcome them if he had been in Washington. Leaders in commercial aviation should greet the visitors with particular satisfaction. They brought across the Atlantic a sack of mail and distributed it in South America. It is the purpose of France to put on an air service between Paris and Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires. The Frenchmen have carried the gospel of good-will wherever they have flown in the Americas. New York still has time to prepare for them a reception commensurate with their great achievement.

MID-WEST REPUBLICAN MORALS

Righteousness and peace—except with Great Britain—have kissed each other in Illinois. Governor SMALL and Mayor THOMPSON have entered into a treaty for the benefit of Chicago and the Commonwealth. The Hon. WILLIAM LORIMER blesses the fair conjunction. The Cook County machine and the down-State machine combine for the suppression of Governor LOWDEN'S candidacy, a third term for LEN SMALL, and the further magnification of Big BILL. Governor LOWDEN enters his name for the Presidential preference primary at the very moment when the master of Chicago and the master of down-State conclude an offensive and defensive alliance against him. His hopes lay down-State. But Illinois Republicanism is nothing if not disciplined. His prospects in his own State are not sureate, unless his union with Senator DENEEN be stronger than it looks.

Negotiations have been going on for some months between the High Contracting Powers. THOMPSON is only a shade less implacable toward Mr. LOWDEN than to GEORGE V. The Governor naturally feels that his shining record should be vindicated against the intrusion of the courts. This moral demonstration was impossible without the cooperation of the Thompson First movement. It is understood that Senator SMITH will throw off his martyr's robes, resign and be a candidate for renomination in the April primaries. The scrupulous conscience, the devotion to honest government, the avoidance of even the suspicion of corrupt practices, the pure politics and methods of Illinois Republicanism, have been majestically illustrated in the last few years. It is good to know that there is to be no lowering of the lofty standard. SMALL SMITH and THOMPSON will work together for the maintenance of ideals whose reflected radiance gilds the citadel of national Republicanism.

In this hour when the sleepless virtue of Illinois is about to make even stronger efforts for goodness and truth, it is pleasant to think of an Indiana statesman who will be cheered in his afflictions by the news from Illinois. Governor JACKSON, indicted for bribery and denied the benefit of the statute of limitations, is detained in court. Should he be acquitted, would he not be an admirable candidate for Vice President? Even if, by the conspiracy of his adversaries, he should be convicted, he will still be a witness and sufferer in the cause of Republican good government. These Republican persecutions strengthen the moral fiber of the party. They should be tenderly commemorated in the Kansas City platform.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, celebrating tonight its fiftieth anniversary, may look back upon an honorable and useful career and forward to a bright prospect of its continuance. It has done its share in bringing about the remarkable growth of interest in orchestral music that has taken place in this country. Its beginnings were in the days of small things. There was the Philharmonic Society in New York, founded thirty-six years before; THEODORE THOMAS conducted his own orchestra in New York and the Brooklyn Philharmonic; there were a few other organizations elsewhere, as the Harvard Musical Association in Boston, the Musical Fund Society in Philadelphia.

LEOPOLD DAMROSCH came to New York from Breslau in 1871 to be conductor of the Arion, a German male chorus. His ambition led to the founding of the Oratorio Society in 1874 and the New York Symphony Society in 1878. There was good reason to suppose that New York could support at least two orchestras. The new orchestra, like its older rival, gave six concerts a year, with "public rehearsals." There were rivalry and opposition, as there always are when well-established musical arrangements are dislocated. There was partisanship, more or less fierce, as there always is when rival conductors are in the field. Music, one of the arts that mollify manners, reaches this end sometimes in strange and devious ways. The new orchestra justified its existence not only by its own performances but also as a valuable adjunct of the Oratorio Society. At Dr. DAMROSCH'S untimely death, in 1885, he was succeeded by his son WALTER; and partisanship was stirred even more violently by the change. The younger DAMROSCH was considered too inexperienced for such a responsible post; but talent, ability and energy were his, and he carried the organization on successfully till his resignation this season, though there were several interims and a reorganization was necessary.

In later years the New York Symphony Orchestra, bulwarked by the generosity of Mr. H. H. FLAGLER, has taken its part in the great multiplication of orchestral performances demanded by a population growing in numbers and in musical appetite. It has indulged in guest conductors; it has been among the most enterprising in keeping abreast with the newer developments in music; in its "Young People's Concerts," carrying on an idea conceived by THEODORE THOMAS, it has done a useful work in implanting the love of music in oncoming generations. It has contributed its share in supplying musical nutriment to other cities and communities all over the country. It made a distinguished achievement in its European trip a few years ago. It has, in fact, accumulated honors that entitle its fiftieth anniversary to be observed as one of the notable events in the history of the city and of the country.

ENGLAND IN 1928.

It is indicative of quieter times in Great Britain that the outstanding recommendation in the King's Speech to Parliament should deal with the "flapper's" vote. Reduction of the voting age for women from 30 to 21 is a foregone conclusion. The background for the new session of Parliament is the improvement in economic conditions. Trade has shown a marked revival and has been accompanied by a decrease in unemployment. At the turn of the year the number of idle workers was something short of 1,200,000, or a decrease of nearly a quarter of a million from the preceding December. The unemployment rate is lower than in any year since 1920. It is not very much more than one-half of the black year 1921, when nearly 18 per cent. of English workers were idle. Weekly wages are about 75 per cent. above the pre-war level. The hourly wage would be still higher because the workday has been shortened in nearly all industries. The cost-of-living index is only two-thirds of the high peak in 1920.

This may be called the positive factor in a relaxation of temper which made last year notable in the recent history of British industry. Not even in the war years was industry subjected to so little interruption by disputes between employers and workers. The negative factor is the lesson learned by employers and workers alike from the long years of industrial strife culminating in the General Strike of 1926. The class-war theory and impulse have spent themselves. The Communist International at Moscow mourns the decline of the British Communist movement. There is now under way a great consultation between the representatives of capital and labor on ways and means for stimulating foreign trade for the benefit of both parties. British Labor has been behind the labor movement in several other countries in recognizing that the problem does not consist in securing for the worker his "just share" of the profits of industry. The profits must first be there. By now the truth has established itself.

Unless there be a second battle of the Prayer Book, the new session does not promise much drama. RAMSAY MACDONALD deduces from the "meagre" recommendations in the King's Speech that the session is intended as a holiday for the Conservative Party. That would seem to rest in the hands of the two Opposition parties. They will probably find occasion for the opening moves toward the next general election. That it will not come before 1929 seems now certain. Recent by-elections have shown the Conservatives holding their seats, though by reduced majorities.

THE FARM CYCLE.

The old farm cycle in the corn belt used to be made graphic by the story of the farmer who bought land to raise corn, to feed hogs, to buy more land, to raise more corn, to feed more hogs. But the farmer no longer revolves in this expanding circle. He has generally had difficulty of late in maintaining profitably even the diameter and circumference of whatever circle of farm land he cultivated a few years ago. But a report from Professor O. R. SWEENEY of Iowa State College, in the midst of the corn belt, gives hope that the farmer may some day find profit without expansion of his acres if only he makes the most of his corn—more than if he fed it all to hogs.

If the two hundred million tons of cornstalks and the million tons of corncobs which now go to waste annually were utilized in ways suggested as a result of experimental studies made by the chemists and engineers, a billion dollars of new wealth would be gathered out of the cornfields. The following are some of the useful products into which these unharvested stalks and discarded cobs might be converted: paper of several grades, papier-mâché, wall-board and other substitutes for building lumber and even for hardwoods for furniture, rayon, acetic acid, acetone, sugar for the special use of those afflicted with diabetes, a synthetic "maple syrup," oxalic acid, plastic materials, electrical and heat insulation, and furfural.

To this catalogue of converted cornstalks and corncobs Professor SWEENEY adds other "sweet uses" to which the farmer's adversity may be put if only he avails of the chemists' advice. Furfural, whose price has been reduced from $50 to 14 cents a pound, offers to serve the needs of man in many ways, from antiseptics and anesthetics to embalming fluid and fuel oil, and would even undertake to furnish a more brilliant flame for his lamp than kerosene, without its unpleasant odor.

The engineer will be needed to make possible the economical gathering and storing of stalks and cobs, and the soil physicist will probably insist upon rotation of crops and the use of the soya bean to renitrify the soil, the income from the oil partially offsetting in the fallow years the loss of income from corn. But with this fertilization there would be prospect of a perpetual forest, replacing itself almost yearly. This relieves some anxiety about the day after tomorrow, for there are still problems of collecting the raw materials and of financing, and the new cycle cannot, therefore, be entered upon tomorrow—a cycle which the chemist conspiring with the sun should soon be able to establish for the unofficial aid of the farmer.

VENTILATING THE CAPITOL.

From time to time Senators and Representatives worry about the air they breathe. Opportunities for ridicule in the spasmodic attempts to ventilate the legislative halls at Washington are plenty. But the problem has a serious side. Not long ago a House committee reported that thirty members had died since 1922, their health undermined, in many cases, "possibly from improper ventilation." Now a specialist has been called in. Professor WILLARD, head of the mechanical engineering department of the University of Illinois, will try to diagnose the trouble and suggest a remedy.

Newspapers will have an interest in Professor WILLARD'S research. Their Washington correspondents, doomed to long sessions in the press galleries, know the effect on mind and spirits of prolonged exposure to that stale and stuffy atmosphere. They envy the hardihood of Mrs. LONGWORTH and Mrs. MCCORMICK and other frequenters of the galleries whose eyes and wits still sparkle after listening to a five hours' debate. Senators have been criticized for wandering around the floor and in and out of the cloakrooms while their colleagues are speaking, but very likely that is nature's instinctive response to health needs, like the pacing of lions up and down their cage.

Probably Professor WILLARD will tell them that the trouble with the air is not so much that it is stale as that it is lifeless. Circulation is the modern scientific maxim. According to the report of a New York commission, the ill effects of poor ventilation—"rise in body temperature, increased pulse rate and respiration, decreased blood pressure and vaso-motor tone, markedly diminished working efficiency"—are due generally to warm, moist and motionless atmosphere. Put a group of people in a sealed chamber and they will soon feel uncomfortable enough, but their discomfort will not be relieved even if they are allowed to breathe pure air through tubes from the outside. The victims of the Black Hole of Calcutta, according to the modern theory, died of heat stroke, not of oxygen starvation.

Members of the House of Representatives have a gymnasium all their own, but that alone does not seem to have pointed the way to health. Senator BORAH doubtless owes much of his vigor to his morning rides in Rock Creek Park. He comes to the Senate Chamber fresh, and its air does not daunt him. His colleagues would be better off for a like indulgence.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

The Science of Home-Making.

Home-making has become a profession, as specialized in its various departments as any of those requiring years of university study. Many colleges are including courses for the young woman who expects to marry and manage her home as efficiently as her husband will handle his business. Home economy is seriously studied by others who find employment with corporations or with organizations for social welfare.

Miss WINIFRED GIBBS, who died this week, was a pioneer worker in the field. She was the originator of many movements for the improvement of the home. As the founder of the home economy department of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor she trained many students. Numberless ignorant immigrant housewives have benefited by her labors.

The preparation of food, budgeting of household accounts, wise buying of all equipment for the home and a number of allied subjects are the object of intensive study by many women today. To spread knowledge of this kind among the women who need it most is the work of those who are following Miss GIBBS'S footsteps.

Beating the Lights.

Every reform brings some evil in its wake, and part of the price this city pays for its modern system of traffic control is the vicious habit of trying to "beat the lights." THE TIMES is in receipt of this letter from an anonymous correspondent:

Will you please do us a great favor before we have quite a number of accidents to our families? When the red light is flashed on the down side of Broadway and Eighty-fifth Street, instead of the automobiles stopping at the north side of the street they rush past, to the detriment of pedestrians in crossing, and then laugh at the scare they give us.

"Detriment" is putting it mildly. There are corners where, under present conditions, the pedestrian has difficulty in finding his way across at all in safety, and his efforts are fraught with added danger if drivers do not strictly obey the warnings of the traffic signals.

The practice also endangers other automobiles. Reckless chauffeurs speed up to beat the lights and thus are all the more of a menace even to the most careful drivers.

Smoking for Revenue.

In the case of English and American women it may be true that they smoke because it is the fashion, because there are no end of pretty gadgets in the business of smoking, or merely because they enjoy it. Not so with the women of France. They smoke as a patriotic duty.

A few years ago the Director General of the Tobacco Service of France deliberately undertook to induce women to become consumers of tobacco in order to increase the profits from the State monopoly. A "whole series of light cigarettes of a high order" were prepared to inveigle the ladies. They are daintily packed in irresistibly pretty boxes. And women began to smoke them, to the benefit of the Treasury.

It is curious that no American tourist returned from France has ever brought word of this tempting line of mild cigarettes for ladies. He remembers vividly the red, yellow and blue packages and will describe vividly and with real feeling their violent and noxious flavor. Most Americans after one encounter with French cigarettes will abjure tobacco—temporarily.

If these are the "light" smokes to which the Director General refers, then Frenchwomen must indeed be devoted daughters of France to accept the disagreeable duty of smoking them. If Government factories could mix a smoother blend, they might find patriotism and cigarette consumption mounting together.

A Cat May Look at a Press Agent.

Everybody knows that visitors to California cannot remain long in the vicinity of Hollywood without becoming infected with some form of movie fever. To their credit be it said that not many of them are bitten with the longing for fame, otherwise known as publicity. Animals living in Los Angeles appear to be subject to the disease in its worst form. Apparently they have knowledge of Rin-tin-tin and other wealthy animal stars, for they devise competitive stunts.

Fuzzie, a temperamental cat whose exploits have annoyed his master because of the resulting publicity, was subdued for some months. Recently he has been up to his old tricks. He climbed a tall oak, wedged his head firmly between two boughs, and let go. His screams and wiggles brought a large audience of millionaires. The police, the fire department and the pound-master came to the rescue with ladders and saws, and Fuzzie was released. Next day his picture was in all the papers.

His last previous escapade, being more underground, did not yield so much notoriety for him. He canned himself in a metal drainpipe, from which he had to be extricated with a can-opener. Movie "artists" sometimes go to ridiculous lengths for publicity, but Fuzzie's adventures beat them all.

Metering the Water Supply.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the proposed increased water rates, while it is true that all communities which are controlled by corporations have increased their rates for the use of water, in every municipality where the water supply is owned and controlled by the city itself the rates have remained stationary or have been reduced. In Jersey City the metered rate is 90c per 1,000 c. f.; in Newark, N. J., $1 per 1,000 c. f., and if over a certain quantity is used there is a reduction of from 5 to 45 per cent. In Philadelphia the rate is 90c per 1,000 c. f.

It is true that the city is not getting the revenue from its water supply that it should, and it is due to methods which have been in vogue for years. For instance, a hotel is equipped with a refrigeration plant, and the water supply is metered, while a modern apartment house, equipped with a refrigeration plant, pays a year rate for a bath, &c., and the ice plant is charged according to its output.

A method by which the city could secure additional revenue without increasing the rates would be to revise the code relating to buildings above six stories where there are high-pressure plants, ice plants, &c., which are not metered.

HUSBAND.

Walking the smoky highways of his town,
He held but little worth! A stranger there
Would hardly have been awed by his renown;
And even he himself could scarcely bear
Illusion of his valuable estate.
Yet night by night the transformation came
When darkness brought him home to his own gate,
Giving him back the woman with his name.

Then he would grow and grow until he seemed
To have to bend to clear the ceiling's rim.
Outside, his only fame was what he dreamed—
But here, because of what she thought of him,
Suddenly he always felt himself to be
Of monstrous value to Eternity!

DIGNIFYING NATURALIZATION

More Impressiveness Should Attend Making of Citizens.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was deeply impressed with THE TIMES editorial "Naturalization." I think the suggestion to have an impressive ceremony for making an American citizen out of the foreign born, rather than the perfunctory method which has been in vogue for so many years and under haphazard conditions, is most excellent and timely. Recently a newly made citizen complained bitterly to me about being obliged to wait for hours in a drafty corridor until his turn came. He described the barrenness of the building and the lack of dignity of the proceedings to which he had looked forward as the goal of five years of longing and waiting.

I feel keenly that, as the editorial says, an appropriate "Naturalization Building" should be erected and that the ceremonies of making the candidate a citizen be as impressive and sacred as such an important event in one's life could be made.

I am reasonably sure that, with the many prosperous American citizens of foreign birth who have enjoyed the privileges and advantages which this great country offers to the immigrant, it would not be difficult to collect sufficient funds for such a naturalization building. It should be beautiful and impressive on the exterior, and within the walls could be decorated with the portraits of the men and women of foreign birth who, after having become American citizens, have distinguished themselves in science, arts, commerce, philanthrophy or the various professions and trades. Thus the naturalization building might become at the same time a "Hall of Fame" of citizens born in other countries, but who as Americans had worked and lived for the glory of their adopted fatherland and for humanity at large.

The editorial is right when it says: "It would be worth in better citizenship all it would cost in money to have here in this port of entry and place of rebirth for millions as the years go on a Naturalization Building in which those who seek to become as those who are native to the land may be received with proper attention and impressive ceremony."

SHOULD PLEASE BOTH SIDES

Comfort for Wets and Drys Seen With Smith in White House.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I differ with THE TIMES editorial, "An Irrepressible Issue," in which it is said: "It also will make a great difference whether a President is elected who is known to be against prohibition, rather than one who is avowedly and enthusiastically for it."

The reference is to Mr. McAdoo's late attack on Governor Smith, but why expect the Governor to meddle in the enforcement of a Federal law any more than for Mayor Walker to send men to the New York steamship docks to aid Custom Inspectors in their work? "Hands off," the Government would say, "this is our job."

But if Governor Smith were elected President it may well be imagined that in his inaugural address he would express his personal disapproval of prohibition, at the same time stating it being among the laws he has now sworn to uphold he will enforce it, and many, no doubt, believe he would do so with far greater strictness and success than has the present Administration, for it would be in accord with his absolute honesty and sincerity, which has for so many years been convincingly demonstrated to the people over whom he has presided.

As a Prohibitionist I trust I am expressing the general opinion of non-fanatics in being content to leave it to Congress to prevent elimination of the Eighteenth Amendment or any change in the Volstead act. The comfort for the wets would be that any action of Congress to the contrary would no doubt receive President Smith's approval. This seems a fair compromise assuring a united Democracy to elect him.

RELIEF FOR UNEMPLOYED.

Bread Lines Are Growing and Financial Aid Is Needed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The amount of unemployment at the present time has created a heavy additional relief problem for the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. While the main problem of unemployment cannot be solved by a family welfare organization, we inevitably have to provide food and other necessities to a considerably increased number of women and children in families in which unemployment brings distress. Nearly one-half of our present applications are requests for relief because of such situations.

No matter what be the cause, we cannot turn away applicants who are in actual need. If we do not, it requires additional expenditure of funds. We need now an increase of at least 10 per cent. in donations to meet this situation.

CORNELIUS N. BLISS.
New York, Feb. 8, 1928.

Applicants Are Worthy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am greatly relieved to know that Governor Smith is taking steps to relieve the unemployment situation in our city.

The numbers of unemployed that frequent the Bowery have risen rapidly for months, until they reached a point seven weeks ago where the Bowery Mission felt compelled to establish a bread line. This is the first bread line we have had in seven years. About 1,200 men are fed each day. Many of these men are from outside the city, a large minority coming from New England, due undoubtedly to the demoralized conditions prevailing in some New England industries. Many of those in this bread line are evidently men of character and the conspicuous absence of alcohol among the applicants is a further illustration of the legitimacy of their right to relief.

LUDWIG PICKS FOUR GREAT AMERICANS

Historian Selects Edison, Jane Addams, Rockefeller, Orville Wright as Living Leaders.

EXPECTS TO NAME A FIFTH

World Owes Most Gratitude to Electrical Wizard, He Says—Calls Plane Inventor Hero.

Emil Ludwig, the German historian who has written of Emperors and statesmen, has found his four greatest living Americans—and not one is a politician or a public official.

They are Thomas A. Edison, Jane Addams, John D. Rockefeller and Orville Wright.

True to his statement when he landed in New York, that he was interested more in American inventors and business men than in poets, writers or conspicuous officials, Dr. Ludwig finds in these four possible subjects for his next biography, which he has promised will be about an American. He is now on a lecture tour during which he will announce his fifth "greatest living American."

Greatest Debt to Edison.

The four "greatest" are announced by Dr. Ludwig in the March issue of the Red Book Magazine, which also publishes the reasons for his choice. Discussing Edison, who has always fascinated Dr. Ludwig as an inventor and as a man, the German biographer writes:

"If we speculate as to the living being to whom the earth owes the greatest gratitude, no one can compete with Edison. Let one dismiss from his mind everything that Edison has invented, and how much poorer is the earth in happiness, comfort, safety and stimulation!"

Jane Addams's goodness and benevolence have helped to make her great, says Dr. Ludwig.

"Jane Adams," he writes, "looks like goodness personified. What she has built up in Chicago has never been accomplished by any individual in Europe, nor by groups or societies. When she was 20, in the days when Rockefeller and his pupils were starting up from below toward the apex of the social pyramid and swearing to become like those half gods who stood at the very top of it, this girl—a Quaker's daughter—looked down from the middle of her pyramid and saw with horror what forms human existence took on, what sufferings guiltless beings must endure. In the epoch in which the Rockefellers are uniting all their imagination and energies to heap together money and make a power of it, the Addamses are assembling all the strength of their hearts and their heads to collect money and transmute it into human happiness."

Appraisal of Rockefeller.

Then Dr. Ludwig turns to his appraisal of John D. Rockefeller, to whom he pays tribute as "the first to organize on a vast scale both production and disposal."

"He invented nothing, discovered nothing, never threw his life on the scales, gave the world no civilizing agent, and yet he appears a genius although the richest man in the world. For he has founded a new world power, without being a General, a representative of the people, or a dictator—a power more mighty than many a State. Such being must be a man of great combining genius and flashing penetration, who bursts upon the darkness and suddenly illumines it."

From an economic point of view Dr. Ludwig finds Jane Addams's work of less value than Mr. Rockefeller's. "She cannot nourish hundreds of thousands of people, but only hundreds. She cannot build factory cities, but only thirteen houses; and her kindergartens, charity kitchens and workingmen's clubs are surely not as rich and beautiful as is Rockefeller's world-wide benevolence."

Finally Dr. Ludwig judges Orville Wright and finds that the inventor of the airplane and his brother "might have come straight from the pages of Homer."

"Here were heroes, beings who conquered the difficulty of life by spirit and courage," Dr. Ludwig writes. "The sublime quality in Wright is after all not the lightning-flash of genius; it is the immensity of perseverance, the sure faith in reaching the sought-for goal, the courage to risk again and again one's life. This is no man who plans inventively in his laboratory, but a being who makes anew daily tests of his discoveries, ever barely escaping the jaws of death. What is more, the Wrights were without that greatest of all helps to courage—youth. For when they obtained the objective of their desires they were close to 40 years of age."

Deposits in Bank at Manila Form Bulk of His Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

BARNSTABLE, Mass., Feb. 9.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood left personal property valued at $81,692.54, according to an inventory of his estate filed in Probate Court here today by his widow, Mrs. Louise A. Wood, the administrator.

The personal property is itemized as follows: Account with Winslow, Lanier & Co., $5,283.24; with Illinois Merchant Trust Company, $14,017.15; accrued amount due from the Philippine Government, $8,277.12; refund of income tax from the Government, $223.40, and deposits with the International Banking Corporation of Manila, estimated at $56,890.63.

CANAL REVENUES INCREASE.

$186,295,060 in Tolls Collected Since Waterway Was Completed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The Panama Canal has collected $186,295,060 in tolls from 200,741,014 tons of cargo passing through it since its completion in 1914, the War Department was advised today by the Governor of the Panama Canal.

During the first three years the canal did not operate continuously. A steady growth in traffic remarkable in its annual increase has occurred since 1913. The number of transits increased from 1,900 with tolls at $6,107,696 in 1917 to 6,063 transits and tolls valued at $26,321,022 in 1927. Tons of cargo increased from 7,443,610 in 1917 to 20,103,636 in 1927.

PRESIDENT HOST TO LONGWORTHS

Mr. Coolidge Closes State Dinner Season, Entertaining for Speaker and His Wife.

MRS. COOLIDGE HAS A COLD

Chilean Ambassador and Mme. de Davila Give a Dinner for Vice President and Mrs. Dawes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—President Coolidge brought the State dinner season at the White House to a close tonight, entertaining in honor of the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Longworth. Mrs. Coolidge was absent because of a cold.

The dinner company included Senator and Mrs. Robinson, Senator Curtis, Senator David I. Walsh, Representative and Mrs. Garrett, Representative and Mrs. Tilson, Mrs. John Jacob Rogers, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles F. Hughes, General and Mrs. Charles P. Summerall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bosworth, the Rev. John J. Burke, Mrs. Henry C. Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin E. Dodd and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walton Goelet.

Also Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hills, Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Maychoff, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. McChord, the Rev. and Mrs. Jason Noble Pierce, Miss Mary Pollard, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Rinehart, Major E. J. Sampson, Mrs. John D. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, Roy O. West, Colonel and Mrs. U. S. Grant 3d, Colonel and Mrs. James F. Coupal, Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Joel T. Boone, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Dunn, Captain Wilson Brown and Major Alvan C. Sandeford.

The table decorations were of Spring flowers and pink roses.

A musicale in the East Room followed the dinner. Miss Ruth Breton, violinist, and George Hessler, tenor, gave the program. Three hundred additional guests were invited for the music.

Dinner for General and Mrs. Dawes.

The Vice President and Mrs. Dawes were entertained at dinner tonight by the Chilean Ambassador and Señora de Davila. Other guests were Secretary and Mrs. Jardine, Secretary of Labor and Mrs. James Davis, the Mexican Ambassador and Señora de Tellez, Senator and Mrs. King, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Rodman, Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Klein, Professor Edwin Kammerer of Princeton University and Mrs. Kammerer, and the counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Señora de Agacio.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel were hosts tonight at the embassy, the party being a "French Empire" costume ball. The Ambassador received in conventional evening dress and Mme. Claudel in mauve satin, with train of velvet to match, and trimmed with rare lace. Mlle. Marie Claudel wore a costume of red satin and tulle with poppies, and Mlle. Reine Claudel was in a green satin and tulle with camellias. Assisting in receiving were the French aviators, Lieutenant Lebrix and Lieutenant Costes.

The 300 guests were chiefly from the younger married set of the diplomatic circle and personal friends of the young daughters of the hosts. Supper was served at midnight.

ADELE ASTAIRE ENGAGED.

Dancer Now Admits She Is to Wed W. Gaunt Jr. of England.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Evening News says the engagement of Adele Astaire to the young son of a wealthy English business man will be announced shortly. The pair, it adds, have been lunching and dining together in fashionable New York restaurants. It recalls that the reported engagement of Miss Astaire to the son of William Gaunt, a Yorkshire woolen manufacturer and partner of the Shuberts in English theatrical ventures, was denied by Miss Astaire in December.

Miss Astaire declined to see a reporter of THE TIMES last night at the Alvin Theatre. However, she sent out word by the company manager, Harry Bryant, that she was engaged to William Gaunt Jr. Mr. Gaunt, according to Mr. Bryant, is now in America on business for his father. Attaches of the theater report that Mr. Gaunt has been very attentive to Miss Astaire. The wealthy young Englishman was seen in the theatre at every performance of "Funny Face" for several weeks before his departure for Montreal.

AUTOS CRASH IN PARK AV.

Two Women in Taxicab Hurt—Man Dies in New Jersey Accident.

A Packard limousine, speeding to cross Park Avenue at Fifty-fourth Street as the traffic lights were changing, struck a taxicab last night, injuring two women who were in the cab and jarring their escort and the taxi driver. The women were taken to the Lexington Hospital, where they received medical attention.

Mrs. Stewart Sargent, 27 years old, of 375 Park Avenue, suffered a severe laceration of the right eye and cheek, and possibly a fractured right shoulder. Mrs. E. C. McCullough, also of 375 Park Avenue, received lacerations of the legs and possibly fractured ribs. Mr. McCullough, who did not require medical aid, summoned a private ambulance and had the two women removed to the Post Graduate Hospital, where Mrs. Sargent was forced to remain.

The Packard, driven by Charles Kroll, a chauffeur, of New Milford, N. J., is owned by Elmer Blauvelt of Oradell, N. J. Kroll was alone in the car at the time. No arrests were made.

RED BANK, N. J., Feb. 9.—Joseph Bosley Jr., 27 years old, of 64 Locust Avenue, Red Bank, was killed and Miss Mina Johnson, 17, of High Street, Eatontown, was severely injured when an automobile in which they were riding struck the curb on Front Street in a dense fog here early today, overturned and rolled down a thirty-foot embankment.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Feb. 9.—Nearly a dozen passengers in an Asbury Park-Long Branch bus narrowly escaped serious injury this afternoon when the bus was struck by a grocery truck and hurled to the curb, breaking two curbstones. One man was sent to the hospital, but hospital records fail to show that he arrived. The entire right side of the bus was smashed.

Stricken With Appendicitis, Doctor Has Son, 26, Operate

When Dr. John C. Farr, owner of the Farr Sanitarium of Hoboken, suffered an attack of acute appendicitis yesterday morning, he asked that his 26-year-old son, Dr. Walter J. Farr, perform the operation. The youthful surgeon summoned Dr. Edgar Roberts of West New York as an assistant and operated.

The patient, who is in his early fifties, was on the operating table for more than half an hour. He was pronounced out of danger last night.

MALCOLM H. MACLEOD DIES IN HIS SLEEP

Canadian Railway Builder Is Said to Have Laid Out More Mileage Than Any Man in World.

TORONTO, Ontario, Feb. 9 (By The Canadian Press).—Malcolm Hugh Macleod, one of Canada's outstanding railway builders, died in his sleep here last night from heart disease. Mr. Macleod was born in the Isle of Skye, Inverness, Scotland, in 1857, and came to Canada in 1882. He was retired general manager and chief engineer of the Canadian Northern Railway, now merged in the National Railway System.

Mr. Macleod was educated in public and private schools at Franklin, Pa., and New York. Since 1878 he had been engaged in railway construction work.

In 1900 he left the Canadian Pacific Railway to become chief engineer, C. N. R., and was appointed general manager and chief engineer in 1907.

It was said of Mr. Macleod that he had laid out more railway mileage than any other man in the world.

Mr. Macleod began at the bottom of the railroad ladder, working his way through the jobs of axeman, chainman rodman to assistant superintendent of division, assistant chief and superintending engineer. He was made chief engineer of the Crow's Nest Division of the C. P. R. in 1898. From 1900 to 1911 he built for the Canadian Northern 4,100 miles of new lines.

J. S. KELLY, POLITICAL LEADER, DIES AT 69

Made Governors and Mayors Through His Power in Baltimore City.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 9.—John S. Kelly, who with John J. Mahon for many years dominated the Democratic Party in this city, died today of pneumonia at the age of 69.

Death came twenty-nine days after the evening when, surrounded by 400 Democrats, he heard himself proclaimed the party's leader in Baltimore. Mr. Mahon, his senior in years and in leadership, was desperately ill at the time and is still in a critical condition.

Kelly and Mahon made Governors, Congressmen and Mayors of Baltimore City. For years no Democratic candidate for Governor or Mayor could carry Baltimore City unless they so willed it.

Before he became a ward boss Kelly drove a garbage cart. Like Mahon, he never held office. Kelly, who in recent years was a contractor, died rich, but he always made his home in a little two-story brick house in a humble neighborhood, where, where he first developed his political power. He was very charitable. He was born in Philadelphia and was a bachelor.

Governor Ritchie said on hearing of Kelly's death: "He was a real friend to me on many political occasions, and I am sincerely distressed to hear of his death. He was one of the most remarkable men I ever knew. He was kind and generous."

The Rev. John E. R. Folsom.

The Rev. John E. R. Folsom, for many years prominent in religious circles in New Jersey, died at his home, 50 Broad Street, Newark, early yesterday morning. For the last twenty-nine years he was Superintendent of Evangelism of the New Jersey Baptist Convention.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the First Baptist Peddie Memorial Church, Newark. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ella Folsom, his second wife; a son by his first marriage, Romeyn Folsom of Laurelton, N. J.; a brother, Frank B. Folsom of Boscawen, N. H., and four grandchildren. Mr. Folsom was born in Concord, N. H.

Charles Allen Davis.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Feb. 9.—Charles Allen Davis, President of the Parada Coffee Company, 102 Front Street, New York, and one of the best-known brokers in the trade, died today in Mountainside Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Davis was born in Nutley sixty-three years ago and was the son of the late Moses Davis. He was for many years a member of Essex Hook and Ladder Company and a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association.

A widow and one daughter survive him.

William H. Foster.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—William H. Foster, 52, well-known Syracuse attorney and for the last nine years general counsel for the Aetna Life Insurance Company in New York State, died tonight, a few minutes after he was stricken while eating dinner.

Mr. Foster was born Oct. 2, 1875, at Friendship, Allegany County, a son of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Foster. He was graduated in the class of '98 from Albany Law School. He was Deputy Attorney General under Attorney General Edward R. O'Malley and was made general attorney for the Aetna company in 1911.

Clay M. Vance.

Clay M. Vance, veteran theatrical producer, of the old firm of Vance & Sullivan, died suddenly yesterday morning in the Polyclinic Hospital following an attack of indigestion. Of late years he had been in the booking department of the Paramount organization. Services will be held at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon at the Iroquois Hotel. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery.

W. H. THOMPSON, EX-SENATOR, DEAD

A Democrat Sent to Washington From Kansas When Wilson Became President.

HAD SERVED ON THE BENCH

Grew Up on a Farm, Became Court Reporter and Later Lawyer and Judge.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—William Howard Thompson, former United States Senator from Kansas, died at his home here today of heart disease.

Mr. Thompson suffered a heart attack two days ago in his law office and regained consciousness only shortly before his death.

He was a Democrat and served in the Senate from 1913 to 1919. After he left the Senate he practiced law in Kansas City and in Tulsa, Okla. He moved here last Summer.

He was born in Crawfordsville, Ind., on Oct. 14, 1871.

Funeral services will be held here on Monday. Temporary interment will be in a vault in this city.

Taken by his parents as a boy to Kansas, Senator Thompson grew up on a farm. High school and business college fitted him for expert stenographic work and he became a court reporter. He studied law in his father's office, and was admitted to the bar in 1894. After four years as Clerk of the Kansas Court of Appeals, 1897-01, he was elected and re-elected a District Judge by an electorate strongly Republican.

In the year that saw Woodrow Wilson's first Presidential victory Judge Thompson was elected to the United States Senate. The Senator's own brief account of himself at that time noted that "he is the youngest Senator ever elected from Kansas and will be one of the youngest men in the Senate." The little autobiography continued: "He is a disciple of the new school of politics and is classed as a Progressive Democrat."

In winning his Senatorial campaign Mr. Thompson received the largest popular vote ever given any Democrat in Kansas, leading the State ticket by 20,000 and the national ticket by 30,000.

GEORGE VASSAR DIES AFTER AN OPERATION

Builder of Standard Oil Building and Ansonia Hotel Was 70 Years Old.

George Vassar, retired President of the building firm of George Vassar's Son & Co., died yesterday in the Knickerbocker Hospital, 70 Convent Avenue, following an operation. He was 70 years old, a son of the late George Vassar, founder of the firm, and a grandnephew of Matthew Vassar, founder of Vassar College. He lived alone at 433 West Twenty-second Street, where services will be held tomorrow. His wife, who was Helen Price of this city, died in 1916. Two brothers survive, William Jay of this city and Charles Vassar of Chicago.

Among the important structures erected by the Vassar firm were the Standard Oil Building at 26 Broadway, the Charles M. Schwab house at Seventy-third Street and Riverside Drive; the Ansonia Hotel, Seventy-third Street and Broadway; the Alhambra Theatre and the German Hospital.

RICHARD KEARTON DIES.

Naturalist Was Famous for Close-up Pictures of Wild Life.

CATERHAM VALLEY, Surrey, England, Feb. 9 (AP).—Richard Kearton, naturalist, whose writings and photographic close-ups of birds and animals are widely known, died in his home here today at the age of 65.

Richard and his younger brother, Cherry, noted as a naturalist and explorer, worked together for many years. Nothing from ants to elephants escaped their study with motion picture cameras.

Richard was the author of many books on various phases of natural history. He also contributed to newspapers and magazines.

On his visit to Washington in 1908 Mr. Kearton showed his motion pictures of animal life to President Roosevelt at the White House, and the President later accompanied the naturalist in a walk through Rock Creek Park, giving him his first acquaintance with American birds.

Mrs. John R. Dickson.

Mrs. John R. Dickson, a Presbyterian missionary to China, died Wednesday in Toronto, Ontario, following an operation. She had been on furlough since last June on account of her failing health. She left her husband, Dr. John R. Dickson, and five children. Before her marriage in 1914 she was Miss Josephine McConnell of Mattawa, Ontario. She was educated at Toronto University and Wellesley College. She and her husband were appointed missionaries to China in 1918 and assigned to Showchow, Kiangan Mission.

FRANKLIN HANFORD, REAR ADMIRAL, DEAD

Retired Naval Officer Lived to Be 83—Served Nation for Forty Years.

Rear Admiral Franklin Hanford, retired, died on Wednesday night at the family homestead in Scottsville, near Rochester, N. Y., according to word received here by his son, Dr. John Hanford, an associate visiting surgeon at Presbyterian Hospital. The Admiral was 83 years old. He had retired in 1908 after forty years of service to become a farmer on the land which had been in the family for many years.

The Admiral was a descendant of William Bradford of Puritan times, and was born in Monroe County, N. Y., the son of William Haynes and Abbey Pixley Hanford. He was appointed to the Naval Academy from this State and was a midshipman on the old Constitution, then a training ship, during the Civil War. He became an Ensign in 1866 and rose through the ranks until he became a Rear Admiral in 1908, shortly before his retirement.

He had seen service in many stations and ships and had circumnavigated the globe as navigator of the U. S. S. Pensacola from 1881 to 1884, taking observations for determination of the compass variations. During the revolutions in Ecuador and Nicaragua, 1895 to 1897, he protected American interests while in command of the U. S. S. Alert. He commanded the naval station at Cavite, P. I., after the Spanish-American War and was charged with the salvaging of Spanish ships sunk by Admiral Dewey.

He was an ardent book collector, having especially fine collections of naval and local New York history. In 1912 he suffered a stroke of paralysis, which left him practically an invalid, though his mental faculties were as keen as ever.

Besides his son, he leaves a daughter, Ruth, who had been his housekeeper since the death of his wife twelve years ago. Private funeral services will be held at the home-stead at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

CHARLES H. T. WARE DEAD.

Former Member of The Times Staff Dies of Pneumonia at 57.

Charles Henry Totten Ware, who left the editorial news staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES three months ago after five years' service, died yesterday morning at his home, 52 Young Avenue, Pelham, after a week's illness of lobar pneumonia. He is survived by his widow, Alice Burke Ware. Their daughter, Margaret, died in 1926. Funeral services will be held at the Church of the Redeemer in Pelham at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Ware was born in Londonderry, Ireland, Dec. 30, 1870, of English parents. After studying at the University of London he was a reporter for several London newspapers before coming to the United States in 1903. He worked for a brief period in this city before joining the news staff of The Cincinnati Enquirer. From that paper he went to Omaha, then to The Minneapolis Journal, The St. Paul Pioneer Press, to papers in Aberdeen, S. D., and Watertown, S. D., and Chicago. Before he came to THE TIMES in 1923 he had been for several years on The New York Herald. Since leaving THE TIMES Mr. Ware had been fraternal news editor of the Shrine Magazine.

Mr. Ware belonged to Aberdeen Lodge, No. 38, A. F. and A. M., Aberdeen Chapter, No. 14, R. A. M., Damascus Commandery, No. 10, K. T. of Aberdeen, S. D., and Osman Temple, of Mystic Shrine, of St. Paul, Minn.

EUGENE F. WILSON.

Theatrical Manager Found Dead After a Fall in His Home.

Eugene F. Wilson, 59 years old, a well-known theatrical manager, died early yesterday morning after a fall in the bathroom of his home, 501 West 121st Street. He was found dead by his brother, Morgan D. Wilson. An autopsy will be performed today to determine the cause of death.

Mr. Wilson was manager of the old Lyceum Theatre on Fourth Avenue during the regime of Daniel Frohman. For the last fifteen years he managed theatrical attractions for A. H. Woods. Previously he was with the Shuberts. Recently he managed Katharine Cornell in "The Letter" for Messmore Kendall.

Episcopal funeral services will be held tomorrow night at the residence of his brother, Samuel C. Wilson, 135 Brookside Avenue, Mount Vernon. Burial will be in the family plot in Greenwood Cemetery on Sunday morning.

Walter H. Snow.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., Feb. 9 (AP).—Walter H. Snow of this city, Representative in the Legislature from the 24th Middlesex District, died in a hospital here today. He had been in ill health for several years. Mr. Snow, who was 77 years old, was born in West Dover, Vt., but had lived in Massachusetts for many years. He was engaged in the manufacture of ice cream and had been in the Legislature since 1921.

Henry Zuckerman.

Henry Zuckerman, who died at his home, 135 Central Park West, on Wednesday, was head of the brokerage house of Henry Zuckerman & Co., 52 Broadway. He was born in New York sixty-five years ago, had been the floor member of his firm and transferred his seat to his son Paul as recently as December, when he retired from active business. He was also an associate member of the New York Curb Market. Mr. Zuckerman was a member of the Lambs and Lotos Clubs. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Nellie Z. Cohen, and two sons, Paul S. and J. Harvie D. Zuckerman.

Charles Y. Van Doren.

Charles Y. Van Doren, for many years a lawyer in Brooklyn, with offices at 189 Montague Street, died yesterday of heart disease at the home of his sister, Miss Elizabeth Van Doren, 15 Arlington Place, Brooklyn, in his seventieth year. Two daughters also survive. Mr. Van Doren was a graduate of the Columbia Law School. He had held many court positions in Brooklyn, and at one time was active in local Republican politics.

EDWARD FARLEY WHITNEY.

Former Partner in J. P. Morgan & Co. Dies at Age of 77.

Edward Farley Whitney, who was a partner in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. from 1901 until his retirement in 1911, died yesterday at his residence, 27 Park Avenue, of ailments incident to his age, seventy-six years. He was unmarried. Funeral services will be held at 11 A. M. tomorrow in the chapel of Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge, Mass.

After graduating from Harvard in 1871 Mr. Whitney entered the banking business in Boston. His most important affiliation during the next thirty years was with Jacob Rogers & Co. In 1901 he moved from Boston to New York and entered the Morgan firm. He was a member of many clubs, including the Knickerbocker, University, Union, Piping Rock and Turf and Field and the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club.

Stanley Shaffer.

"THE BEST FURNITURE SALE EVER"

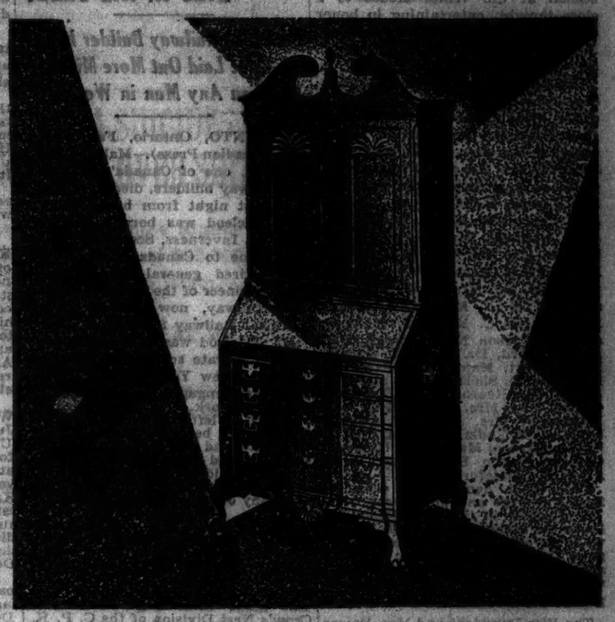
Said the Woman Who was Furnishing Her Home Anew

YES, madam, we feel that the new sale is a great improvement over its predecessors and its imitators . . .

It has the same great volume of Furniture that February Sale visitors look for.

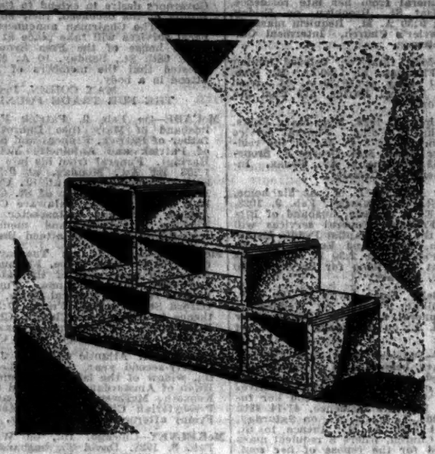
It has the same great variety that appeals to all types of home needs. It has the same price lowerings that make the Wanamaker sale the goal of all who want good furniture at low prices. It has all of the famed sale services and helps for home-makers in perplexity.

And . . . this year it has added services, the added inspiration of Venturus . . . better furniture than ever . . . more open stock selections . . . better values . . .



And . . . the Allied Things of the Home . . . groups of china, crystal, lamps, rugs, draperies, culinary utensils, electrical devices, mirrors, pictures . . . all at lower prices now . . . to correspond to the lower furniture prices . . . making this truly an exposition that no home-maker should miss.

WANAMAKER'S—Fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh galleries, new building



To the Adventurous

The new Venturistic furniture appeals first to the Adventurous—to those who delight in going forward . . . treading new paths . . . And its appeal is widening every day. Its first challenge has met with appreciation and enthusiasm—for the more one lives with it, the more one likes it . . . Have you seen the bookcase—a thing of cubic spaces, practical as the old-time cabinet, but entirely intriguingly different? . . . Or the little mirror-topped tables on which your flowers will become a double burden of loveliness? . . . Or the card table, the beauty of whose wooden top would satisfy the severest critic? . . . It is hard to decide whether the smoking tables or the gay little chairs are the more fascinating . . .

"Venturistic" Furniture is now reproduced for us in America . . . solid and beautiful workmanship . . . at a pleasingly moderate price.

They wanted a crib sent to Haiti

THE boat was to sail at 2, and they came into Wanamaker's at 11.15. A guide from the Export Bureau helped them select the bed that pleased them, and arranged about export charges. Expert packers prepared the daintily painted crib for its long journey, and a special delivery van carried it to the wharf in time for the sailing.

It was a breathless procedure, but it proved what the Export Bureau can do in an emergency. Whether emergency or not, if something is going to a foreign country, the Export Bureau will arrange all the bothersome details for you. HUGE GAS MERGER FOR CITY REVIVED

Wall St. Hears of Progress to Unite Consolidated and Companies in Brooklyn.

CAPITAL OF $1,000,000,000

Project Said to Include Long Island and Westchester—Superpower System.

STOCKS OF COMPANIES RISE

Comparative Values Estimated—Bankers Regard Consolidation as Eventually Inevitable.

Wall Street was filled yesterday with hazy reports of progress in a plan to merge the Consolidated Gas Company, the Brooklyn Union Gas Company and the Brooklyn Edison Company into an organization that would be second in size only to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Interested officials remained silent, but observers of recent stock movements expressed the opinion that factors such as the Walsh utility inquiry in Washington are the only ones hindering completion of the project.

Banking circles for many months have considered a merger of the utilities in Greater New York as inevitable and have believed that their consolidation eventually would make them part of a great superpower system that already runs from Philadelphia through New Jersey and Northern New York to Massachusetts. The base for this system was laid about two years ago in financial operations that were about the most involved of the many involved transactions completed in the utility field in recent years.

Other Territory in View.

It is considered certain in public utility circles that the impending New York City merger would take in all Westchester County, where the Consolidated Gas Company already is entrenched, and also all Long Island. Practically all important utilities from the boundary of Queens to Montauk Point are controlled by interests headed by E. L. Phillips. Two of the three nominally independent utilities in Brooklyn and Queens are controlled by the Phillips interest. The Brooklyn Borough Gas Company is controlled by interests of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia.

United Gas Improvement, which in turn is dominated by the Mellon interests of Pittsburgh, controls the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and with the General Electric Company and the Brady interests it controls the network of the up-State power systems eventually to be merged with the New York utilities. The Mellons have bought heavily into Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Union Gas in the last year. So heavy have their investments been in the utility field that they floated a $25,000,000 bond issue to further these transactions. In any holding company formed to merge New York utilities the Mellons will be represented.

The merger automatically would include the New York Edison Company, one of the largest organizations of its kind in the country, and the United Electric Light and Power Company, as both of these companies are owned by the Consolidated Gas Company.

Staten Island's Prospect.

In Staten Island are the Richmond Light, Heat and Power Company and the Staten Island Edison Company, which would more logically fall into the territory of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey. Financial circles do not see how Staten Island's utilities could remain independent of a merger that embraced all other organizations of the kind on this part of the Atlantic seaboard.

The New York City utility corporation to emerge from the present consolidation plans would, like A. T. & T., have assets of more than $1,000,000,000. Available figures give the Consolidated Gas Company system $740,000,000 of assets; the Brooklyn Union Gas, $93,000,000, and the Brooklyn Edison Company, $158,000,000. The other companies to be included in the merger would bring the total well above the $1,000,000,000 level.

One banker said he had heard the three great New York utilities would be merged through a holding company with stock selling at $50. Three shares or $150 would be given for each Consolidated Gas share, four shares or $200 for each Brooklyn Union share and five shares or $250 for each Brooklyn Edison share.

Quotations of Stocks.

Brooklyn Edison stock sold as high as 235½ this year and closed at 230 yesterday. Brooklyn Union's high is 156¼ and it closed at that level yesterday. Consolidated Gas stock was active and strong yesterday and closed at 137½, a new high record.

The name of the company proposed for the merger of the three utilities has been reported as the "Hudson Security Company" or the "Hudson Securities Corporation." These names apparently refer to the Hudson Stock Corporation, which was formed by the General Electric Company recently to merge two investment companies which it controls. The Hudson Stock Corporation is now dissolved, but for a time it held Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Union Gas stock acquired by one of the merging companies.

One report is that Consolidated Gas stock will be divided and the new shares put on a dividend basis equivalent to $8 annually on the present basis preparatory to the merger. The stock now pays $5. This report has not been confirmed in any authoritative quarter.

First Robins of the Season, Appear at Spuyten Duyvil

A pair of robins, believed to be the first of the year, were noticed yesterday morning by George F. Kearney near his home at 225 Palisades Avenue, the Bronx. They were busy skirmishing around for food when Mr. Kearney saw them and called the attention of other members of his family to the birds.

The familiar and cheerful "chirrup, chirrup" of the birds had been heard on Wednesday, but they were not seen until yesterday morning. Mr. Kearney lives on the high banks above the Spuyten Duyvil station of the New York Central where the Harlem and Hudson Rivers join. That section is well wooded and offers more protection to the birds than would more open sections of the city.

COMPANY TO REVISE GAS CHARGE FORM

Consolidated Will Change New Arrangement Because of Big Customers' Dissatisfaction.

PLANS ELASTIC AGREEMENT

To Allow Contract Alterations to Accommodate the Varying Needs of Heavy Consumers.

The new form prepared by the Consolidated Gas Company last Summer as the basis for gas charges to large consumers is to be revised because some of these consumers have found that the plan, adopted with an idea that it would not only reduce the cost of gas but would encourage greater use of it, has not worked to their advantage. The plan was to charge customers using as much as 100,000 cubic feet of gas a month a rate of about $1.05 instead of $1.15, paid by those using smaller quantities.

William Merrifield, gas engineer of the Public Service Commission, explained yesterday why the plan had not proved generally satisfactory. He said that if a customer who usually needed 100,000 cubic feet of gas a month found that for a period he would need less than 50,000 cubic feet he would be paying at the rate of $1.30 per thousand cubic feet for it, instead of $1.15, which the gas would cost if the new plan had not been agreed to. Discovering that constantly changing conditions made it difficult if not impossible for its customers to determine just how much gas they would need, the company resolved to alter its plan so that an agreement entered into with the customer could be changed any time the latter desired.

Such an amendment to the original plan, Mr. Merrifield said, would be filed with the Public Service Commission within a few days, thus protecting those who have entered into a contract with the company against their own interests. Mr. Merrifield added:

"The public is not aware that a large proportion of the gas business is unprofitable. There is a vast number of people who are supplied with he facilities for using gas but who are virtual non-users. Approximately 50 per cent. of the city's gas consumers are served without profit to the company."

MME. DE PETSCHENKO PLANS TO CLEAR NAME

Threatens Legal Action Today for Aspersions on Her Work for Russian Refugee Aid.

Mme. Bronislawa de Petschenko of 65 East Fifty-fourth Street, whose charitable activities were the subject of inquiry last December, following the sudden postponement of an Oriental ball she had arranged to give at the Park Lane for refugee Russian children in Europe, announced yesterday her intention to vindicate herself.

She also declared that legal action today would follow the statement she issued on Wednesday through her lawyers, Schnitzler, Thorn & Dayton, of 27 William Street, in which she rebutted denials by charity organizations that they had endorsed her work here through letters and pamphlets, and presented treasurers' reports to show an injustice had been done her.

"I have been held up to ridicule and scorn," said Mme. de Petschenko at her home, "and wrongfully accused of diverting charity funds for my own use, when not a single cent ever passed through my hands, because I always had a responsible treasurer. Now I mean to take the proper means to clear up the aspersions that have been woven about my name."

Charles E. Thorn of the law firm said statements had been made against Mme. de Petschenko last December that seriously reflected upon her good name and reputation in the community. Such statements, he said, were without the slightest foundation of fact.

"We are informed," he said, "that the Department of Welfare, after investigation, was entirely satisfied that the activities of the American Committee for Relief and Education of Russian Refugee Children were entirely legitimate, and that Mme. de Petschenko did not profit in the slightest degree. On the contrary, she expended her own funds in an effort to forward the interests of the charity she was endeavoring to assist."

According to the treasurer's reports, and to an accounting submitted by Albert E. Andre, Secretary of the American Committee, to James W. Kelly, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Public Welfare, who inquired into Mme. Petschenko's charity work and gave her a clean slate, the committee sent to Europe for Russian refugee children food, clothing and money amounting to $17,671.23.

48-HOUR FOG LIFTS, BERENGARIA DOCKS

ANOTHER CRASH IN HUDSON

Craft Hits Pier, Hurting Two Women and Two Men—Autoist Killed at Red Bank, Woman Injured.

The fog which hung intermittently over the city and vicinity for forty-eight hours, holding passenger-laden ships in the harbor and disrupting traffic schedules in the city, lifted at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Several accidents, in which one man was killed and two men and three women were injured, were laid to it.

After being delayed in the harbor for more than forty hours, the Cunarder Berengaria finally reached her dock at West Fourteenth Street and landed more than 1,100 impatient passengers. The vessel, under normal weather conditions, would have docked Tuesday afternoon and actually arrived off Sandy Hook soon after noon of that day, but because of the fog the ship anchored off Sandy Hook for several hours and came to Quarantine later.

The municipal ferryboat John A. Lynch, in command of Captain William A. Fisher, was forced aground by the swift currents at Hell Gate off Ninety-second Street in the East River early yesterday morning. Carrying forty passengers, the ferryboat started from her slip at Ninety-second Street at 7:30 bound for Astoria. The fog on the river became suddenly more dense. The ferryboat was proceeding toward midstream when a tug and scow loomed out of the fog. In trying to avoid the scow, the ferryboat was caught in the Hell Gate tide and forced upon the rocks at Eighty-ninth Street on the Manhattan side. There was a slow grinding sound as the ship hit the shelving rocks along the shore.

Passengers were jarred slightly but none was hurt and Captain Fisher signaled for help. Three tugs heard the whistle and came alongside. They tried in vain to pull the ferryboat from the reef but failed. It was decided to wait for flood tide and the William T. Collins, another ferryboat, came alongside and took off the passengers. A few minutes before noon the Lynch was floated off and put back in service after an examination showed she was uninjured.

Crash at Hudson Pier.

Another ferryboat accident attributed to the fog occurred late Wednesday night when the Fort Lee, bound from Edgewater, N. J., for 125th Street, Manhattan, crashed into a city pier 150 feet south of the slip. Four persons were injured, two perhaps seriously.

According to the police who described the crash, the craft was approaching the New York side cautiously with whistles sounding almost constantly. Captain William Holsworth was in command of the ferry boat. Suddenly he saw the vague outlines of the recreation pier. He was too close to stop and as the boat crashed into the end of the pier an interurban bus operated by the Northern Valley Coach Company was thrown forward in the gangway, striking Mrs. Sadie Shanske, 33 years old, of 1,236 Grand Concourse, and Mrs. Bessie Shanske, 28, of 923 Hoe Avenue, the Bronx. The two women are sisters and their husbands are brothers.

The Rev. J. A. Kallman of 673 East 137th Street and Albert Yirengling of 1,842 Amsterdam Avenue were slightly injured when they were thrown to the deck.

The vessel backed away and proceeded to the slip on the New Jersey side, where the injured were treated by Dr. Charles F. Buckley, Edgewater police surgeon. The injured men were allowed to go home, but the women were taken to Englewood Hospital. The extent of their injuries was not determined yesterday.

Man Killed in Auto Accident.

Several other accidents in the metropolitan area were laid to the fog. Joseph Boskey Jr., 27, was killed in an automobile crash in Red Bank, N. J., early yesterday morning. Minnie Johnson, who was with him, was taken to the Woodley Hospital in a dying condition. Boskey became confused at a street intersection and his car plunged across a curbing and into a ditch. He died a few minutes after the accident. According to the Weather Bureau, fog today is unlikely, as westerly breezes are expected to lower the temperature slightly.

LINER ASCANIA HERE, DELAYED THREE DAYS

Captain Reports Gales, Snow, Fog and Heavy Seas—Woman Passenger Is Injured.

The Cunard liner Ascania docked yesterday more than three days overdue from Liverpool and Belfast because of bad weather. The Ascania, which came via Halifax, carried 205 passengers. It also brought several pedigreed dogs for American kennels.

Miss Kate Carlin, who operates large dog kennels in London and who is an authority on pomeranians, was a passenger on the liner. She suffered a fractured rib when she was thrown to the floor of her stateroom on Feb. 1. The vessel was rolling in an unusually heavy sea and Miss Carlin lost her balance. She was treated by Dr. C. Y. Roberts, the ship's surgeon.

Captain W. A. Hawkes, master of the Ascania, said that at times he was forced to reduce the speed of the vessel to four knots because of weather conditions, which included high gales, heavy seas, snowstorms and dense fog. He told of a radio message from the captain of the American freighter Sagaponack requesting medical advice for a seaman who was suffering with appendicitis. While an icy gale of sixty miles an hour raged between the two vessels, which were separated by hundreds of miles, Dr. Roberts advised constant application of ice packs. The ships were in contact on Feb. 2, 3 and 4 and on the last day the condition of the seaman was reported improved.

Sir Normand MacLeod, High Chief Justice of Bombay, India, and his wife, Lady Anna, also arrived on the liner bound for San Francisco. For several hours it was believed they would miss connection with the Panama Pacific liner Finland, sailing at 3 P. M. However, the Ascania docked in time for them to transfer their baggage to the other vessel.

The Finland carried 302 passengers, including Mrs. Christy Mathewson, widow of the baseball player, who is on her way to Hollywood.

The Munargo of the Munson Line also arrived yesterday from Nassau. Among the passengers was Mrs. P. C. Letts of Chicago, recent winner of the women's golf championship of the Bahamas.

Radio Search On for Two Indiana Officers; 2 Prisoners, Now Free, May Have Killed Them

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 9 (AP).—An appeal to broadcasting stations to send out a description of two missing Deputy Sheriffs, Wallace McClure and John P. Grove, was made today by Tippecanoe County authorities. The two men left this city early on Tuesday in charge of two prisoners for the Indiana Reformatory, at Pendleton, sixty miles away. They disappeared with the prisoners while on the way.

Samuel Baxter, 19, and John Burns, 20, the prisoners, were under sentence of from five to twenty-one years for robbery. Burns served a term in the Pontiac (Ill.) prison for burglary.

Baxter and Burns appeared at the home of an uncle of Burns's, two miles south of Danville, Ill., between 9 o'clock and noon on Tuesday morning, a few hours after they had left Lafayette in charge of the deputies. They were alone and were driving the touring car in which the four men left here.

The uncle ordered the men away. Today he read of their disappearance and informed the police of their visit to his home.

It was believed the two Deputies came to harm at the hands of Baxter and Burns. The prisoners were handcuffed together in the rear seat of the automobile when the party left here.

WBAA, the Purdue University broadcasting station, and WLS and KYW, both at Chicago, were to radiocast detailed information about the disappearance of the officers and the prisoners tonight and appeal to farmers in isolated places to make a thorough search of all buildings and woods on their farms in an effort to find some trace of the missing men.

DEFENSE INDICATED FOR GOV. JACKSON

Statute of Limitations Will Be Invoked in Conspiracy Trial of Indiana Official.

SELECTION OF JURY DRAGS

Defendant Sits With His Attorneys During Proceedings, but Does Not Join Their Conferences.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 9.—Extended questioning by both defense and prosecuting attorneys at the trial of Governor Ed Jackson on a charge of conspiracy to bribe slowed up the action here today and caused the removal of three prospective jurors who were tentatively accepted yesterday.

Four of the original panel remained in the box at the conclusion of today's session and both sides have used six of their ten peremptory challenges.

S. C. Kivett, the chief defense attorney, questioned each talesman regarding the statute of limitations, on which the defense clearly indicated it would rely, in addition to entering a general denial. All the talesmen said they were favorable to the law regarding limitations and would require the State to prove concealment of the alleged conspiracy before voting for a conviction.

The question of the statute of limitations came into the case while Oscar H. Montgomery of Seymour was serving as the Special Judge, before the defense got a change of venue. A motion to quash the indictment was presented by the defense, based on the contention that the statute of limitations barred a prosecution. Judge Montgomery overruled the motion, however, holding that the State would have the opportunity to prove its charge that the alleged crime had been concealed through acts of the defendants.

Under the statute of limitations an indictment must be returned not later than two years after the alleged crime is committed, unless the State can prove that the crime was concealed by the defendants.

The charge against Governor Jackson is that he conspired to offer to Warren T. McCray, when the latter was Governor in 1923, a bribe of $10,000 if he would appoint James E. McDonald as prosecutor in Marion County. Mr. McCray is expected to be the State's chief witness. He recently was released from the Atlanta Penitentiary after serving his sentence.

D. C. Stephenson, a former close friend, and political and financial backer of the Governor in his campaign in 1924, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis, was named in the indictment against Governor Jackson, George V. Coffin and Robert I. Marsh as having been a party to the conspiracy. Stephenson, a power in Indiana politics at one time, is a former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan.

Governor Jackson was in the court room again today, seated with his attorneys. He watched each talesman intently as he was questioned, but did not join in the conferences of his attorneys.

VOTE APARTMENT STRIKE.

600 Employes of Bing & Bing to Defer Walkout Pending Conferences

Six hundred apartment house doormen, hallmen, elevator operators and porters, members of Local 58 of the Building Service Employes' International, met last night at the Italian Labor Centre, 231 East Fourteenth Street, and voted a general strike in the ninety apartments operated by Bing & Bing. The strike will be held in abeyance, however, pending conferences with representatives of the superintendents' locals in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens. A strike fund of $2,000 was raised at the meeting, it was announced.

The trouble started last week in a Bing & Bing apartment at 1,009 Park Avenue when, according to members of the international, the superintendent, James Barrett, was discharged for joining the labor organization. Eight other employes in the building went on a strike and are said to have been paid $25 a week by the international since.

Westchester Supervisor Honored.

Supervisor Herbert L. Gerlach of Westchester County was guest of honor at a dinner given last night at Charlie's Inn, on the Bronx River Parkway, by about two hundred Westchester residents, in recognition of his services since his election in 1926. Mr. Gerlach received a loving cup. Supreme Court Justice Frank L. Young of Ossining was toastmaster.

DEFENDS GIRL CLERK IN POISON PEN CASE

Young Electrician Insists Writer of Notes to Mrs. von Moschzisker Is Unknown to Him.

HE VISITED ACCUSER'S HOME

Attorney's Wife Offered Him $5,000 Which He Refused, Burnett Says —Doremus Aide Defense Also.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 9.—Walter J. Burnett, the young Ridgewood electrician whose visits to the home of Mrs. Emma von Moschzisker apparently inspired the writer of "poison pen" letters, took the stand as a defense witness today in the Quarter Sessions Court where Miss Sarah Mowell, 21-year-old bank clerk, is on trial on an indictment charging blackmail. It is alleged that Miss Mowell, at one time reported to be the fiancée of Burnett, wrote the letters to Mrs. von Moschzisker, who is thirty years her senior and wife of an attorney for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Burnett was particularly firm in his statement that he did not write the letters received by the attorney's wife; that as far as he knew Miss Mowell did not have anything to do with writing them and that he did not know who did.

In his testimony Burnett said he discouraged the attentions of Mrs. von Moschzisker, even to the extent of refusing a gift of $5,000 and leaving her house one evening, offering as his excuse that he "had a date" and had to go.

Doremus a Character Witness.

Burnett was called to the witness stand after several witnesses, among them former Judge Cornelius Doremus, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor and President of the bank where Miss Mowell was employed, had testified to the good character and reputation of the young clerk.

Previously about twenty of the "poison pen" letters had been read into the records by Assistant Prosecutor John Breslin Jr., and in outlining his defense to the jury John Zabriskie, counsel for Miss Mowell, said that he would prove that Mrs. von Moschzisker had written the letters to herself "for reasons best known to herself."

Under the questioning of Mr. Zabriskie Burnett told of the events that led up to his meeting with Mrs. von Moschzisker nearly two years ago. He installed a refrigerator in her home, he said, and as a result obtained some orders from her friends. He told of selling one to a Mrs. Foster, a friend of Mrs. von Moschzisker.

"Mrs. Foster told me that she said to Mrs. von Moschzisker, 'Where did you get that lovely refrigerator salesman?' and that Mrs. von Moschzisker replied, 'You keep away from him, I saw him first,'" Burnett said.

Identifies a Love Card.

He identified a card which he said Mrs. von Moschzisker had brought to his shop, saying at the time that she didn't think it should be in the mail. The card read:

If a body love a body awful, awful hard,
Can a body send a body just a little card?

"On one occasion," Burnett said, "Mrs. von Moschzisker telephoned to the shop and asked me to come up to the house, that she was in terrible trouble."

He said he went up and found that she wanted him to put bandages on her arms, which she said had been burned.

He testified that one evening after she had telephoned him to come over to the house she told him that an old sweetheart of hers had left her $5,000 and she didn't want her husband to know about it. She said she would like to give it to him, Burnett said, but that he told her he didn't want it.

"The following Tuesday I saw her again," he said. "She said 'You could have had five $1,000 bills on Saturday night.'"

Burnett said that later he accepted a check for $98 from Mrs. von Moschzisker when she insisted that he take a little something.

Burnett was still on the witness stand when Judge Seufert adjourned court until tomorrow morning.

REPUBLICANS ANGRY OVER BUDGET ATTACK

Resent Governor's Criticisms and Signs of Long Contest Are Plain.

POLITICAL SCHEME HINTED

Legislative Leaders Say Some Would Deprive Smith of Credit of Completing Parks.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—With the storm aroused over the reductions in Governor Smith's quasi-executive budget by the Republican leaders of the Legislature showing no signs of abating and the forecast being for heavy political weather, the Chairmen of the two fiscal committees in the law-making body did not conceal the fact today that they are smarting under the criticism of the Governor, who in a statement yesterday accused them of "juggling" budget figures with a deliberate intent to mislead the public.

Assemblyman Eberly Hutchinson of Fulton-Hamilton, head of the Ways and Means Committee, resented the charge that the committee bill, substituting "lump sum" appropriations for the Southern Parkway and Jones Beach causeway and boulevard projects on Long Island, was loaded down with jokers.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Hutchinson, "that the noise foundry is getting unduly active. I do not now refer to the newspaper correspondents, but to the propaganda bureau in the alleged executive department. We have not juggled any figures, and in so far as I am aware there is no disposition on our part to make any further concessions."

Governor Smith made no further statement today in the controversy that has arisen over slashes in his budget. He is studying these to be prepared to deal with the subject with thoroughness when he decides the time has arrived to take his case to the people. It was indicated today that the time is not far off, unless the fiscal leaders of the Legislature beat a retreat and restore to the budget amounts which the Governor regards as essential to carry out the State program for park development in the next fiscal year.

Governor Smith believes that in the end the Republicans will be obliged to restore most if not all of the items they have eliminated. The fiscal leaders, however, declare that they will stand pat on the Long Island Park Appropriation bill put in yesterday as a substitute for the measure which had been reported earlier by the fiscal committees.

The Governor is at a loss to understand what impelled the Republican leaders to adopt their present course. He declared emphatically today that the acts involved no economy to the State, but on the contrary would mean added expense. The Long Island Park appropriations, he pointed out, were all for work that had been begun and if not completed this year would have to be completed another year, with no advantage to be gained by a postponement.

Alleged Republican Design.

From talk that has been current in the Capitol precincts for some days the latest manifestation of Republican fiscal policy is attributed to a desire to place the Governor in a position where parks and public improvements, which he had hoped to see completed while still Governor to the end that they might remain a monument to his four Administrations, should be left unfinished, so that his successor, who they hope will be a Republican, could carry the several projects to completion, and thus gain with his party the credit for throwing open to the public a great system of parks, parkways and playgrounds on Long Island which in fact would represent a Democratic achievement.

Governor Smith in his survey of Republican cuts in his budget, aside from those affecting the Long Island parks and parkways, has come across item upon item in other departments, where the reductions, as he views them, are of such a haphazard nature as to be almost void of meaning, whether from a viewpoint of economic policy or political expediency.

In the department of farms and markets budget, for instance, they have cut out a $25,000 appropriation for the erection of a woman's building at the State fair grounds in Syracuse, which was put in by the Governor at the earnest request of the Commissioner of Farms and Markets. This cut is almost certain, according to the view expressed in official circles here, to bring upon the heads of the Republican legislative leaders a storm of protest from the women in their own party. The project had the backing of the Granges, agricultural societies and of women's organizations in all parts of the State.

A Slash in Budget Department.

With the constitutional executive budget about to go into effect, the Republican fiscal chiefs have cut from the appropriations made for the budget division in the executive department $105,000 put in for the purpose of enabling the Budget Bureau to make a close survey of the several departments of the State Government with a view to laying the foundation for economies in the making of the budget for the 1929-1930 fiscal year.

In thus virtually crippling this important agency of the State Government, according to the view prevailing here, the Republican leaders of the Legislature reflect a deliberate intent of ignoring the mandate of the Constitution and paving the way for the making of the budget, even with the executive budget system in force, in the good old way by the two fiscal committees of the Legislature.

MT. LOWE TELESCOPE CRACKED IN GALE

Dome of Observatory Near Pasadena Is Torn Off—Heavy Damage From Wind.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9 (AP).—A terrific windstorm created havoc in this region today and then departed almost as quickly as it came.

The gale tore off the dome of Mount Lowe Observatory, near Pasadena, and cracked its huge telescope in two.

The wind at times reached a velocity of sixty miles an hour and wrecked houses, tore up trees, fanned into flames two fires that menaced many fine buildings and crushed several airplanes.

Chester Hammack, a 13-year-old boy was killed when he grasped a 4,000 volt electric line which had blown down near his home near Pasadena. So far as known that was the only death in the storm.

Policeman, Told of Hold-Up, Finds Thieves Used His Car

Two robbers in North Bergen, N. J., yesterday afternoon stole a police lieutenant's automobile, used it in a successful hold-up and made their escape in the vehicle, abandoning it at their convenience several miles from the scene of the crime. Adding to the irony of the case was the fact that Lieutenant Gustav Frehner, owner of the automobile, who was on desk duty, received the report of the hold-up, including the license number of his own car.

The hold-up pair found Lieutenant Frehner's car parked in front of a bank building near the police station. They drove to the Homestead section of North Bergen, walked into the office of the Jegels & Bellis Coal Company, backed Charles Albrecht, a clerk, into a rear room, rifled the cash register of $100 and departed.

HEIRESS A SUICIDE GRIEVING OVER SUIT

Woman Whose Three Brothers Got Only $1 Each of $90,000 Estate, Leaps to Death.

THEY SUED TO BREAK WILL

Sorrow over the action of her three brothers in contesting her father's will, by which she received the major part of an estate of $90,000 and they received a dollar each, is believed by her friends to have caused Julia Peirano to end her life yesterday afternoon at her home in North Bergen, N. J. Miss Peirano fell or jumped to her death from a window on the fourth floor of the apartment house at which she lived at 2 Twenty-ninth Street, North Bergen. Police said it was clearly a case of suicide.

According to neighbors, Miss Peirano, who was 49 years old, had kept house for her aged father since the death of her mother many years ago. Another daughter, Anna, left home at the age of 20 to marry John Solferino, a Hoboken merchant, and the three sons, as they matured, left their father's home and returned seldom. Julia alone remained to attend to his needs.

Peirano came to this country from Italy in his youth and prospered from the start. He invested his money in Hudson County real estate, which multiplied in value many times. On the death of his wife he and Julia moved to the Twenty-ninth Street apartment.

When Peirano died several months ago at the age of 95 his will showed that he had left the entire amount of his estate, with the exception of the three dollars, to his two daughters, with Julia receiving the larger portion. His sons, Charles, a Hoboken policeman, and Louis and Paul, also employed in Hoboken, immediately filed suit to contest the will, on the grounds that their father had been mentally deranged by his extreme age and had allowed himself to be influenced by Julia in the making of his bequests.

The first hearing on the case was held in Hudson County Orphans' Court yesterday afternoon before Judge Charles M. Egan. Anna and the three brothers were in court, and Julia was expected to come to testify on her own behalf. Louis took the stand first and, while he was attempting to support his accusations, word was received of his sister's suicide. Judge Egan adjourned the case indefinitely.

Her friends told the police that Julia had brooded over her brothers' wish to deprive her of the major share of the estate, which she felt she had earned by her years of devotion to her father. She was in good health and her friends could think of no other reason to which to attribute her suicide.

JONES'S AIDE RESIGNS IN ARCHITECT'S ROW

J. W. Sinnott Supports Chief in Charge of 'Interference' in State Office.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 9.—Endorsing his chief's stand, Joseph W. Sinnott, Executive Deputy to Sullivan W. Jones, recently State Architect, also resigned today. Mr. Sinnott pleaded for independence of architecture in the State Cabinet, as his superior did on retiring yesterday.

In a letter to Walter S. Thomas, Assistant State Architect, who was named Acting Division Chief by Colonel Greene, Sinnott offered his resignation and fired a parting shot at the Public Works Superintendent. He declared that Colonel Greene was ignorant of "the rudiments of architecture," lacks sympathy with the fine arts, and was subject to "uncontrollable mental disturbances." At the same time he entered a plea for the principle of independence for the State Architect.

"It has been a marvel to me," he said, "how an architect with the high standing and character of Sullivan W. Jones has been able to preserve his equanimity and in the face of these handicaps to carry on as far as he has the vast construction program of the State, entailing as it does the welfare of the thousands of unfortunates who are wards of the people."

Declaring that the program was especially needed in a time of widespread unemployment and that for this and other reasons Mr. Jones had temporized with the situation "as far as it was humanly possible," he added:

"I know that he suffered many an unwarranted humiliation and interference on the part of the Superintendent of Public Works. Much of this interference, I always felt, was due to Colonel Greene's ignorance of the rudiments of architecture and a total lack of sympathy with the fine arts. Mr. Jones, I feel, took a more kindly view of it, due, I am sure, to his better understanding of uncontrollable mental disturbances."

MOVES TO LIFT BAR ON SCUDDER INQUIRY

Buckner Gets Court Order for Connolly to Show Cause Why Writ Should Not Be Vacated.

ACTION UNDER NEW LAW

Argument Is Set for Today—Steuer Expected to Fight on Constitutional Grounds.

LOSING SIDE WILL APPEAL

Klein Says $15,000 Fund Is Being Raised to "Discredit" Harvey, Who Made Sewer Accusations.

His position as the Governor's special investigator in the Queens sewer scandal strengthened by the amended Public Officers law, Supreme Court Justice Townsend Scudder made a move yesterday by which he hopes to throw off the prohibition order of Feb. 6 which halted his secret investigation. On application of his special counsel, Emory R. Buckner, Presiding Justice Edward Lazansky of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn signed an order directing Maurice E. Connolly, Borough President of Queens, to show cause why the order of prohibition should not be vacated.

The order is returnable before the full bench of the Appellate Division, Second Department, in Brooklyn, this morning at 10 o'clock. Max D. Steuer, counsel for Mr. Connolly, who had announced that he would contest on constitutional grounds the amended Public Officers law, which was signed by Governor Smith on Wednesday, would not comment further yesterday on the move he may make this morning.

"It also places before the Appellate Division the new law for such consideration as they may wish to give it," said Mr. Buckner.

Appeal by One Side Expected.

Whether or not the Appellate Division vacates the order of prohibition, the application will have resulted in only "insignificant delay," according to Mr. Buckner. If the order is set aside it is expected that Mr. Steuer will carry the case to the Court of Appeals. Similarly Mr. Buckner would appeal if the Appellate Division's decision is unfavorable to Justice Scudder.

The order signed by Justice Lazansky yesterday also directed Mr. Connolly to show cause why Justice Scudder should not be granted permission to file additional affidavits to support his contention that he has the right to hold preliminary hearings. It was the preliminary hearings in secret which the original order of prohibition blocked.

While the Scudder investigation was seeking an avenue through which to proceed the Board of Estimate decided that the investigation should not hold up the program of public improvements in Queens not directly connected with the sewer investigation. To that end Controller Berry announced at a meeting of the Board of Estimate that he would confer with Justice Scudder and Mr. Buckner to determine what improvements were outside the scope of the Scudder investigation.

General Berry disclosed that at the direction of the Queens County District Attorney he had held up payments on all contractors' claims in that borough. He suggested that sooner or later the city would have to pay under court orders penalties for such claims as it might unjustly delay in settling.

He cited a claim of $69,000 on which the city recently was sued and said the court had ruled that the city must pay on condition that the contractor file a bond of $70,000 to protect the city in case it finally were proved that the money was not due.

The Board of Estimate fixed March 5 to decide what public improvements in Queens should be continued. When Jabez E. Dunningham, Community Council leader in Queens, suggested that resumption of the Queens building program would help ease the unemployment situation, Mayor Walker quickly replied that the city was in no wise responsible for unemployment and cited the unprecedented budget of 1928 with its already abnormal building program.

Sees Move Against Harvey.

Henry H. Klein, counsel for Alderman George U. Harvey of Flushing, whose charges against Mr. Connolly launched the inquiry, asserted yesterday that a $15,000 fund was being raised in Long Island City for the purpose of discrediting Harvey. He would not amplify his statements. He further asserted that John M. Phillips, alleged head of the Queens sewer ring, had spent approximately $600,000 within the past few months in connection with the present investigation.

He said he had been informed that Clifford B. Moore, Consulting Engineer of the Borough of Queens, and Frederick H. Seeley, Chief Engineer of the Queens Sewers Bureau, had been off the city payroll since Jan. 15. Seeley, who had been reported "on leave of absence" for the past few weeks, was served with a subpoena on Tuesday after a delay of several weeks. He and other witnesses who had left the jurisdiction had frequently been seen in Newark by a process server who trailed him to New York.

SHOOTS FOUR MEN DEAD.

Chicago Negro Also Wounds Three Others Before Being Killed.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 (AP).—Ross Elliott, negro, who this morning shot and killed two employes of the Omaha Packing Company and wounded a third, this afternoon killed two policemen and wounded two other persons before he himself was killed when the police sought to arrest him in a South Side flat building.

Elliott was cornered on the third floor and shot it out with a squad of policemen, killing Lieutenant Edward Murphy and Sergeant Eugene Keegan and wounding two inhabitants of the flat. Murphy, as he lay dying, shot the negro dead.

Earlier in the day Elliott, a former employe of the packing company, went to the gates of the plant as workers reported and killed James Ellis, another negro, who had quarreled with him. One of his bullets wounded a white employe and another bullet killed another white employe who leaped from a loading platform in an effort to capture him.

900 MOTOR SELLERS DINE AT THE PLAZA

VALUE OF SERVICE STRESSED

President Southworth Tells Audience, Rivals in Business, the Market Is Big Enough for All.

More than 900 of the men who sell automobiles in New York City and vicinity gathered last night at the Hotel Plaza for the annual dinner of the Automobile Merchants' Association. Although the evening was principally devoted to entertainment and the exchanging of greetings between dealers accustomed to meet as rivals most of the time, A. E. Southworth, President of the association, and other speakers talked of trade conditions and prospects for the future.

Mr. Southworth said that the automobile business was essentially a business of service.

"If we do well, it will be because we recognize our obligations of service and fulfill those obligations to the best of our ability," he said. "We must remember that the public pays—gladly when they get service and grudgingly when the service is lacking. There is a market big enough for all of us, but the measure of success for any of us will always be determined by the manner in which we serve."

The diners were entertained by the address of Sir James Alexander, who was introduced as the editor of The Glasgow Chronicle, but who spoke as one thoroughly familiar with the American taste in jokes. He told a number of stories in a broad Scottish accent that was employed to emphasize, rather than obscure, the points. His address was frequently interrupted by laughter.

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, was encouraging to the diners in his prediction of a good year to come. He said that there was no danger that a "saturation point" in automobile consumption had been reached, because all records tended to show that the era of two-car families was just beginning. He voiced the general sentiment of the trade in looking forward to 1928 as a banner year in the automobile business.

William L. Colt, a past President of the association, presided.

BROWNE DROPS SUIT OVER SCHOOL PAY RISE

Says Legislation Pending in Albany, if Passed, Will Remedy Condition He Fought.

Supreme Court Justice Delehanty permitted Stewart Browne yesterday to withdraw his action to enjoin Controller Berry from paying out any of the $14,000,000 set aside for increases in the salaries of teachers and others employed by the city's Board of Education. Mr. Browne said his decision to withdraw the injunction proceeding was prompted by certain pending legislation at Albany which, if passed, would remedy the conditions his action sought to cure.

Mr. Browne issued a statement explaining that his court actions were not designed to "embarrass the Administration or any of its branches," or to keep the teachers from getting their salaries. He enumerated his objections to the increased payments as follows:

"First, that the city deducted $40,000,000 from the 1928 budget; second, that the Board of Education did not furnish to the Board of Estimate an itemized schedule of the proposed salary increases as required by the Education law and city charter, and that there was no taxpayer's public hearing thereon as required by the city charter; third, that the $14,000,000 salary increase was unfairly divided—the 'higher-up' school machine grabbing increases of between $3,000 and $5,000 each and throwing a picayune $100 to the teachers, and, fourth, that neither the Board of Estimate nor the taxpayers have any say as to how the Board of Education apportions salaries."

RECITAL BY RALPH LEOPOLD.

Pianist Delights Audience in Annual Appearance Here.

Ralph Leopold, a pianist who on many occasions has won the favor of local concert audiences with his artistic playing, gave his annual recital last night in Town Hall. His playing of the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 2, No. 3, with which he opened his program, showed fine musicianship and command of sympathetic tone color. Grieg's "Ballade," the "Poème Satanique" of Scriabin, two "Rondes Wallonnes" of Jongen, Scott's "Paradise Birds" and "Cherry Ripe" and the pianist's own arrangement of the "Storm and Entrance of the Gods into Walhalla," from "Das Rheingold," completed the printed program, to which Mr. Leopold added several encores in response to applause.

During the three firmly packed hours of "Rain or Shine," put on at the George M. Cohan Theatre last evening, Joe Cook gives just a few simple exhibitions of his talents. As the leader of a bankrupt circus, of course, he is on the stage most of the time with his cherubic smile, and he prattles rhymeless nonsense in a madly convincing way from start to finish. This might be sufficient in itself.

Lest the customers feel shortchanged, however, Joe gives just a few simple exhibitions on the side. He walks a huge ball up a platform and down the other side. Balancing himself on a slack wire he extinguishes a row of lighted candles with his rifle. He juggles sixteen or twenty Indian clubs nonchalantly. As either a tumbler or a strong man he tosses various members of the cast in the air or, reclining leisurely on his back, twirls them around with his feet. Eager to give the customers a fair return on their money, he then introduces the Fuller Construction Orchestra, which is one of those Rube Goldberg crazy mechanical elaborations for passing a modest musical impulse from a buzz saw to a soda-water siphon, on to a ferris wheel contraption, up and around, down, bang on the head of a fool triangle player, and out. Or something like that. These are some of Joe's simple contributions to a bizarre, three-ring musical entertainment. And they confirm a popular impression that Joe Cook is the greatest man in the world.

To give playgoers the benefit of the full gamut in comedy the makers of "Rain or Shine" have ingeniously placed Tom Howard in the opposite part. Nothing could be more delightful. For Howard is the perfect contrast to Joe Cook—dry, slow, thin, thick-witted in his comedy, the vaguely suspicious rube. As co-managers of a defunct circus, Cook and Howard keep "Rain or Shine" a prolonged orgy of merriment in the deathless vein of undiluted comedy. Alone or together they are delightful.

The book of the show, bearing the monickers of James Gleason and Maurice Marks, contrives some balderdash about a young man of high station, disguised as a roustabout, who loses his heart to a circus prima donna; and, oh, the woes, misunderstandings and lamentations until 11:30, or thereabouts. "Just a silly whim," as some one in the play remarks.

But the plot at least gives rise to the dash and lavish color of circus uniforms and tent scenes. There are fakirs and freaks, platoons of young ladies with centrifugal legs who exhaust the possibilities of dance flourishes, an old-time shimmy viewed from the rear, clogging up and down a flight of steps, and all the kinds of movements Tom Howard would like to have in his watch. And, finally, the remantic, energetic youths who bellow—

"Roustabouts,
With joyous shouts,
We follow the gypsy trail."

Stung by the jazzy lash of Dan Voorhees and his squealing band the music sweeps like a breaking wave, scattering eighth-notes wildly. Ever since "Good News" raised the dust in Forty-sixth Street, the scores of musical plays hereabouts have been full of savage rage. The diminutive Nancy Welford and Ethel Norris, the willowy Edgar Gardner and Warren Hull, sing the best numbers. But Janet Velie brings the best-trained voice to her one song number, "Failing Star." William Robyn sings one of those turgid dramatic melodies with tragic implications. "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." Meanwhile, Dan Voorhees, who looks like a Yale man from the rear, leads the orchestra with a racing start and a fast stroke straight through to the finish.

"PARISIANA" IS AMATEURISH

PARISIANA, a revue in two acts, by Vincent Valentini. Staged by Mr. Valentini; produced by Associated Artists, Inc. At the Edyth Totten Theatre.

PRINCIPALS: Olive May, Melvin Stokes, Kathleen Percy, Mildred Skinner, Billy Dann, Peggy Hasson, George Laird, Thomas Sisters, Beth Miller, Horace Kuiz, Ilya and Maria Barcelle and others.

One of those brazen, impudent and hopelessly amateurish revues that break out like a rash in Greenwich Village almost every Spring, last night anticipated the season by limping into the Edyth Totten Theatre uptown, where it gave its first performance after two postponements.

"Parisiana" is the title of this nonesuch, which appears to be entirely the work of Vincent Valentini, and the tale about it is that most of the material has been imported from some unspecified Parisian playhouse—possibly, on second thought, the Grand Guignol.

At all events, it is of a decidedly intimate genre that occasionally has some freshness or originality to recommend it. This, it may be hastily added, is not one of the occasions, for last night's exhibit was a stale and tasteless potpourri of year-before-last's questionable stories turned into blackout sketches, of production numbers that seemed to be burlesques of those which reached their peak in the "Follies" of 1918 or thereabout, and of other such puerile apings of the gaudier Broadway extravaganzas. The best feature of the production was a Paul Specht orchestra which worked in the pit, and it even managed to make the music seem better than the rest of the enterprise.

Such carpings might be harsh in view of the faintly kindergarten aura surrounding the proceedings, were it not that the box office scale at the Edyth Totten is the same as that which obtains for the best musical shows in town. This, at least, seems to indicate professional pretensions.

Of the performers Beth Miller stands out above the rest by virtue of the fact that she seems to have had some previous stage experience.

MAGRUDER REITERATES PREPAREDNESS PLEAS

Tells Legion We Can Disarm When Biblical Teaching Is Followed.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 9.—Admiral Magruder quoted from the New Testament in a speech before the seventh annual dinner of the James Harvey Post of the American Legion at the Chelsea Hotel tonight and then declared that when the world was ready to carry out the teachings of the Bible it would be time to think about disarmament, but until that time arrived, if ever, it was the duty of America to "be so strong on land and sea that no other nation dare attack us."

"We military men think a war is very remote," he said, "but it is our duty to be prepared." He declared that in the next war capital would be mobilized in the same as men had been mobilized in the last war, and that this was one of the things which the American Legion was going to put over.

He advocated a merchant marine, but declared that Government operation of public utilities had been a failure and that this had been proved by the Government operation of the railroads in the late war. He believed from observation that the people were determined to have a merchant marine. He advocated the maintenance of a merchant marine through the instrumentality of private companies, and, if necessary, adequately subsidized.

BLAMES RADICALS FOR SCHOOL PROTEST

Brooklyn Superintendent Says They Instigated Fight on Plan for a New Department.

An organization of radical tendencies is behind the agitation of Williamsburg parents against the proposed plan of the Board of Education to establish a junior high school department in Public School 50, South Third Street and Driggs Avenue, Brooklyn, District Superintendent Benjamin Veit charged yesterday.

Mr. Veit said that at a meeting of Williamsburg parents last Wednesday night a large group of "radicals, possibly Communists," were present and instigated opposition to the board. Parents in that section of Brooklyn have complained that the establishment of the junior high school would involve many transfers of children which in turn would result in taking many children to schools far removed from the immediate neighborhood of their homes. Officials of the board say that the largest walking radius from the several schools concerned is small.

Three hours of debate, which threatened several times to degenerate into disorder, failed to effect a union of the Parents' Associations of Public Schools 19 and 50 at a meeting last night at the Williamsburg Hebrew School, 310 South First Street, Brooklyn. About 500 parents attended the meeting, which was called to consider the desirability of presenting a united front in the parents' efforts to prevent the organization of a junior high school in Public School 50.

The parents will not carry out their threat of a strike until the matter has been disposed of by the Board of Education at its next meeting, two weeks hence.

BEATRICE ELLIOTT HEARD.

Australian Soprano Gives Recital—Leroy Collins Appears.

Beatrice Elliott, an Australian soprano and graduate of the Royal Academy of Music in London, gave a recital in the Engineering Societies Hall last evening, accompanied by Mrs. Vittorio Trevisan of Chicago. She sang with good natural voice and a corresponding directness of expression in French and German songs. In an opening Italian group she included an air from "Gianni Schicchi," while among her later English pieces were John Carpenter's "Sleep That Flits on Baby's Eyes" and "May Day Carols," by Deems Taylor.

Leroy Collins, tenor, sang in Steinway Hall last night, with Everett Tutchings at the piano for his songs and for instrumental solos. Besides airs of Handel and Purcell, Mr. Collins sang a group of light lyrics in French, an air from "La Bohème" and Irish folksong arrangements of Tom Moore and Herbert Hughes.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

Philharmonic Orchestra.

If it were possible to turn baser metals into gold of incomparable purity, Mr. Toscanini, who led his second Thursday night concert as conductor of the New York Philharmonic last night in Carnegie Hall, would be the man for the miracle. He directed performances of the delicious orchestral concerto, "La primavera" of Vivaldi, played for the first time in New York; the Haydn G major Symphony (No. 13); two excerpts from the "Romeo and Juliet" symphony of Hector Berlioz—Berlioz of the locks that flamed in the '30's and do not flame quite so brightly today, and the Respighi symphonic poem, which is a Toscanini battle-horse, the "Pini di Roma."

Vivaldi's concerto is program music—program music of a period when that form of indoor sport was not as popular and customary as it is now. In this orchestral poem of the Springtime, scored for strings, cembalo, and organ, we are invited to hear the gladness of the season, the singing of birds, murmuring of fountains; a thunderstorm, with flashes of lightning in the fiddles; a goat herder sleeping with his dog in a flowery meadow, and a festive of a pastoral kind, in which nymphs and shepherds disport themselves. It is innocent enough, all this scene painting, and it is perfectly charming. Would it have been so fresh, so delicious, transparent, and adorably archaic, with a conductor less aware of the classic spirit, or less master of the technique of finished orchestral interpretation?

As for the Haydn symphony, Mr. Toscanini had made known his interpretation of the work in previous seasons. This interpretation, nevertheless, seemed to fall fresh upon the ears. The symphony was heard as it must have felt to the composer when he wrote it. What would Haydn have thought of such a performance? We believe he would have heartily endorsed it and thanked its author. For Mr. Toscanini knows well that Haydn is far from the thin-blooded old gentleman which some superficial critics and historians of music would make him. The vigor and shrewdness of his allegro and the virility of his scherzo testify to it, but the ultimate proof comes with the slow movement, which, under Mr. Toscanini's baton, is music of romantic revery, ridden, at times, with pain, and a deep awareness of the mystery of life. Truly a great symphony, performed with almost impeccable virtuosity of spirit and letter!

But the capacity to turn lowlier metals into gold did not wholly meet the needs of Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" symphony. Why not, and regretfully enough, face the truth? We might, with a lesser conductor, have blamed the tameness of this music on the interpreter, but we can hardly conceive a more poetic or warmly passionate reading than Toscanini's, a reading in which, again and again, the sensuous principal theme reappears like the haunting vision of the beloved. But in the twentieth century, colder, less impulsive, more cerebral than the period of a hundred years ago, the music of Berlioz—or at least this music of Berlioz—begins to fade and pale. It is no longer hot and tortured. It has, on the contrary, a touching aroma of a day and an emotion gone by.

The "love scene" is too long for any save those in whom it arouses reveries of a glamorous musical past. The "Queen Mab" scherzo—a performance that was incredibly gossamer and illusion, is better, but also old. In other scores Berlioz continues to flaunt his panache, and about defiance down the ages. The "Romeo and Juliet" symphony, or the movements of it heard last night, perceptibly "dates," and is perceptibly withdrawing, a beautiful pathetic ghost, from the land of the living.

It was put to rout last night by the vigor and humanity of old Haydn, whom Berlioz patronized, if he did not despise, on one side, and the flamboyant, strutting tone-poem of Respighi, with its Mussolini march, on the other. Haydn was superior to Berlioz. Respighi, in unrefined and appropriate terminology, "bawled him out." And Respighi, like Vivaldi, had to give exceeding thanks, for the impression his music made, to Arturo Toscanini.

CHAPLIN SETTLES TAX.

Said to Have Met the $1,670,000 Liens on Bank Account.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 9.—According to a telegram received by Collector of Internal Revenue Welch here Jan. 12, Charles Spencer Chaplin has squared his tax accounts with the Government, and the $1,670,636.90 liens against the comedian's bank accounts were ordered released at that time because it was stated payment of the amount due had been made.

The taxes due included $1,079,721.47 on his personal income and two amounts of $60,046 and $536,869.63 due on the income of the Charles Chaplin Film Corporation. Amounts of Chaplin's personal taxes were due for the following years: $134,623 for 1918; $31,501 for 1919; $676,968 for 1921; $71,208 for 1922; $89,371 for 1923 and $107,048 for 1924.

ACTOR'S WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Russell Parker Names Ingenue in Portland (Me.) Stock Company.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 9 (AP).—The names of Russell Parker, an actor with the Jefferson Players of this city, and Frances Morris, ingenue, were linked together in a more serious role than they have ever played on the stage when Parker's wife, Mrs. Edith L. Parker, appeared in Superior Court to acknowledge divorce today.

Miss Morris was named by Mrs. Parker as the woman whom Parker admitted he loved and for whom he left his wife and child, five years ago last October. Mrs. Parker, who gave her residence as Haleslte, L. I., and her occupation as an assistant in a tax collector's office, said she married at the age of 18 in Harrison, N. J., June 13, 1908. She asked for custody of the child and requested alimony. The husband offered no contest. Justice Arthur Chapman reserved decision.

NEW ROLE FOR AL JOLSON.

Will Appear Next Season in a Musical Play, "Mister Bones."

Al Jolson will appear in a new musical show under the Shubert management next season, it was announced yesterday. His vehicle will be the work of Irving Berlin, who will provide the music, and James Gleason, who will prepare the book, and will deal with the life of a minstrel. "Mister Bones" is its tentative title.

Mr. Jolson, who returned to New York a few days ago from a vacation in Palm Beach, left yesterday for St. Louis, where he will play for one week at the Loew Theatre in that city. Afterward he will go to California, where he is under contract to make a picture during the Summer. Rehearsals of his new musical show are scheduled to begin in August.

Art Galleries Will Combine.

Cortlandt F. Bishop, President of the American Art Association, who recently purchased the Anderson Galleries, said yesterday that as soon as the contracts already entered into by the Anderson Galleries had been carried through the galleries would cease to do business at the present quarters, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, and would be merged with the American Art Association. The business quarters will be at 27 East Fifty-seventh Street.

FOURTH OFFICIAL QUITS SHAKESPEARE GROUP

Representative Boylan Resigns as Vice President—Countess Defends Dentinger Cause.

Representative John J. Boylan, in a letter to Willett H. Dentinger, founder and Director General of the International Shakespeare Association, Inc., made public yesterday, resigned as First Vice President of the association and asked that his name be removed from all printed matter issued by the organization. Congressman Boylan, who is the Democratic Representative from the Fifteenth District and lives at 418 West Fifty-first Street, is the fourth public official to quit the association in the last week, the others including Mayor Walker, Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan and Alderman Charles A. McManus.

The Countess J. de Castelvecchio Frabasilli, grandniece of Napoleon III, Chairman of the International Shakespeare Association Committee of Weekly Meetings, came to the defense yesterday of Mr. Dentinger and the Shakespeare project. In a statement she said:

"As Chairman of the International Shakespeare Association's weekly meetings, I regret, of course, all this unwelcome publicity, but if, as I firmly believe, the accusations launched maliciously against Dr. Dentinger and his gifted and gracious wife shall, in the course of due time, prove to be groundless, malicious, uncharitableness and falsity will once more prove to be, in this great land of ours, a true and lasting boon to those they were intended to harm."

Sol Ullman, Deputy Assistant State Attorney General, made public yesterday the text of a letter sent by Mr. Dentinger in reply to the latter's communication that he had a right to use the title of "doctor." Mr. Ullman wrote in part: "Although you state in your letter that you have not practiced medicine in the State of New York, I desire to call your attention to the fact that I have been informed by Dr. S. Dana Hubbard of the Health Department of this city that complaints were heretofore made that you had an office in a hotel in this city where you practiced medicine in violation of the law, and that investigations are being conducted with regard thereto.

"A degree from a college of osteopathy does not permit the holder thereof to practice osteopathy in this State unless he is duly licensed to do so. Even so licensed, he may not use the title 'doctor' except in the manner prescribed by the statute, to wit: 'Doctor of Osteopathy' or 'D. O.'

"The laws of this State which relate to the public health (particularly those pertaining to the practice of medicine) are most liberally construed for the protection of the public, and the Attorney General will not countenance any violation thereof."

CANTOR REALLY ILL, EQUITY REPORTS

SUFFERING FROM PLEURISY

Producer's Own Physician Admits to Investigators Cantor Has Malady and Needs a Rest.

Florenz Ziegfeld's charge that Eddie Cantor was not ill enough to have closed the "Follies" was dismissed and Mr. Cantor's action was justified by a committee of the Actors' Equity Association yesterday afternoon, after the comedian had been heard in rebuttal and examined by Mr. Ziegfeld's physician. Two physicians and a lawyer, besides the committee of actors, heard the evidence.

Presiding over the meeting was George Arliss, while other Equity members present included Frank Gillmore, Grant Stewart, Fritz Williams, Frank McGlynn, Frederic Burt, Paul Harvey, Paul Dullzell and Charles Dow Clark. Mr. Ziegfeld was represented by his physician, Dr. Jerome Wagner; his attorney, J. Arthur Leve, and his business manager, Stanley J. Sharpe. Mr. Cantor was represented only by himself and his physician, Dr. A. L. Louris.

The meeting, which lasted two hours, was held at the offices of the Equity, 45 West Forty-seventh Street. Adjournment was taken to the office of Dr. Wagner for the examination of the comedian. Dr. Wagner reported to the committee that Mr. Cantor was suffering from pleurisy, and that he was in need of the rest that he purposes taking.

The comedian denied that he had violated any part of his agreement with Mr. Ziegfeld, saying he had refrained from appearing in motion pictures or at benefit performances without special permission. He appeared in jovial mood and said that his sole interest at the present is in the vacation on which he is about to start. The actor will leave this afternoon for Havana.

The Ziegfeld "Follies" was closed suddenly nearly two weeks ago when Mr. Cantor experienced difficulty in getting through the final performance in Newark. The show had been scheduled to open in Philadelphia on the following Monday, but Mr. Cantor reported to Mr. Ziegfeld that his physician had ordered a complete rest. Subsequently the actor was seen several times on Broadway and this fact led to Mr. Ziegfeld's charge that the comedian's illness was not real. Mr. Cantor's statement in reply said that his visits to New York were due to the fact that he had been seeing his physician.

In the report which it is to present to the Equity Council the investigating committee says, in part:

"We believe that Mr. Ziegfeld's representatives have no fundamental criticism of the hearing or its conduct, and seem to be equally assured of Mr. Cantor's good faith.

"There is no doubt in the minds of the committee that Mr. Cantor was in serious physical condition, which could only be relieved by a protracted rest."

The report goes on to say that, as evidence of the comedian's good faith, he has offered to pay not only the expenses incidental to closing the "Follies," but also to pay the entire cost of production if he should fail to appear for Mr. Ziegfeld on his recovery. He has offered, the report says, to post a bond to this effect.

"Marriage of Figaro" Repeated.

Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" was repeated at the Gallo last evening, completing nine subscription hearings of a classic that the American Opera Company's young singers have given in intimate form with success. In the cast were the Misses Votipka, Spence, Richardson and Peebles and Messrs. Daniels, Lazaro, Chamberlain and Rice. Mr. St. Leger conducted. The company has announced "Carmen" and "Martha" for its closing fortnight, with final repetitions of "Butterfly" and "Faust."

Theatre Guild to Produce 'Volpone.'

The Theatre Guild has selected "Volpone" for its next presentation, it was learned yesterday. The play is the work of Stefan Zweig and is based on a comedy of the same name written by Ben Jonson in 1605. The guild has four attractions now running and is obligated to make two more productions in order to complete its subscription schedule of six plays a season. The sixth play has not yet been decided upon. Since the acting company of the guild is occupied with "The Doctor's Dilemma," "Marco Millions" and "Strange Interlude," additional players will be engaged for "Volpone," it is reported.

"Rope" at the Biltmore Feb. 20.

"Rope," a play by David Wallace and T. S. Stribling, based on Mr. Stribling's novel, "Teeftallow," will be produced at the Biltmore Theatre on Monday night, Feb. 20. The players will include Elizabeth Patterson, Willard Robertson, Kenneth Dana, Caroline Newcomb, Ben Smith and Mary Carroll. The production will be sponsored by James W. Elliott, who is also producing "Napoleon." Frank Merlin will stage "Rope." Prior to its New York première the play will be presented next Thursday night in Mamaroneck.

Final Performance of "Tosca."

"Tosca," for the fifth and "last time this season," as poste1 on Broadway, was sung to a sold-out house at the Metropolitan last evening, with Mme. Jeritza as Puccini's heroine and Mr. Scotti as Rome's finest Chief of Police. Armand Tokatyan took his turn at the hero's rôle in creditable succession to Lauri-Volpi, Martinelli and Jagel, the tenors of other performances here and afield recently. Mr. Bellezza conducted and shared with the stars in many curtain calls.

Lauder's Engagement Extended.

Harry Lauder's engagement at the Knickerbocker Theatre, originally announced for four weeks, has been extended, according to William Morris, the comedian's manager. The road tour, consequently, has been indefinitely postponed.

Next week's program of the Scotch entertainer will include the following songs: "Queen Among th' Heather," "Just Off the Change," "When I Meet MacKaye," "Nanny" and "I Think I'll Get Wet in the Summer."

TICKET BOARD DECIDES TO CODIFY PRINCIPLES

Tuttle Asked to Draft Statement of Views Agreed on by Managers and Brokers.

Because of the "substantial gain made in the direction of agreement on principles involved in the theatre ticket question," the citizens' committee appointed by United States Attorney Tuttle decided yesterday to undertake to draw up a statement of these principles. Meeting in the Bar Association Building in West Forty-fourth Street, the committee, along with Florenz Ziegfeld and a representative from the McBride Theatre Ticket Agency, who were present, placed the drafting of these principles in the hands of Mr. Tuttle.

Mr. Tuttle will incorporate them in a set of resolutions which he will present for approval at the next meeting. He said last night that the principles could not be revealed as yet.

The decision to draw up the statement came as a result not only of yesterday's conference, but also of a previous meeting of the citizens' committee with the Shuberts and with the brokers other than McBride's.

The citizens' committee, which was appointed by Mr. Tuttle at the recommendation of brokers and managers, comprises Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Chairman; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, Martin Conboy and Lucius R. Eastman. George Reid Andrews, executive director of the Church and Drama Association, is the secretary.

ARTS CLUB AWARDS PRIZES.

Announces Winners of Honors in Exhibition of Small Paintings.

The awards in the exhibition of small paintings current at the National Arts Club, 15 Gramercy Park, were announced today. The exhibition continues through Feb. 29.

Charles C. Curran won the Walter S. Gifford Purchase Prize of $100 with his "Gray Rocks." The painting "Mending Nets" won the Luke Vincent Lockwood Purchase Prize of $100 for Richard M. Kimbel. The Mortimer L. Schiff Purchase Prize of $100 was awarded to Jay H. Connaway for "Clearing." The W. Henry Grant Purchase Prize of $100 was awarded to Mary G. Riley for "Hill Shadows." Julius Delbos won the Irving T. Bush Purchase Prize of $100 with "An Old French Bridge." The various prizes are named for the donors, who are members of the National Arts Club.

SYMPHONY IS DRAMATIZED.

Maurice Bloch's "Israel" to Be Given by Neighborhood Playhouse.

The production which the Neighborhood Playhouse organization will make in conjunction with the Cleveland Orchestra will contain a dramatic arrangement of Ernest Bloch's symphony, "Israel." It will be given at the Manhattan Opera House the first week in May.

The arrangement of "Israel" for the stage has been made by Irene Lewisohn of the Neighborhood Playhouse organization and Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra. The composer, who is in California, has wired his approval of the dramatization.

"Israel" has been heard this season at Carnegie Hall. According to the announcement of the project, "the production in May will launch an experiment in another interpretation, one which will aim to evoke the experiences which echo in the music."

Warns of Dangerous Face Lotions.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 9.—The use of wood alcohol in industry, especially in cheap face lotions, constitutes one of the most serious hazards to the eyes and not infrequently results in blindness, Mrs. Jessie Ross Royer, staff associate of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, stated in an address before the Connecticut Graduate Nurses' Association at the Trinity Church parish house here today.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, who has not been seen on the New York stage in several years, will be among the principal players in George C. Tyler's forthcoming revival of "She Stoops to Conquer." Mrs. Carter has not played in New York since she appeared in "The Circle" in 1921.

The complete cast of "Kidnapper," the impending Max Marcin-Samuel Shipman play, will include A. H. Van Buren, Felix Krembs, Douglass Montgomery, Frances Dale, Ruth Harding, David Landau, Calvin Thomas, Mary Robinson and W. W. Shuttleworth.

Inmates of the Walter Scott Free Industrial School for Crippled Children and the Lulu Thorley Lyons Home for Crippled and Delicate Children will be entertained at today's matinee performance of Harry Lauder at the Knickerbocker Theatre.

Irene Franklin and her husband, Jerry Jarnagin, will sail today on the Berengaria to appear in vaudeville in London.

"Napoleon" will open in Providence on Feb. 20. "The Bachelor Father" will have its premiere in Atlantic City on Monday evening.

"Behold, the Bridegroom" will end its engagement at the Gaiety Theatre on Feb. 25.

No. 3 of a series to be continued tomorrow
From the Diary of Margaret Mann
Albuquerque, New Mexico:
After a night's rest on the train I am still in a daze. I can't understand why they should make such a fuss over me and neglect the Archduke Leopold, who is one of the actors in our picture. He is more important than I am and so is the other European officer played by Ferdinand Schumann-Heinke, son of the famous opera singer.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Rapid Advance in Many Stocks —Call Money 4%; Brokers' Loans Increase.

Yesterday's markets did not indicate continuance of restraint on speculation for the rise by the higher Federal Reserve rates. On the Stock Exchange, an inpour of buying orders drove up with much violence many shares which had declined since the Reserve Bank showed its hand; at their high prices for the day, such advances had been made as 7¼ points in Case Threshing, 8 in International Harvester, 9¾ in Adams Express and 13 in du Pont. The general market did not rise at the pace thus indicated, and the stocks which moved up most rapidly lost a good part of their early gains before the close. But the renewal of speculative buying was unmistakable, there were extensive repurchases by recent speculative sellers, and the market as a whole ended considerably higher.

This renewal of the advance did not appear to result from anything in the general news, but the lowering of the Stock Exchange call money rate to 4 per cent. had unquestionable influence. The Reserve Board's weekly statement of brokers' loans was not published until after the market's close. It showed increase of $19,200,000 for the week, passing the previous high record of four weeks ago. The week's addition is not large, compared with weekly achievements toward the end of 1927, but the more impressive contrast is the fact that such borrowings have increased $117,398,000 thus far in 1928, as against a decrease of $67,183,000 for the corresponding period of 1927.

It was again the lending by out-of-town banks or local institutions not in the Federal Reserve which raised the total; brokers' loans by New York member banks for their own account were reduced no less than $95,000,000. This would seem to mean that outside bank resources, not in demand at a time when trade is still relatively inactive, are being poured into the New York stock market. The same thing used to happen under our older banking system, when surplus reserves at the New York banks would rise beyond all precedent after such nation-wide decline in business activities as followed the "panics" of those days. Then, as now, it was the interior banks which sent their idle funds to the New York banks. But a stock market bidding for use of those funds, during and immediately after the trade reaction, was something unfamiliar to that era.

Sterling reached $4.87 again for sight bills for the first time in a week, thereby marking recovery of ½ cent from last Friday's rate. The Bank of England has managed this past week to increase its gold reserve at an unusually rapid rate, notwithstanding the fall in sterling at New York below par of exchange. Yesterday's cables reported increase of £1,687,000, which carries the Bank's total gold holdings to a sum £7,376,000 greater than a year ago and only £6,935,000 below its highest figure, reached in the immediate sequel to England's resumption of gold payments in 1925. The week's increase is so great that, notwithstanding larger deposit liabilities, ratio of banking reserve to deposits rises nearly 2 per cent. to the highest since July, 1914.

At the moment, the Bank holds in gold nearly 35 per cent. of outstanding Bank of England notes and currency notes combined. This is not far from the 40 per cent. required by our Federal Reserve act. Ten years ago, the Cunliffe report on reform of the British currency advised that no arbitrarily fixed ratio be adopted when the two note issues should be amalgamated. But the general judgment of London financial circles was that 40 per cent. ought to be maintained.

EATON TO BUY SUBSIDIARY.

Axle and Spring Co. Will Retire Eaton Spring Corporation Preferred.

The Eaton Axle and Spring Company will buy and retire all the outstanding 6 per cent. preferred stock of its wholly-owned subsidiary, the Eaton Spring Corporation, at an early date, it was announced yesterday, leaving the latter company with a capitalization solely of 10,000 shares of no par common stock, all of which is owned by the parent company.

The Eaton Axle and Spring Company will issue $750,000 five-year 5½ per cent. gold notes, which will be used, together with other funds, for the retirement of the subsidiary's preferred stock. Upon completion of this financing, all the earnings of the subsidiary will be available to the parent company through ownership of 100 per cent. of the common stock, on which no dividends have been paid in some time.

The preferred stock to be retired was originally issued in 1926 to the American Steel Foundries, in payment for the plants and business of the Automobile Steel Parts Company of Detroit, acquired by the Eaton Spring Corporation.

C. J. Cahn Pays $290,000 for Seat.

Sale of a membership in the New York Stock Exchange at $290,000, the same price as that of the last previous sale, was announced yesterday. The seat involved was that of the late F. W. Annes, which was purchased by C. J. Cahn. Another membership, that of the late R. M. Irwin, was transferred to A. P. Hinckley for a nominal consideration.

Bonus for Executives Proposed.

The stockholders of Cluett, Peabody & Co. will consider at their annual meeting on Feb. 28 a plan providing that when consolidated net earnings exceed $7.50 a share on the common stock the executives who are directors and certain other executive employes shall receive 20 per cent. of all the excess.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

It was the lowering of the call money rate from 4½ to 4 per cent. which gave impetus to the new forward movement on the Stock Exchange yesterday. With a large short interest running to cover in many "trading favorites," operators committed to the advance had little difficulty in keeping the market going at full speed ahead. There was little in the day's news, aside from the reduced money rate, to stimulate trading enthusiasm, but the market acted as if it was being driven by powerful influences. Some of the Wall Street comments indicated the existence of an impression that the speculative fever was largely artificial, but at any rate it served its purpose. There were, to be sure, many weak spots, but the movements upon which the trading fraternity based its judgment of the market were those that pointed upward.

Steel Tonnage Report Today.

The United States Steel Corporation will announce at noon today the total of unfilled orders on its books at the end of January. After revising its estimates several times, Wall Street seemed to have concluded yesterday that the statement would show an increase of 400,000 tons or more. If that guess proves to be correct, it will be found that the corporation has on its books the largest backlog of orders in two years. The financial community a few months ago had discarded the periodical statements of unfilled orders as of no significance, but lately they are being studied with renewed interest. Any evidence of improvement in steel business is considered interesting at this time because of the gradual firming-up in prices.

Country Sends Funds Here.

The receipt of large amounts of out-of-town money was the principal explanation of the decline in the call money rate yesterday, first from 4 to 4½ per cent. and later to 4 per cent. The latter was the lowest rate in a week and corresponded to the rate in effect before the advance in the rediscount rate. Recent firmness in call money rates have attracted funds here from other centres, but such movements are expected to cease when the last of the Federal Reserve Banks move their rediscount rates up to 4 per cent. The Philadelphia bank is the only institution near New York which remains on a 3½ per cent. basis, the others being in the Middle West and South.

Russia Sends Gold.

The movement of gold to and from the United States has been a subject of considerable comment recently, but bankers got a new aspect of the situation yesterday in the news that Russia was making her first shipment of gold here since the war. The amount of the shipment is $5,000,000, and it will be received here by the two banks that lead in Russo-American financing. As to the purposes of the shipment, there were as many conjectures as there were when France was shipping gold to New York last April. The explanation that seemed most acceptable was that Russia had been exporting gold regularly to England and Germany recently, and that the country's expansion of trade with the United States makes gold shipments here a matter of banking and trade routine.

Brokers' Loans Still Rising.

The report of brokers' loans was awaited with an unusual amount of interest yesterday, on the theory that the advance in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's rediscount rate last week was based at least partly on the expansion of stock market credit. If the rate advance indeed was directed against a growth in brokers' loans, it has so far been ineffective, for the report showed an increase of more than $19,000,000 in the loans this week, and the total is more than $36,000,000 above that which existed before the rate advance. The large new financing of this week accounted for a considerable part of the increased borrowings, but it was pointed out also that comparison with this week a year ago, which shows an increase of $1,114,442,000 in the twelvemonth, could have been affected only slightly, if at all, by brokers' borrowings to underwrite new securities, since loans made for that purpose are closed out when the securities have been distributed.

Bonds With Warrants.

One of the most popular forms of financing at the present time is the issuance of bonds with stock warrants attached. It has added a speculative feature to the sale of these industrial bonds which has at once become popular, and in many recent cases both the bonds and the stocks are selling materially above the offering price. The theory is that the bonds represent a mortgage on the property, while the stock represents a percentage or share of the corporation's income. At least half a dozen deals are now under negotiation with just this sort of set-up.

Fast Information.

London rubber brokers, who with New York brokers experienced one of the most hectic days in the history of rubber yesterday because of the announcement that the Stevenson Restriction Plan for rubber is under fire and may be abandoned, were particularly excited, according to their cable communications to New York, because the news evidently was known in New York before it was in London. Many members of the Rubber Exchange were queried by long-distance telephone and cable yesterday by their London associates as to just the time at which the news became generally known to the trade here. Evidently it was quite a while after the market had closed, because it was not a factor in Wednesday's trading.

MONEY.

THURSDAY, FEB. 9, 1928.

Stock Exchange call money was easy, rate dropping to 4 per cent. just before 2 o'clock, lowest since Feb. 2. Renewals were placed at 4½, with subsequent decline to 4¼, and then to 4. Street funds obtained as low as 3¾, before the close. Money was in good supply, but demand was relatively light. Time money was unchanged, the little business reported being turned over at 4½ per cent. as previously. Commercial paper and acceptances were unchanged.

Mr. Charles F. Miller, President of Hamilton Watch Company, has summarized to us his letter of February 8, 1928, as follows:

CAPITALIZATION
(Upon Completion of this Financing)

	Authorized	Outstanding
6% Cumulative Preferred Stock (this issue)	$5,000,000	$4,800,000
Common Stock (par value $25)	5,000,000	4,500,000

BUSINESS: Hamilton Watch Company, of Lancaster, Pa., was incorporated under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania in 1892. It manufactures a complete line of high grade watches, its products having become widely known through a systematic campaign of advertising continued for many years. From a small beginning the business has shown a steady growth entirely out of earnings until now the Company is one of the leading watch manufacturers in the United States. Sales have increased over 500 per cent. since 1911, the year 1927 having been the largest in its history. In order to broaden its line of products as well as to effect economies in distribution, the Company has recently entered into a contract to acquire the assets of Illinois Watch Company of Springfield, Illinois. This Company was formed in 1870 and also produces high grade watches in all models. The two lines of products naturally supplement each other and the consolidation should make possible substantial economies in advertising and selling expenses as well as a reduction in manufacturing costs. The Company will continue to produce both "Hamilton" and "Illinois" watches in all the popular pocket and wrist models, including their famous railroad watches.

PLANTS: These companies' plants at Lancaster, Pa., and Springfield, Ill., are well located with regard to labor supply and markets, both being convenient to large centers of population. These plants, which are of modern construction and are equipped with up-to-date labor saving machinery, are located on approximately 22 acres of ground, giving the Company ample room for expansion. At Lancaster the Company has developed a residential section for its employees, adjacent to its plant.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: The proceeds of this issue of Preferred Stock will provide in part for the acquisition of all the assets, including plants, equipment and good will, of Illinois Watch Company.

ASSETS: The accompanying balance sheet of the Hamilton Watch Company as of December 31, 1927, giving effect to the purchase of the assets of Illinois Watch Company and to this financing, as certified by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, shows net tangible assets of over $9,700,000, or over $200 per share of this 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock to be outstanding. Net current assets alone are over $6,350,000. In the opinion of the management, real estate, plants and equipment are carried on the books at well below their replacement values. The Company has no funded or floating debt.

EARNINGS: The combined earnings of the two companies after interest, depreciation and Federal Taxes, as certified by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery as to Hamilton Watch Company, and by Messrs. Arthur Young and Company as to Illinois Watch Company, were as follows: in 1923, $1,274,835; in 1924, $955,359; in 1925, $1,109,854; in 1926, $1,168,050; in 1927, $1,328,691, or an annual average of $1,167,358. This is over four times the $288,000 annual dividend requirements for this 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock to be outstanding.

GENERAL: The paid in capital of Hamilton Watch Company at its inception in 1892 was $500,000. This has since been increased without further contributions from the stockholders to the $4,500,000 of Common Stock and $409,400 earned surplus as shown on the accompanying balance sheet. In addition to this, cash dividends on the Common Stock from time to time outstanding have been paid without interruption since 1899, the aggregate amount being over $3,500,000. The present rate of dividend is 15.6% per annum. Recent sales indicate a value of over $14,000,000 for the Common Stock.

The individuals to whom the Company's successful past is directly attributable will continue in the management and retain their financial interest in the Company through the ownership of both Preferred and Common Stocks.

Application will be made to list this Preferred Stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

Price 100½ and Accrued Dividend

Preferred Stock offered subject to sale and when, as and if issued and received by us, subject to authorization by stockholders and prior subscription rights of the holders of Common Stock, and subject to approval of the form and validity of the documents and proceedings by our counsel, Messrs. STANDARD OIL BONDS ON MARKET TODAY

New York Company Refunding 6½s With 4½s to Amount of $20,000,000.

INDUSTRIAL ISSUE OFFERED

$1,500,000 of Stillwater Worsted Mills' Debentures—Yesterday's Loans Oversubscribed.

Offering of an issue of $20,000,000 Standard Oil Company of New York 4½ per cent. debentures, due from 1929 to 1948, to refund a like amount of 6½ per cent. debentures, due on May 1, 1933, which have been called for payment on May 1, 1928, will be made today at prices to yield 4.05 to 4.60 per cent. by a banking group headed by Blair & Co., Inc., the Equitable Trust Company and the Chase Securities Corporation. The issue is callable as a whole on any interest date at 102 and interest until Feb. 15, 1940, and thereafter at ¼ of 1 per cent. less for each year or fraction thereof subsequently elapsed.

In connection with the offering of these debentures it is stated that while earnings for 1927 have not been definitely determined consolidated net earnings for the period, available for interest and Federal taxes, were more than five times the annual interest on the funded debt to be outstanding on completion of this financing.

An issue of $1,500,000 Stillwater Worsted Mills fifteen-year 5½ per cent. sinking fund debentures, Series A., will be offered today by Lee, Higginson & Co. at 99 and interest, to yield about 5½ per cent. Net earnings of the company for 1927, after depreciation, totaled $928,488, or more than ten times the interest requirement of these debentures, which constitute the company's only funded debt.

Oversubscription of the issue of $10,750,000 Paris-Orleans Railroad Company 5¼ per cent. sinking fund bonds, offered yesterday, was announced by the bankers. The subscription books were closed at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

Announcement that the issue of $2,500,000 McCord Radiator and Manufacturing Company fifteen-year debenture 6s of 1943, offered yesterday, was quickly oversubscribed was made by the bankers.

BOND MARKET STEADY, CONVERTIBLES ACTIVE

Although the volume of trading in the bond market was held down somewhat yesterday by the increasing amounts of new offerings, a firm level of prices was maintained. Much of the activity was in the more speculative issues, particularly the convertibles, many of which were sharply higher, but a steady demand existed for the more seasoned investment securities. The market was helped by an easier tone in money, featured by a decline from 4½ to 4 per cent. in the call loan rate. Foreign bonds continued their upward movement.

The general run of railroad and industrial bonds offered no outstanding features, while the specialties moved actively. Liquid Carbonic 6s were an example, with a net advance for the day. Brooklyn Union Gas 5½s, which for months have fluctuated widely in sympathy with the stock market, advanced 5 points. Slightly easier prices prevailed, however, for the bonds of Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Edison, which were mentioned as likely to join in a merger that would include the Brooklyn Union Gas Company. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit 6s advanced half a point, while most of the Interborough issues were only about steady. Other active issues included Cuba Cane Sugar 8s and 7s, American Sugar refunding 6s, Kayser 5½s and Andes Copper 7s. Pathe Exchange 7s continued their decline, losing 3 points.

Activity in foreign bonds included buying of French, Italian, German and some of the South American issues at firm prices. United States Government securities scored slight advances, though trading in them was light.

JERSEY CITY TO SELL BONDS

Will Award $3,650,000 on Feb. 17 —Suffolk County to Borrow.

Officials of Jersey City announced yesterday that on Feb 17 they will receive bids for an issue of $3,650,000 tax revenue bonds, dated Feb. 1, 1928, and due on Aug. 1, 1931. Bidders are asked to name the rate of interest.

The last time the city was in the market was on June 15 last, with an issue of $1,987,000 tax revenue notes; $1,366,000 due in 1928, which were sold as 4s, and $621,000 due from 1929 to 1937, which were awarded at 4½s. In addition, the city awarded an issue of $926,000 4¼ per cent. water bonds on a 4.10 per cent. basis and an issue of $931,000 4¼ per cent. general improvement bonds on a 4.22 per cent. basis.

Bonds to the amount of $889,000 will be sold on Feb. 15 by Suffolk County, N. Y., consisting of $500,000 court house bonds, due from 1929 to 1953, and $389,000 highway bonds, maturing from 1929 to 1948. Both issues will bear interest at the rate of 4¼ per cent.

The principal awards to be made today are $500,000 city of Tulsa, Okla.; $500,000 Woodfin Sanitary District, N. C., and $600,000 Chester County, S. C., bonds.

Bond Company's Stock Sold.

Titus, Jones & Co. have purchased and placed privately a block of stock of the Westchester Bond & Mortgage Corporation. This transaction does not represent new financing. The corporation's balance sheet as of Jan. 31, 1928, shows surplus and undivided profits in excess of $162,000, with capital of $500,000.

$31,102,000 New Securities Offered for Investment

New offerings of securities to the amount of $31,102,000 will be made today by New York banking houses and syndicates. Bonds amount to $21,500,000. The remainder is in stock, including both common and preferred.

Industrial	$21,500,000

BANKERS OFFERING FIVE STOCK ISSUES

Largest Amounts Are $4,800,000 for Hamilton Watch Co. and $2,500,00 for Neisners.

LATTER PLANS EXPANSION

Shares of Alabama Power, American Colortype and Sanitary Postage Service on Sale.

Five issues of stock are to be placed on the market today. The principal offering will be $1,800,000 of the Hamilton Watch Company's 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock. This is to be sold at 100½ and accrued dividend by Brown Brothers & Co., Edward B. Smith & Co. and Redmond & Co. The issue is callable as a whole or in part on any dividend date on thirty-days' notice at $105 and accrued dividends.

Proceeds of the issue will be used in part for the acquisition of the Illinois Watch Company. The combined earnings of the two companies for 1927, after interest and depreciation, amounted to $1,328,691 and for the last five years to an annual average of $1,167,358, which is more than four times the annual dividend requirements on this issue of preferred stock. Application will be made to list the issue on the New York Stock Exchange.

George H. Burr & Co. will offer $2,500,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of Neisner Brothers, Inc., at a price of 115 and accrued dividend. Each share is convertible into one and a third shares of common stock up to Feb. 1, 1931, and thereafter to Feb. 1, 1933, on a share for share basis. Proceeds from the sale of this issue will be used for expansion of the company's chain of 5-cent-to-$1 stores.

A new issue of $1,950,000 Alabama Power Company $5 cumulative preferred stock, consisting of 20,000 shares priced at $97.50 a share, will be offered today by Estabrook & Co. and Putnam & Co. The company is one of the principal operating subsidiaries of the Southeastern Power and Light Company.

A block of 40,000 shares of the American Colortype Company's no-par value common stock will be offered at $22.50 a share by Potter & Co. of New York and Paul H. Davis & Co. of Chicago.

Offering of 6,000 shares of cumulative preferred stock of the Sanitary Postage Service Corporation of Delaware will be made by J. A. de Camp & Co., Inc., at a price of $42 a share. Each share of preferred carries as a bonus one share of common stock.

Paramount Pays Off Loans.

Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation has paid off the last of its bank loans and is now completely out of the banks for the first time since it began its expansion program three years ago, according to a statement issued yesterday in behalf of the corporation. Bank loans on July 2, 1927, aggregated $15,885,882. The corporation has also anticipated payment of $1,000,000 purchase money obligations not due until next October.

The Alabama Power Company, an Alabama corporation, is one of the largest hydro-electric companies in this country. Its properties are all located in Alabama and it supplies directly all commercial electric light and power requirements in more than 250 communities, including Mobile, Montgomery, Anniston, Tuscaloosa, Gadsden, Selma, Huntsville and the Muscle Shoals District, and at wholesale all the power requirements of the utilities serving Birmingham, Bessemer and six other communities. It does the entire commercial gas business in Montgomery, Anniston and three other communities, and the local transportation business in Montgomery and five other communities. The Company also supplies power at wholesale to other utilities including the major portion of the requirements of the two affiliated companies serving respectively western Florida and the eastern half of Mississippi.

The Company is one of the principal operating subsidiaries of the Southeastern Power and Light Company and it forms with other subsidiaries of that Company a compact and continuous group of power and light properties, serving practically the entire State of Alabama, the eastern half of Mississippi, western Florida, and the larger part of the State of Georgia.

Earnings

The consolidated earnings of the companies now forming the Alabama Power Company were as follows for the 12 months ended December 31:

	1927	1926
Gross Earnings, including other Income*	$17,506,231	$15,709,170
Operating Expenses, Maintenance and Taxes (except Federal Income Taxes)	7,904,689	7,027,075
Net Earnings	$9,601,542	$8,682,095
Total Annual Interest on Funded Debt now outstanding	3,541,075
Balance Available for dividends, renewals, replacements, Federal Income Taxes, etc.	$6,060,467
Annual dividend requirements on all outstanding Preferred Stock, including this issue	$1,834,510

* Includes interest during construction capitalized amounting during the twelve months ended December 31, 1927, to $657,925 and during the preceding period to $1,150,003. Of the gross earnings for the year ending December 31, 1927 over 89% was derived from electric power and light operations.

For the twelve months ended December 31, 1927, the balance shown above was equivalent to more than 3¼ times the annual dividend requirement on all outstanding Preferred Stock, including this issue.

Cumulative Preferred Stock

(With Common Stock Bonus)

Preferred as to dividends at the rate of $4 per share over the common stock. Entitled in voluntary liquidation to $55 per share and accrued dividends; in involuntary liquidation to $50 per share and accrued dividends. Redeemable at $55 per share plus accrued dividends after January 1, 1931. Preferred stockholders are entitled to exclusive control of the Company in the event of failure to pay in full all accrued dividends for a period of 12 months. Dividends exempt from present normal Federal Income Tax.

While dividends are accumulating on the Preferred stock, it is not anticipated that they will be paid until such time as the Company completes its installation of 30,000 machines.

CAPITALIZATION

	Authorized	To be presently Outstanding
Preferred shares (no par value)	36,000	29,135.2
Common shares (no par value)	180,000	145,676

Summarizing letter of Joseph J. Schermack, Esq., President:

HISTORY AND BUSINESS

Prior to the formation of this Company large numbers of these machines were sold outright. Earnings of machines thus sold averaged about $80 per annum. It was decided to discontinue their sale and to place them in future on a profit sharing basis only. This Company was organized in 1926 for that purpose. Approximately 20,000 machines are now in operation under the new plan. Some of the more prominent users are United and Schulte Cigar Stores (1,425 machines), Liggett Drug Stores (508 machines), Pennsylvania Terminal, New York; chain stores, hotels, department stores, drug stores, cigar stores, stationery stores and many other locations throughout the United States.

EARNINGS

Earnings for first 9 months of 1927 were at the rate of $18 per machine per year. Of this amount about $5.41 was available for Preferred dividends and depreciation. Earnings for the common stock were at the rate of about 29¢ per share before depreciation. This was on the basis of only 6 sales per machine per day. Returns from United Cigar Stores and Schulte Cigar Stores installations are not included in these figures.

Current analysis of 785 machines in chain drug stores shows average of 13 sales per day, or $47 per annum.

SECURITY

At present each share of Preferred stock is, in effect, secured by nearly 1½ machines. In the past these machines have been sold outright over a period of years for not less than $50 each. Ultimately each share should represent approximately three machines. This would place about $150 of assets back of each share of this Preferred stock.

PURPOSE OF THIS ISSUE

The proceeds of this issue of stock will be devoted to paying off current indebtedness, to the installation of approximately 10,000 additional machines and to other corporate purposes.

This stock is offered as an exceptionally attractive speculation

LOANS TO BROKERS AGAIN SET RECORD

Increase of $19,200,000 in Week Raises the Total to $3,835,020,000.

LARGE FUNDS FROM OUTSIDE

Banks Here Reduce Amount Lent for Their Own Account by $96,524,000.

A new high record in brokers' loans was announced yesterday, the result of an increase of $19,200,000 for the week in the total of such loans made by the Federal Reserve member banks of New York City. This followed an increase of $27,135,000 last week, making a total expansion of $46,335,000 from the level that existed before the advance in the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York from 3½ to 4 per cent. last week. The largest portion of the increase has been due to loans placed here for the account of out-of-town banks.

Following are the detailed figures of the stock and bond collateral loans made to brokers by the Federal Reserve member banks in New York City:

	Feb. 8.	Feb. 1.
Loans for own acct.	$1,171,480,000	$1,267,004,000
For out-of-tn. bks.	1,663,792,000	1,499,269,000
For others	2,100,748,000	1,061,817,000
Total	$5,935,020,000	$3,915,820,000

Of the present total, $2,920,099,000 consists of demand loans and $914,-921,000 of time loans, which compares with $2,914,263,000 of demand and $901,557,000 of time loans in the preceding week.

Despite the activity of the stock-market, with advances in several sections of the list in the last week, Wall Street had expected no appreciable increase in the loan total, particularly as the advancing of the rediscount rate had been considered as a gesture against the prolonged expansion in stock market credit. So far as the New York banks were concerned the Reserve Bank's action was effective, as the loans of these banks for their own account declined $96,524,000, and this followed a similar tendency in the previous week. The higher money rates which prevailed for a while, however, caused a renewed influx of money to New York from other parts of the country and of increased loans by the group classed as "others," accounting for the net increase in the loan total. Heavy new financing during the week also contributed to the increased loan total.

Brokers' loans now are $1,114,542,-000 above their total at this time last year. They show a net increase of $34,997,000 from the first week of this year and are $47,096,000 above the low point for this year, which was established on Jan. 18.

Following are the brokers' loans figures since the beginning of the year, and those of the corresponding weeks of 1927:

Jan. 4	$3,810,023,000	$2,818,561,000
Jan. 11	3,819,315,000	2,971,153,000
Jan. 18	3,787,924,000	2,780,179,000
Jan. 25	3,788,685,000	2,731,940,000
Feb. 1	3,815,820,000	2,730,001,000
Feb. 8	3,835,020,000	2,720,578,000

Seeks to Protect Term 'Happiness.'

The Happiness Candy Stores, Inc., began action in the Federal Court yesterday to restrain the Happiness Drug Shops, Inc., from the use of the term "Happiness." The plaintiff alleged that the term was registered as a trademark in September, 1922, and that later the phrase "Fountain of Happiness" was also registered. It is alleged that more than $2,000,000 has been spent in advertising the names. It was said that the defendant was a subsidiary of the Partos Realty Corporation, which is also named as a defendant. An accounting of profits is asked for.

$9,118,750 Mortgages Accepted.

The Executive Committee of the Lawyers Mortgage Company has accepted mortgages aggregating $9,-118,750, distributed as follows: Manhattan $797,550, Bronx $4,505,000, Brooklyn $1,502,950, Queens $1,502,-950 and Westchester $929,000.

WHELAN TO DIRECT TOBACCO PRODUCTS

Made President, He Proposes Distribution of Assets of Corporation.

The election of George A. Whelan to be President of the Tobacco Products Corporation yesterday, accompanied by his announcement that he would work out a plan to dissolve the corporation and that the value of each share of common and Class A stock was more than $150, brought about a rally in the prices of these stocks yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The common stock opened at 104¾, the day's low point, and rallied to 111, closing at 110½, up 6¾ points on the day. The turnover was 22,900 shares. The Class A stock opened at 114, the low, and closed at the day's high of 119¼, up 6 points, with a turnover of 2,800 shares. The high prices for this year are 113¾ and 122 respectively.

Mr. Whelan succeeds as President Thomas B. Yuille, who resigned to devote more time to other business in which he is interested. He will remain on the boards of the Tobacco Products Corporation and its subsidiaries, however.

In a statement which followed the announcement of his election, Mr. Whelan said he had accepted the Presidency of the corporation with the idea of working out a plan to dissolve it and to distribute its assets, subject to the approval of the stockholders.

"The figures show the value of each share of common and class A stock to be over $150 a share," Mr. Whelan said. "I am certain the plan devised will be for the best interests of holders of Class A stock as well as of common stock." It will provide for keeping intact the company's holdings of common shares of the United Cigar Stores Company, whose stock now has a greater potential value than at any other time in its history, due to interests recently acquired in other companies."

The other "interests" were regarded as undoubtedly being the new Schulte-United Five-Cents-to-One-Dollar Stores, which is controlled by the United Cigar Store Company of America and the Schulte Retail Stores Corporation.

The capitalization of the Tobacco Products Corporation, which owns about 80 per cent. of the common stock of the United Cigar Stores Company, consists of $44,809,250 of common Class A 7 per cent. non-cumulative stock, and $65,933,050 of common stock, both of $100 par value. Its balance sheet of June 30, last, showed total assets of about $75,085,000, when the Class A stock amounted to $20,713,000 and the common stock to $45,584,000. The present capital of $110,742,300 par value indicates that total assets are now at a much higher level than at the end of last June.

Mr. Whelan said last night that, so far as he knew, he was the largest stockholder of Tobacco Products A shares.

REPORTS NET OF $698,670.

Municipal Service Corporation Earns $2.07 on Common Shares.

The Municipal Service Corporation reports for 1927 a net income of $698,670, equal after preferred dividends to $2.07 a share on 290,000 shares of common stock outstanding at the end of the year, against $350,-575 earned in 1926. Gross sales were $7,765,782, against $7,207,771 in 1926.

The 1927 sales of gasoline amounted to 60,104,914 gallons, compared with 45,319,228 gallons in 1926 and 36,536,547 gallons in 1925. Retail sales in 1927 were 15,988,024 gallons. There were forty-nine gasoline service stations in operation at the end of 1927, a gain of seventeen stations for the year.

Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Company.

The net profit of the Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Company, after all charges and taxes, amounted to $1,806,198 for 1927, equal to $6.55 a share earned on 275,625 shares of capital stock, as compared with $1,879,396, or $7.53 a share, earned on 250,000 shares outstanding in 1926. A 10 per cent. stock dividend was paid last year. Sales were $12,780,-161, against $12,023,484 in 1926.

SOVIET SENDS FIRST GOLD SHIPMENT HERE

$5,000,000 in Bullion Leaves Hamburg Today and Is Due on Feb. 20.

TWO BANKS TO SPLIT CARGO

Chase National and Equitable Trust Will Receive the Bars—Move to Facilitate Trade Is Seen.

The Soviet Government will ship from Hamburg today the first consignment of gold it has sent to the United States, it was disclosed in circles close to Soviet banking interests here yesterday. The amount of the bullion shipment is $5,000,000 and it is in the hold of the steamship Hamburg of the Hamburg-American Line, which is due here Feb. 20. The gold will be divided between the Chase National Bank and the Equitable Trust Company.

The bars will bear the imprint of the State bank of the Soviet Union, a device as yet unknown in the strong rooms of American banks. The metal of which they are composed is described as part of the $25,000,000 annual gold production from Russian mines. Before the war the Russian mines were important sources of the previous metal and their output circulated internationally.

Post-War Trade High.

Russia has been exchanging gold with Great Britain and Germany for about two years, but until now has conducted its trade with the United States without the aid of bullion shipments. This trade now totals about $100,000,000 annually, or more than before the war. While Russia's trade balance with the world at large is favorable, it imports more from America than it exports to this country. The gold on its way here will therefore serve to correct the adverse trade balance with this country.

"The business transacted between the State Bank of the Soviet Union and certain American banks is already considerable and there is every prospect of it increasing," said an official in touch with Russo-American financing yesterday. "The State Bank, therefore finds it desirable and necessary to maintain an increasing proportion of its resources in the United States, particularly in connection with its commercial credit operations, not only in this country, but also in other countries. Accordingly, it is making shipments of gold amounting to about $5,000,000 to the Chase National Bank and the Equitable Trust Company."

The shipment is regarded here not only as a move to facilitate the trade between the United States and Russia, but as a fund which the Bank of the Soviet Union may use in exchange operations. Its receipt will place the Russian bank in the position of other large foreign banks that maintain gold holdings here. It will round out the facilities that the Russian bank enjoys through its relations with the Chase, Equitable and other important banks here.

Not Connected With Bonds.

A point stressed in banking circles yesterday was that the shipment was in no way connected with the sale here of part of a $30,000,000 issue of Russian railway bonds. These bonds are sold here by mail, and when it became known that the Chase National Bank would cash coupons of the issue from the account of the State Bank of the Soviet Union, the State Department reiterated its announced stand against Soviet financing here. The correspondence that ensued between the Chase National and Washington over the coupons has not yet ceased.

Independence Indemnity Change.

The directors of the Independence Indemnity Company have decided, subject to the approval of the stockholders, to change the par value of the stock from $100 to $10 and to issue ten shares of $10 par value stock for each share of $100 par stock outstanding. A dividend of $5 a share has been declared, payable March 15.

STATE BOND SALE MARCH 6.

First Offering in 17 Months Will Be for $22,500,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 9.—The first sale of State bonds in seventeen months will take place March 6 when State Controller Tremaine will offer $22,500,000. This will be the first time that State bonds have been sold on what is known as the split rate basis.

There will be three issues in the offering. One is for $12,500,000 for State institutions buildings, bearing a coupon rate of 3½ per cent. They will mature at the rate of $500,000 a year from 1929 to 1953.

The remaining $10,000,000 of the total will be in two issues, one running from one to twenty-five years and the other from one to fifty years. The former issue will total $7,600,000, of which $304,000 will mature annually on March 10 of each year from 1929 to 1953. The balance of the $10,000,000 is a separate issue of $2,400,000, of which $48,000 will mature annually on March 1 of each year from 1929 to 1978. These two issues are general State improvement bonds.

For the last two issues Controller Tremaine said he would ask for bids on the split rate basis. Under this plan, bidders name the interest rate they are willing to accept on each issue. It is to be specified that the rate shall not exceed 4 per cent.

TO EXCHANGE DAIRY STOCK.

U. S. Dairy Products Also Declares a Quarterly on A Stock.

Directors of the United States Dairy Products Corporation have authorized an exchange of common Class A stock for first and second preferred shares, according to an announcement made yesterday by John A. McDermott, President. In addition they declared a quarterly dividend of $1 per share on the A stock for the next fiscal quarter.

The exchange of stock will be made as of Feb. 16, when 44,800 shares of A stock will be exchanged for 11,299 first preferred and 11,141 second preferred shares, which are now on deposit with the Bank of North America and Trust Company of Philadelphia. Transfer books will be closed Feb. 15 and all depositors will receive the regular quarterly dividend due March 1 on the first and second preferred stock deposited by them with the trust company.

Mr. A. H. Neisner, President of the Company, summarizes from his letter as follows:

History: The chain store business of Neisner Brothers, Inc., was started in March, 1911, when the partnership of Neisner Bros. was formed. The original capital of $12,000 was invested in a store in Rochester, N. Y., and the profits for 1911 were $14,951. In April, 1916, the partnership was dissolved, and the present corporation was formed under the laws of New York State.

The business has constantly expanded and is showing a steady growth. Sales have increased from $198,061 in 1912 to $6,477,100 in 1927. The increase in sales for 1927 over 1926 was 44%, and the increase in net profits for 1927 over 1926 was 56%. Every store showed a profit for the year 1927.

Business: The Company operates a chain of twenty-two five cent to one dollar stores, transacting a general line of merchandising business similar to S. S. Kresge Company, S. H. Kress & Company, W. T. Grant Company and J. J. Newberry Company. The stores are located in cities of the following States: Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. The management plans to open, during 1928, about eleven new stores.

Sales and Earnings: The sales and earnings, as certified by Messrs. Wilson & Heye, for the four years ending December 31, 1927, are as follows:

Year	Sales	Net Profits after Taxes	Ratio Net Profits to Sales	*Net Profits Available for Common Stock
1924	$1,907,469	$87,506	4.5%	$75,726
1926	4,497,208	292,618	6.5%	238,321

Balance Sheet: The balance sheet as of December 31, 1927, adjusted to give effect to the present financing, shows Current Assets of $2,140,392.79 as against Current Liabilities of $78,530.33, leaving a Working Capital of $2,061,862.46.

Purpose of Issue: The entire proceeds derived from the sale of this 7% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock (except the portion issued to replace the old (non-convertible) Preferred Stock which is now being exchanged for the 7% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock), will remain in the business and will be used primarily for expansion, in order to meet the constant demands of the business for enlargement of the present stores and the opening of new stores.

Management: The management and control of the Company will continue with those who founded this business and have been responsible for its success.

We offer this 7% Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock if, when, and as issued and accepted by us, subject to the approval of stockholders of the Company and to approval of legal proceedings by counsel. All legal matters in connection with this issue will be passed upon by Messrs. Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft for the Bankers, and Edwin C. Reifern, Esq., of Rochester, N. Y., for the Company. It is expected that delivery will be made on or about February 21, 1928, in the form of permanent stock certificates.

Price per share $115 and accrued dividend

GIANNINI RETICENT ON DEAL WITH JONAS

Bancitaly Corporation Said to Be Arranging New Connections Here.

STOCKS OF BANKS RISING

Keen interest was aroused in Wall Street yesterday by reports that a close working relationship was being arranged between the Giannini interests, which through the Bancitaly Corporation and a California banking chain control more than $450,000,000 of invested capital, and the Jonas interests, which head the Manufacturers Trust Company of New York and the Financial and Industrial Securities Corporation.

In the face of widespread comment in the financial district on the possibility of a joining of interests by the two groups, the strictest silence was maintained by all in authority. A. P. Giannini, President of the Bancitaly Corporation, who lives in California but who is at present in New York, said there was nothing that he could say on the subject. Nathan Jonas, President of the Manufacturers Trust Company, and Ralph Jonas, head of the Financial and Industrial Securities Corporation, also refused to make any comment.

Recent pronounced strength in the securities of the Giannini and Jonas institutions has been associated with reports that a tie-up was in contemplation. Bancitaly Corporation stock, which is listed on the New York Curb Exchange, advanced 9¾ points yesterday on a turnover of 52,200 shares, and the close, at 174¾, contrasted with a low point this year of 136. Stock of the Bowery and East River National Bank, controlled by Bancitaly, which is traded in on the unlisted securities market, was quoted yesterday at 690 bid, with none offered, while Manufacturers Trust stock, also traded in over the counter, was quoted at 794 bid, offered at 802. All of these quotations represented sharp advances from recent levels.

One report yesterday was that the Bancitaly Corporation was buying control of the Financial and Industrial Securities Corporation, which, besides its holdings in the Manufacturers Trust Company, controls a chain of other banks in this city. Like the other reports, this was impossible of confirmation. The Bancitaly Corporation owns stock in many of the larger New York banks, as well as in the leading railroads, industrial companies and public utilities of the country.

The Bancitaly Corporation is the outgrowth of the Bank of Italy f San Francisco, founded in 1904 oy Mr. Giannini with a capital of $150,000. The Bank of Italy, now a national institution operates 288 branches in California. Several years ago the Bancitaly Corporation entered New York with the purchase of control of the Bowery Bank and the East River National Bank, which it consolidated, and it also controls the Commercial Exchange Bank in Wall Street. It has been reported for months that the corporation was planning to enlarge its New York operations through the acquisition of a large bank here and several institutions have been mentioned in this connection.

The Financial and Industrial Securities Corporation has assets of more than $100,000,000. The Manufacturers Trust Company is one of the larger financial institutions of New York. Its statement of Jan. 3, 1928, showed total resources of $296,657,103.

RAISES REDISCOUNT RATE.

Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank Now Fixes It at 4 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City has raised its rediscount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent. Announcement that the rate had been increased, effective tomorrow, was made by the Federal Reserve Board.

In raising its rate the Kansas City bank followed similar action by seven other Federal Reserve banks. Those at Denver, Atlanta, St. Louis and Philadelphia still have a 3½ per cent. rediscount rate.

Dollar Acceptances Reported.

Total dollar acceptances covering exports and imports for twenty-three leading banks throughout the country reporting to Export Trade and Finance as of Feb. 2 amounted to $526,910,287, as compared with $474,458,303 on Jan. 5 and $355,454,452 on Feb. 3, 1927. Acceptances in foreign currencies executed by foreign banks for account of twenty banks reporting amounted to $30,125,355 on Feb. 2, as compared with $18,706,985 on Jan. 5 and $28,870,068 on Feb. 3, 1927.

Gold Movements Reported.

The Federal Reserve Board of New York announced yesterday that imports of gold at the Port of New York in the week ended on Wednesday were $205,000, which came chiefly from Latin America. Exports of gold were $2,240,000, of which $2,000,000 went to Argentina.

Decrease in Reserve Deposits and Securities Shown in the Federal Board's Weekly Report

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The consolidated statement of condition of the Federal Reserve Banks on Feb. 8, made public by the Federal Reserve Board, shows increases of $35,400,000 in holdings of discounted bills, $14,400,000 in cash reserves and $7,200,000 in Federal Reserve note circulation, and decreases of $8,100,000 in bills bought in open market, $32,300,000 in Government securities and $9,600,000 in member bank reserve deposits. Total bills and securities were $5,100,000 below the amount held a week ago.

An increase of $12,400,000 in holdings of discounted bills was reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, $11,500,000 by New York, $10,600,000 by Cleveland and $10,200,000 by Chicago. These increases were offset in part by a total reduction of $9,300,000 in discount holdings reported by the eight other Federal Reserve Banks. The system's holdings of bills bought in open market decreased $8,100,000, of United States bonds $5,500,000, of Treasury notes $22,300,000 and of certificates of indebtedness $4,500,000.

Federal Reserve note circulation was $7,200,000 more than a week ago, an increase of $10,600,000 reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta and smaller increases by four other banks being partly offset by a total reduction of $5,800,000 reported by the remaining banks.

MITCHELL FOR CUT IN BANK INTEREST

Income From Investments Less, He Says, but Expenses Not Likely to Decline.

MARGIN MUST BE PRESERVED

Rate on Deposits Should Be Based on Current Earnings and Not on Past Profits.

Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Bank of New York, in The American Bankers Association Journal, discusses various factors as justifying lower interest rates on bank deposits. Among these is a general decline in yield on securities in which bank funds are invested.

"Operating expenses of the banking business, in which salaries and taxes are the leading items, have not been declining and are not likely to do so," Mr. Mitchell says. "While it is unpleasant to think of disturbing relations with depositors, it is even more so to think of reducing the pay of the bank staffs, and other expenses are largely beyond control. It is evident, however, that a normal equilibrium must be maintained between income and outgo if the banking business is to be kept on a sound basis.

"Banking income is chiefly in the form of interest, and the largest item of banking outgo consists of interests on deposits. The banking business lives mainly upon the margin between interest received and interest paid, and the relation between the two is of vital importance.

Deposits as Investments.

"Bank deposits on time and at interest are to depositors virtually a class of investments of low rate, convertible into cash upon comparatively short notice, the bank assuming responsibility for their profitable employment. The banker prefers to employ these deposits at short time, but he is influenced by the rates obtainable. The banks are directly interested in security yields, first because 30 per cent. of their funds is invested in securities, and, second, if security yields decline, current rates will tend to decline also.

"Current interest rates on deposits should be based on current bank earnings, not on past profits. It is not sound policy to dissipate such profits by running the bank upon a scale of expenditures which is unwarranted by returns upon present values."

Business Improvement Slow.

The Journal finds that so far this year little tangible evidence has appeared of the improvement in business that has been so confidently predicted, with the exception of the steel and motor industries.

"Conditions in the motor industry appear similar to those of steel," the magazine says, "with the entire industry rapidly increasing employment, speeding up production, launching sales campaigns and looking forward to making this a new record year in history.

"The similarity between conditions in the steel and motor industries, however, is not so complete as might appear on the surface, in that while prices are being increased in the former line, they are being reduced in the latter. With the substantial price cuts that have been announced by several leading manufacturers since Jan. 1 and the almost continuous revision of models, it would seem that a stiff competitive year is in prospect and that perhaps profits will not be as satisfactory as volume."

Johns-Manville Earns $3,839,825.

Net income of the Johns-Manville Corporation for the nine months ended on Sept. 30 last amounted to $3,839,825 after Federal taxes and depreciation, equal after preferred dividend to $4.59 a share earned on the common stock. Net sales for the period were $34,042,819.

RESERVE BANK POSITION.

Range of Important Items in 1928, Compared With Preceding Years.

Yesterday's statement of the twelve Reserve Banks showed no new high or low points for the year to date in the important items in the system. The following table shows the highest and lowest points reached thus far in 1928 and in a series of years past by the important items in the Reserve Bank statements:

Redeemable as a whole on any interest date at 102 and interest if redeemed on or before February 15, 1940; thereafter at 102 and interest less ½% for each year or part thereof elapsed after February 15, 1940.

THE EQUITABLE TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, TRUSTEE

Mr. Herbert L. Pratt, President of the Company, in a letter dated February 9th, 1928, writes in part as follows:

PURPOSE: The proceeds of the present issue of $20,000,000, 4½% Serial Debentures will be applied towards the redemption of the $20,000,000 Twelve Year 6½% Debentures due May 1, 1933, which are to be called for redemption on May 1, 1928.

EARNINGS: Consolidated earnings of the Company and its subsidiaries have been as follows:

	Earnings available for Interest, Federal Taxes Depreciation and Depletion	Depreciation and Depletion	Net Earnings available for Interest and Federal Taxes
1922	$55,873,485	$24,681,526	$31,191,959
1924	69,430,292	27,320,306	42,109,986
1925	86,591,500	29,935,238	56,656,262

NOTE: Consolidated earnings as shown above include the earnings of Magnolia Petroleum Company and General Petroleum Corporation on the basis of the present 100% ownership of the properties of those Companies by Standard Oil Company of New York or subsidiaries, during the four fiscal years 1922-1925 (fiscal years ended December 31 for Standard Oil Company of New York and Magnolia Petroleum Company being consolidated with the fiscal year ended the previous June 30 for General Petroleum Corporation); earnings for 1926 include operations of General Petroleum Corporation of California from date of acquisition early (May 18, 1926).

Net earnings as shown above available for interest and Federal taxes averaged $39,708,892 per annum for the period, equivalent to 8.4 times the estimated annual interest charge of $4,718,800 on the funded debt to be outstanding on May 1, 1928.

While the final results for the year 1927 will not be definitely determined until later, it is estimated that the consolidated net earnings available for interest and Federal taxes were in excess of five times the annual interest on funded debt to be outstanding.

ASSETS: The Consolidated Balance Sheet as of December 31, 1926, shows assets equal to 6 times the total funded debt to be outstanding upon completion of this financing. As shown in said balance sheet net current assets amounted to $219,993,271, equal to over twice the total funded debt to be outstanding.

EQUITY: At current quotations, the 17,118,931 shares of capital stock now outstanding represent an equity of over $500,000,000 junior to the funded debt of $102,358,000 to be outstanding after the retirement of the 6½% Debentures.

All offerings are made "when, as and if" issued and received by us, and subject to approval of all proceedings in connection with the issue by our counsel, Messrs. Hornblower, Miller & Garrison. Interim Receipts or Temporary Debentures may be deliverable in the first instance.

TELLS HOW PATENTS HAVE AIDED NATION

Association's Head Calls System Big Factor in Progress in All Fields.

A BOON TO THE FARMER

Edwin J. Prindle at Annual Dinner Reviews the Increase in Productibility.

At the annual dinner of the New York Patent Law Association last night at the Waldorf the entire administration of the patent system in this country was represented. This included the Patent Office, which grants the patents; the courts which adjudicate them and the advocates and solicitors who present the patent cases to these tribunals.

Edwin J. Prindle, President of the association and Chairman of the American Engineering Council's Patents Committee, said in his opening address as toastmaster, that the patent system, in his opinion, had been the primary factor in making the United States foremost among all nations in agriculture, invention and manufacture. More than two-thirds of all inventions of primary importance made since the establishment of the patent system, he declared, had been made by American inventors.

Primitive and Modern Methods.

After referring to primitive methods of farming prior to the first patent law in 1790, Mr. Prindle showed that the farmer thereafter had been supplied gradually with machinery until his crops became greatly increased. Whereas in the earlier years one man could till only a few acres, according to the speaker, today one man only is required on some of the larger and most up-to-date farms for every 250 acres.

Mr. Prindle gave credit to the patent system for practically every modern invention. He included television, the airplane, submarine, telegraph and telephone and the radio. He concluded:

"The dreams of Aladdin and Jules Verne pale in the light of these actual accomplishments. Because of the increased productibility which the American inventor has made possible, the average American workman has an attractive home, electric light, bath, an automobile, a radio and a victrola, as well as the leisure to enjoy them, notwithstanding he has to compete with cheap labor abroad."

Federal Judges Speak.

United States Circuit Court Judges Martin T. Manton and Augustus N. Hand also addressed the 500 or more members and guests of the association. Judge Manton said in part:

"If I were asked to rename this association I would call it the 'Give and Take Society.' The Government gives so much when it grants, through you, a patent monopoly, and you take so much when the court, through your efforts, holds the patent invalid and takes away from the inventor his idea."

Judge Hand then devoted himself to the subject of "Justice." All efforts for the betterment of the human family, he declared, were demands for justice.

"The problem of how to obtain justice for all men, individually and collectively, will be saved by causing the actions of all men to be just," he said. "Just action will be impossible so long as collective society, large or small, is composed of men whose conception of the principle of justice is defective."

BRITISH BANKER ARRIVES.

Sir Robert Kindersley Tells of Savings Campaign in England.

Sir Robert Kindersley, a director of the Bank of England and the London partner of Lazard Frères, arrived here on the Berengaria yesterday for a three weeks' visit.

Trade and industry in England appeared to be showing signs of recovery, assisted by the results of stabilization in the principal countries of Europe, he said, but the recovery would be slow because England's capacity to save and therefore to lend had been seriously interfered with by the war and resultant taxation.

Efforts to induce a habit of saving in those who now have a surplus were being made, Sir Robert said, as many have such a surplus for the first time, due to wider distribution of wealth.

"Upon the success of these and kindred efforts depends the rapidity of the recovery in trade and industry in England," he added. "The total of National Savings Certificates of £1 each, issued by the National Savings Committee as a means to train the people in the necessity and advantages of saving, now amounts to about £850,000,000."

Nast Publications' Income.

The preliminary net income of the Conde Nast Publications, Inc., amounts to $1,232,781 after taxes and charges for 1927, equal after preferred dividends to $3.66 a share earned on the common stock, against $1,011,240, or $3 a share, earned in 1926.

FRENCH BANK'S NOTE ISSUES RISE AGAIN

Circulation Up 503,732,000 Francs for Week, and Not Far Below Highest Record.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes for the week ended Feb. 8, in francs:

Gold at home	decreased 1,000
Gold abroad	Unchanged
Silver in hand	increased 1,000
Notes in circulation	increased 503,372,000
Treasury deposits	decreased 29,883,000
General deposits	increased 240,057,000
Bills discounted	decreased 614,881,000
Advances	increased 82,490,000

"Sundry assets," in which items are included acquisitions of foreign exchange by the bank, increased 237,260,000 francs. The item now stands at 27,354,056,000 francs, against approximately 6,500,000,000 francs a year ago. The 27,790,555,000 francs reached on Jan. 11, this year, was the highest figure ever recorded.

The State repaid the bank 300,000,000 francs during the week. Advances to the State now stand at 22,800,000,000 francs, against 31,000,000,000 francs a year ago and 34,650,000,000 francs two years ago. The present advances are the lowest since April 23, 1925. The advances of 36,500,000,000 francs, reached on July 21, 1926, were the highest on record.

On the basis of the above changes the principal items in the statement compare as follows with the same date one and two years ago, in thousands of francs:

	Gold.	Circ'tion.	Disc. &c.
1928	5,548,880	56,266,557	3,234,474
1927	5,547,822	52,642,566	5,253,042

The circulation on Jan. 4, 58,630,166,000 francs was the highest ever recorded by the Bank of France.

The highest of 1927 was 56,550,607,000 in the last week of the year; the lowest was 51,696,645,000 francs, on Feb. 23.

The French Bank's official discount rate remains at 3½ per cent., to which it was reduced on Jan. 18.

PANAMA STOPS PUBLIC WORK

Shortage of Funds Is Announced Pending Debt Consolidation.

Copyright, 1928, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Feb. 9.—A special session of the National Assembly will convene on Feb. 23, the newspapers announce. The object of the session is the consideration of consolidation of the public debt.

On account of the lack of funds to carry them on, all public works, excepting those for which contracts have been let, were suspended today.

The debt consolidation has been under consideration for some time and propositions for the refunding of the debt have been made to financial interests in the United States, who have made counter propositions to the Government.

The Minister of Public Works said today that the suspension of work is only temporary and that all work will be resumed as soon as funds are available. All highway construction and work on the public hospital of St. Thomas were stopped at the request of the Secretary of Finance.

RUSSIAN 1927 CROPS FAIR.

Moscow Reports Wheat and Rye Near 1926 Yield.

ROME, Feb. 9 (AP).—Soviet Russia's total production of wheat and rye for 1927 was almost equal to that of 1926 and exceeded the production of 1925 by about 7 per cent., according to the report telegraphed today from Moscow to the International Institute of Agriculture here.

Barley production was poor, oats and maize average, while linseed and hemp yielded a good quantity of seed and a good crop. Flax showed a slight decrease.

The wheat crop amounted to 20,400,000 metric tons, as compared with 22,300,000 in 1926. The rye crop was 24,800,000 metric tons, as compared with 22,900,000.

TRUST COMPANY TO EXPAND.

International Acceptance to Double Its Capital and Surplus.

Plans for a doubling of the capital and surplus of the International Acceptance Trust Company of New York, a subsidiary of the International Acceptance Bank, Inc., were announced yesterday. Through the issuance of 5,000 shares of new stock at $200 a share, the capital will be increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000, and the paid-in surplus will be increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000, making the total capital and surplus paid in $2,000,000.

The trust company was formed in March, 1926. Its latest statement showed resources of $12,300,000, and deposits of $11,084,000, with undivided profits of $190,000. The International Acceptance Bank, Inc., will continue to own all the stock of the trust company with the exception of directors' qualifying shares.

BANK FORMS SUBSIDIARY.

Central National Organizes Securities Corporation.

Interests affiliated with the Central National Bank have organized the Central National Corporation, which will buy, sell, hold and deal in securities, both domestic and foreign, and will also participate in underwriting and selling syndicates. The corporation will have an authorized capital of 150,000 shares of no par value Class A stock and 100,000 shares of no par value Class B stock, of which 50,000 shares of each class will shortly be issued.

The Central National Bank, which has main offices at Broadway and Fortieth Street, has resources of approximately $15,000,000.

International Cement Gains.

The International Cement Corporation reports for the final quarter of 1927 a net profit of $1,271,194 after charges, taxes and depreciation, equal after preferred dividends to $1.90 a share earned on the common stock, against $1,234,973, or $1.89 a share, earned in the third quarter, and $1,164,010, or $1.76 a share, earned in the final quarter of 1926. The net income for 1927, compiled from quarterly accounts, was $4,854,710, or $6.90 a share on the common stock, against $4,248,551, or $6.61 a share, earned in 1926.

Duluth-Superior Traction.

The Duluth-Superior Traction Company and subsidiaries report for 1927 a net income of $107,645 after interest, depreciation and taxes, equal, after subsidiary and company preferred dividend requirements, to 56 cents a share on 35,000 shares of the company's common stock. This compares with $60,796, or $2.39 a share, on 15,000 shares of preferred stock earned in 1926.

Rubber Shares Drop Following Government Move for Study of Restriction Policy.

TONE IS STEADY IN PARIS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Raw rubber and rubber stocks were weak today on unexpected news that the Government had requested the Committee on Civil Research to make a review of the whole restriction policy. Stock Exchange traders were angered because New York had got wind of the Government's intention yesterday and discounted it.

It is held that the restriction scheme undoubtedly benefited rubber growers at first by raising the price of the commodity, but that it has also served to hand over large slices of the rubber industry to Holland. While British growers have been forced to restrict acreage Dutch growers have been increasing theirs. The price of rubber fell nearly two pence a pound.

In the House of Commons Sir W. Lane Mitchell said the rubber market would very much like to know whether the present regulations were likely to remain in force for the next twelve months. The uncertainty, he said, had cost the market £23 a ton on 66,000 tons of rubber stocks in London.

Other groups on the Stock Exchange were irregular also, although the gilt-edge securities remained steady.

There was a rally in oils succeded by a fresh weakness. Newspaper shares and Marconi dropped on heavy dealings. The latter stocks were affected by the Government inquiry into means of preventing cable companies from losing their business to Marconi.

Upward Tendency in Paris.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The Bourse was steady today, with the general tendency upward, though less accentuated than in recent sessions. Trading was maintained in good volume throughout with the exception of rubbers, which were weak from the start, and the variations, though slight, were all in the direction of gains.

Rentes, after a slow spell, showed more activity and made slight advances. The 3 per cents. closed at 69.65, the 4s of 1917 at 75.20, the 4s of 1918 at 74.35, the 5s at 104 and the 6s at 86.85.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—The Stock Exchange continued dull today, but the general tendency was firmer despite the small volume of business. The improvement was due principally to the purchase of considerable parcels of mining stocks by private banks on Rhenish orders.

A few specialties, such as textiles, were actively traded in, and at higher prices, but the number of unquoted values was still large on account of the uncertain internal political situation.

The announcement in the afternoon that the private discount rate had been reduced to 6 per cent. somewhat stimulated trading, but it still remained within very moderate limits. Prices, however, were well maintained at the closing hour.

Foreign stocks were weak, with Canadians lower. The money market eased still further. Day-to-day was 5 to 7½ per cent.

LARGE GAIN OF GOLD BY BANK OF ENGLAND

Week's Increase £1,687,000—Reserve Ratio 37 1-3%, Highest Since July, 1914.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes for the week ended Feb. 8:

Gold coin and bullion	increased £1,687,000
Reserve in banking dept., gold and notes	increased 2,253,000
Notes in circulation	decreased 565,000
Notes in reserve	increased 2,252,000
Loans on Gov. securities	increased 315,000
Loans on other securities	decreased 1,250,000
Public deposits	decreased 275,000
Other deposits	increased 1,010,000

The proportion of the Bank's reserve to deposit liabilities this week is 37.32 per cent.; last week it was 35.55 per cent.; two weeks ago 35.85 per cent. This week's percentage is the highest for the year to date, and is also the highest since July 29, 1914. The highest in 1927 was 36.22 per cent., which was also the highest since Dec. 22, 1914; the lowest was 20.58, on Jan. 5.

The statement, compared with the corresponding weeks one and two years ago, is as follows:

	1928.	1927.	1926.
Reserve in banking dept., notes	42,044,000	22,969,620	23,216,776
Notes in circulation	135,269,000	136,960,635	141,092,000
Public deposits	15,122,000	14,720,210	17,827,175
Other deposits	97,532,000	105,625,176	106,815,105
Gov't. securities	53,576,000	29,872,691	43,947,347
Ratio of reserve	37.32	27.39	18.12

The £164,500,162 gold holdings in the Bank of England on Aug. 5, 1925, were the largest in the history of the institution. It held £155,742,064 when gold payments were resumed at the end of April 1925. This week's gold holdings are the highest of the year to date, and are also the highest since Oct. 7, 1925. The highest in 1927 were £155,416,610, on May 8; the lowest, £147,879,209, on Feb. 16.

The Bank's official discount rate remains unchanged at 4½ per cent., to which it was reduced on April 26, 1927.

BIG GAIN FOR GAS COMPANY.

Philadelphia Concern Shows Net Profits of $12,934,457 for 1927.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9 (AP).—The United Gas Improvement Company in 1927 earned net profits of $12,934,457, according to the profit and loss statement of the company made public today.

This is 12.56 per cent. on the average capital stock outstanding during the year and represents an increase in net profits of $3,591,843, it was stated.

The company's earnings in 1927 from regular sources were $12,124,364, an increase of $1,805,786; from special sources (sale of investments) $1,814,926, an increase of $1,072,693. The total earnings were $13,939,290, an increase of $2,876,480. Taxes, salaries and expenses amounted to $1,683,845, a decrease of $330,957.

Capital stock dividends paid during the year amounted to $8,144,072, an increase of $1,627,184. The balance to undivided profit account was $4,790,385, an increase of $1,964,659.

Congress Cigar Earnings Higher.

The Congress Cigar Company, Inc., reports net earnings for the final quarter of the year of $936,390, after charges but before Federal taxes. This compares with $749,794 for the same quarter of 1926. The last quarter earnings are equal, after deduction of Federal taxes, to $2.31 a share on the 350,000 shares of common stock outstanding. For the full year earnings were $3,184,785, as compared with $2,477,156 in the previous year. After the deduction of Federal taxes these earnings were equal to $7.87 a share on the common, as compared with $6.11 for the previous year.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Heavy Buying of Sterling Brings Advance to $4.87—Rupee Reacts—Europeans Firm.

Renewed buying of sterling which has been a feature of this week's market yesterday lifted the pound ⅛ cent, to $4.87. Buying came strong at the close when the day's best price was marked up. Much of this demand was for the account of banks and dealers building up fresh balances.

Reports that the Indian Government had abandoned its intention to introduce the gold standard to take place of the silver basis caused a break in the rupee to 36.50 cents, a new low for the year. This helped the silver currencies and the Chinese descriptions were higher.

Holland guilders were again in supply, reacting 3 points to 40.22 cents, a new low. Other Europeans, the French, Belgian, Italian, Swiss and Scandinavians, were firm. Spanish pesetas dipped 4 points to 16.99 cents, on offerings. Latins were firm.

And the Merger Closed on Time

A RECENT merger of two large corporations included the transfer of twenty-nine parcels of land situated in two states and four counties. Before the merger could be ratified it was necessary to have the titles to the properties examined and insured.

On December 30th Counsel said "The merger must be closed by noon on January 9th." A field staff of 14 men was put in action. They left immediately for their examinations—reporting later at central points and two days before the time limit the undertaking was concluded and our report was in.

PEACE IN OIL WAR IS EXPECTED SOON

A. S. Debenham, Deterding Aide, Confers Here on Standard-Royal Dutch Dispute.

HE CALLS ON W. C. TEAGLE

Head of New Jersey Company Believed to Be the Peacemaker in Fight Over Russian Oil.

A. S. Debenham, who is on a hurried visit here as the representative of Sir Henri Deterding, Managing Director of the Royal Dutch-Shell petroleum group of Europe, passed a busy day yesterday gathering information on the international oil situation upon which he will base a report to Sir Henri and which may pave the way for a settlement of the Royal Dutch's dispute with the Standard Oil Company of New York. Mr. Debenham will sail tonight for England on the Berengaria, the same ship upon which he came over.

Developments here yesterday tended to confirm the impression that has been growing in oil circles that the differences between the Royal Dutch and the Standard of New York growing out of the latter's purchase of Russian oil products are about to be composed.

Officials of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, who are friendly with the Royal Dutch and Standard of New York managements, are attempting to end the quarrel and it appeared likely yesterday that their efforts would meet with success.

Must Solve Overproduction.

Mr. Debenham declined yesterday to add anything to what he said on the Berengaria Wednesday when he avoided any direct reference to Russian oil as an element in the Royal Dutch's fight with the Standard of New York. He said at that time that American oil interests would be obliged to solve the problem of overproduction before price wars in the industry could be settled. He had nothing to say concerning the price-cutting struggle between the Standard of New York and the Royal Dutch in India, where the former company is marketing Russian oil over the protests of Sir Henri.

He conferred for several hours yesterday with Richard Airey, New York representative of the Royal Dutch. It is understood that the conference was attended by other Royal Dutch representatives.

Mr. Debenham paid a courtesy call on Walter C. Teagle, President of the Standard of New Jersey, who has been regarded as the possible peacemaker in the Royal Dutch-Standard of New York fight. He was in Mr. Teagle's office only long enough to pay his respects, and there was no discussion between the two at that time of the reported peace negotiations. So far as could be learned he was not in contact at any time with officials of the Standard of New York.

It was learned yesterday that Mr. Teagle is not directing the discussions that have been going on looking to the settlement of the Royal Dutch's quarrel with the Standard of New York. Another official of the Standard of New Jersey is guiding the movement. Mr. Teagle, it is understood, is the moving spirit and is bringing all his influence to bear upon the representatives of the two companies which are at odds.

Rockefeller's Hand Seen.

The hand of John D. Rockefeller Jr. was seen yesterday in oil officials in the efforts now being made to patch up the differences. The Rockefeller interests are large stockholders of the Standard of New Jersey, the Standard of New York and of the Vacuum Oil Company. The Vacuum, as well as the Standard of New York, is a buyer of Russian oil.

Mr. Debenham has declined to reveal whether there has been any change in the attitude of Sir Henri toward the companies which are purchasing Russian oil. The Royal Dutch head a few weeks ago was vigorously denouncing the Standard of New York for buying "stolen goods," contending that the Russian oil which it is marketing actually belongs to companies that never have been compensated for the oil properties in Russia which the Soviet Government confiscated under its "nationalization of industry" program.

In the last few weeks, however, Sir Henri has had little to say about the Russian oil situation. The fact that his representative, Mr. Debenham, carefully steered away from the subject upon his arrival here has been taken to mean that possibly he is prepared to waive the Russian oil controversy in the move now being made to reach an understanding with the Standard of New York.

There will be a number of conferences today of oil executives who are seeking to terminate the Standard of New York-Royal Dutch fight. It could not be learned last night whether officials of the Standard of New York or Mr. Debenham would take part in any of these discussions.

SOVIET OIL TRADE GROWS.

Exports Last Year Reported as Largest on Record.

Production of crude oil in the Soviet Union amounted to 10,413,000 metric tons in 1927, the largest output in twenty-five years, while exports amounted to 2,135,000 tons and were the largest on record, according to official figures received by the Amtorg Trading Corporation at 165 Broadway. Production was 18.4 per cent. greater than in 1926 and exports 30 per cent. greater.

The oil industry of the country has been reconstructed within four years at a cost of more than $300,000,000, the report says. In 1927 the Amtorg corporation placed orders for drilling and refinery equipment amounting to $4,646,176, it said.

In September, 1927, there were 3,865 wells in operation in the Soviet republics as compared with 2,965 in the same month of the preceding year. Considerable drilling for prospecting purposes was carried on. The Soviet Geological Survey estimates now the oil reserves of the Baku region alone at 1,500,000,000 tons.

The bulk of Soviet exports in 1927 went to Europe, principally to Italy, France, England, Germany and Spain. Exports to Egypt and India are assuming larger proportions.

Oil Purchasing Company Reports.

Net income of the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company for the eleven months ended on Nov. 30 last was $1,111,1114, after depreciation but before Federal taxes, equal to $1.65 a share on the 600,000 shares outstanding, owned jointly by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation. Crude oil sales in the period totaled $54,674,399.

22 STORE CHAINS SHOW 13.7% GAIN IN JANUARY

The first twenty-two chain store companies to report January sales show an aggregate volume of $79,782,018, comparing with $70,171,731 for January, 1927, an increase of $9,610,297, or 13.7 per cent. These stores are as follows, in the order of sales volume: Woolworth, Kroger Baking, Kresge, Penney, Safeway, National Tea, Kress, Grant, McCrory, Childs, Sanitary Grocery, Thompson, Piggly Wiggly Western, Newberry, Grand, People's Drug, Metropolitan, McLellan, Murphy, Loft, Neisner and Silver.

As no report for Safeway Stores, Kroger Grocery and Baking, and Sanitary Grocery sales for January, 1926, is available, comparison with that month is possible only for nineteen companies. Sales of the nineteen organizations last month totaled $58,581,428, comparing with $52,172,619 for January, 1927, and with $46,965,830 for January, 1926, the gain for two years being $11,615,598, or 24.7 per cent.

The reports issued yesterday were as follows:

The sales of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company for January (four weeks) amounted to $12,610,856, comparing with $11,719,317 in January last year, an increase of $900,539, or 7.7 per cent.

The Safeway Stores, Inc., report January sales of $6,908,237, against $4,997,090 in January, 1927, an increase of 38 per cent.

The Piggly Wiggly Western States Company reports sales of $1,202,931 for January, against $971,051 in January, 1927, a gain of 23.9 per cent., and comparing with $598,514 in January, 1926, a gain of 101 per cent. in two years. Sales for the year ended Jan. 31 were $15,751,585, comparing with $8,418,839 in the previous year.

The Metropolitan Chain Stores report sales of $692,346 in January, against $654,816 in January, 1927, an increase of 5.73 per cent., and comparing with $567,414 in January, 1926.

RECOGNIZE 5-DAY WEEK.

Leaders of Women's Clothing Makers Want New Rule Observed.

The Industrial Council of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers called upon its members yesterday to refrain from all Saturday work in accordance with the agreement made with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which provides for a five-day week.

"We are very eager to afford the workers' organization every opportunity to enforce the Saturday closing regulation, and we are giving our members forty-eight hours' notice to close their plants as provided for in the union contract on Saturday," I. Grossman, President of the council, was quoted as saying.

"We believe there should be universal working standards in the cloak and suit market, and we are anxious to see to what extent the union can prevail upon its members not to work on Saturdays. The union, of course, claims that it can regulate the condition, but that remains to be demonstrated."

H. Uviller, manager of the American Cloak and Suit Manufacturers Association, said his organization also had sent letters to its members instructing them against violation of the Saturday closing agreement.

$1,000,000 SUIT ON PATENT.

Rochester Firm Sues General Railway Signal Co. for Infringement.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—A suit to recover $1,000,000 for alleged infringements of patent rights was filed in District Court here today by the Union Simplex Train Control Company, Inc., of Rochester, against the General Railway Signal Company, also of Rochester.

The alleged patent rights cover, according to attorneys, the first practical trackside method of influencing electromagnetic devices carried by passing trains to make train control automatic.

Papers filed allege that Alfred L. Ruthven of Rochester was the inventor of the device, which he is said to have patented in October, 1918, thereafter assigning control to the Simplex Company.

The suit was filed to obtain an injunction against further alleged infringement and for an accounting.

Westinghouse Sales Improve.

Sales of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company in December and January were satisfactory and greater than a year ago, A. L. Humphrey, President of the company, said yesterday. "We started 1927 with a larger number of unfilled orders on our books than we did this year, but our current sales are better," Mr. Humphrey said. "The new vacuum brake for automobiles is developing well and we are making several thousand each week."

Penn Mutual Life Reports.

The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company in its statement for the year ended on Dec. 31, 1927, shows total assets of $367,994,584, a gain of $28,749,215 in the year. Its income aggregated $81,196,812, and policy holders and beneficiaries received $39,178,246. Insurance in force amounts to $1,690,584,711, of which $215,842,049 was written in 1927. Dividends to policy holders totaled $13,042,616.

Gotham Silk Hosiery's Profit.

The Gotham Silk Hosiery Company, Inc., reports for 1927 a net profit of $3,697,452, after all charges, taxes and depreciation, equivalent after preferred dividends, to $3.06 a share earned on the common stock, comparing with $2,879,408, or $6.57 a share, earned in 1926. The Federal tax deductions are subject to final determination by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Western Dairy Products Company.

The statement of the Western Dairy Products Company, including California Dairies, Inc., control of which was acquired last year, shows a net income of $708,918 after all charges and taxes for 1927, comparing with $798,453 in 1926.

Willys-Overland Crossley.

The report of Willys-Overland Crossley, Ltd., the English affiliate of the Willys-Overland Company, for 1927, shows a profit of £75,997 after charges, comparing with £62,463 in 1926.

Bohn Aluminum and Brass.

Net profit of the Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation and subsidiaries for 1927 amounted to $1,181,606, after all charges and taxes, against $873,744 in 1926.

UNDERWOOD STOCK ON $4 ANNUAL BASIS

Company Declares Quarterly of $1 on the Common—$1.75 on Preferred Issues.

STOCK DIVIDEND BY NEISNER

Acetol Products Announces an Initial —Le Mur Will Pay an Extra —Bank Raises Rate.

Heading the list of dividend announcements yesterday, which included initial, extra, stock and foreign disbursements, an increased rate and one omission, the Underwood Elliott Fisher Company announced the establishment of its common stock on a $4 annual basis. This was accomplished through declaration of a quarterly dividend of $1 a share on the 645,200 shares of no-par common stock, the same as was paid formerly by the Underwood Typewriter Company.

The Underwood Elliott Fisher directors also authorized regular quarterly dividends of $1.75 a share on the preferred and Class B preferred stocks. In the future dividends of this company will be declared payable on Jan. 1, April 1, July 1 and Oct. 1 at the December, March, June and September meetings.

Directors of the Acetol Products Company declared an initial quarterly distribution of 60 cents a share on the Class A convertible stock.

An extra dividend of 25 cents a share was announced by the Le Mur Company on its no-par common stock.

The Port Morris Bank authorized a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent., which contrasts with 2½ per cent. quarterly paid previously.

Directors of Neisner Brothers, Inc., announced a stock dividend of 25 per cent. on common stock, payable in that stock. Before the dividend meeting stockholders of the company approved an increase in the authorized common stock from 100,000 to 400,000 shares and also an authorized issue of $5,000,000 of preferred stock. Of the latter, $2,500,000 will be issued immediately, bearing 7 per cent. dividends, while the remaining $2,500,000 will be 6½ per cent. preferred and will be retained in the company's treasury for future expansion of the system.

The quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share on the common stock of the Eagle-Picher Lead Company, which is due at this time, was omitted.

The Chodorow Sugar Company of Poland has declared a dividend of 16 per cent. on the capital stock for the last fiscal year, as against one of 10 4-10 per cent. for the previous fiscal year, according to cable advices received yesterday by Zimmerman & Forshay.

A dividend of one shilling three pence and a bonus of three pence has been declared by the British South Africa Company, the same as was announced a year ago at this time, according to London dispatches.

$24,098,841 DIVIDEND BY GENERAL MOTORS

Dividend payments aggregating $24,098,841 were authorized yesterday by directors of the General Motors Corporation. This distribution represents only the regular quarterly dividends on the four classes of stock, or $1.25 a share on 17,400,000 shares of $25 par common, 1¾ per cent. on $130,618,800 of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, 1½ per cent. on $1,723,400 of 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock and 1½ per cent. on $2,477,400 of 6 per cent. cumulative debenture stock. The payments on each class of stock follow:

Common, $21,750,000; 7 per cent. preferred, $2,285,829; 6 per cent. preferred, $25,851; 6 per cent. debenture, $37,161.

Dividends on the common stock are payable March 12 to stockholders of record Feb. 18. On the senior securities they are payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 7.

There had been reports in Wall Street that the board might declare an extra cash dividend on common. Predictions are now being made that an extra will be declared at the May dividend meeting.

The corporation announced yesterday that its cash and marketable securities aggregated $170,000,000.

URGES COMMON TERMINALS.

Port Authority Offers Clause for Fess Bill, Opposing Monopoly.

The Port of New York Authority announced last night that it had filed a brief with the Interstate Commerce Committee of the United States Senate supporting the Port Authority's argument for a clause in the Fess Railroad Consolidation bill preventing the monopoly of terminals by individual railroads and insuring their common use.

After citing cases in which individual railroads had unsuccessfully tried to control terminal properties for their exclusive use, the Port Authority declared that the trend of public policy was definitely toward common use of terminals. In New York, the brief contended, the terminal problem can never be solved while separate railroads developed their own terminals without reference to any comprehensive idea of developing terminal facilities as a whole. Three clauses giving the Interstate Commerce Commission power to enforce common use of terminal facilities were recommended by the Port Authority for insertion in the Fess bill.

NEW LOCOMOTIVE TRIED.

Battery-Oil-Electric Engine Tested by the New York Central.

A new type of battery-oil-electric locomotive was tried out yesterday on the west side by the New York Central Railroad, which built it experimentally for immediate service in the freight yards of the New York City district that are not electrified and where part of the time the engine must run through city streets. The locomotive, which is said to be the first of its kind ever constructed, carries its own power plant and is equipped with third-rail shoes, to be used when contemplated electrification of the west side is completed.

Weighing 128 tons, the new engine was produced under the direction of E. B. Katte, chief engineer, and H. A. Currie, assistant electrical engineer, of the New York Central, its construction being carried out by the General Electric Company, the Electric Storage Battery Company, the Ingersoll-Rand Company and the American Locomotive Company. It is 46 feet 8 inches in length and has four 600-volt single-geared traction motors, each of 415 horsepower.

STEEL OUTPUT INCREASED.

Production of Entire Industry Now 84 Per Cent. of Capacity.

Production of steel ingots for the entire industry is now at about 84 per cent. of the theoretical capacity of the plants, comparing with a shade above 83 per cent. a week ago and better than 77 per cent. two weeks ago.

The United States Steel Corporation shows a rate slightly above 88 per cent., against nearly 89 per cent. a week ago and 82 per cent. two weeks ago, while the independent manufacturers are near 80 per cent., against 73 per cent. last week and less than 72 per cent. two weeks ago.

A year ago at this time the Steel Corporation was running at 87 per cent. of capacity, with the independents slightly under 79 per cent. and the average 83 per cent.

The Recorded Progress

a general investment trust under management of United States Fiscal Corporation.

Now in its fourth year of operations, the recorded progress of Financial Investing Co. of New York, Ltd. presents an interesting indication of the possibilities of this British-type general management investment trust.

1. Growing Assets

In steadily increasing numbers investors have purchased Financial Investing shares and bonds, resulting in the following increase in the Company's assets.

Feb. 28, 1925	$360,000.00
Feb. 28, 1926	869,164.96
Feb. 28, 1927	1,082,391.90
Jan. 31, 1928	3,069,274.42

2. Increasing Profits

Co-incident with the Company's growth, its rate of net profits has increased. After payment of interest and all expenses, net profits, based upon the monthly average amount of money received by the Company for its common shares, have been as follows:

1925	8.03%
1927 (1st. nine months)	10.61%

3. Greater Dividends

These net profits have permitted the following payment of dividends to shareholders:

	Regular	Extra	Total
1925	5%	1%	6%
1926	10%	2½%	12½%

4. Advancing Prices

Increasing profits, permitting greater dividends, have caused a steady advance in the open market price of Financial Investing shares. Thus:

	Bid	Asked
Feb. 1925	14	15
Feb. 1926	16½	18½
Feb. 1927	18	20
Feb. 1928	24	26

Half a Billion Dollars in Nickels and Dimes!

FIGURES alone fail to convey the great merchandising skill, organization and huge number of sales representing a veritable deluge of nickels and dimes behind the $500,000,000 business reported by a dozen 5 and 10 cent chain store companies in 1927.

The steady and consistent expansion of this industry is another example of the benefits accruing through rendering well, a needed service to the public.

A sound merchandising idea aided by far-sighted banking support has grown into a major industry.

REPORT BY THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE BANK OF IRELAND

For the Year ended 31st December, 1927, to the General Court of Proprietors. On FRIDAY, the 20th JANUARY, 1928, at 1 o'clock in the Afternoon.

Bank of Ireland,
Dublin, 12th January, 1928.

THE Governors and Directors of the Bank of Ireland have to report that the Net Profits of the Bank for the year ended 31st December, 1927, after meeting all charges and providing for Bad and Doubtful Debts, Interest due on Deposits, and Rebate on Bills not at maturity, amount to £571,884 6s. 9d., to which must be added a sum of £68,099 14s. 5d. brought forward from December, 1926, making a total of £639,984 1s. 2d.

Out of this total the Proprietors at a General Court held at the Bank of Ireland on 22nd July, 1927, declared an Interim Dividend of 8¾ per cent., less Income Tax, absorbing £197,134 12s. 4d. The Governors and Directors having transferred £150,769 4s. 7d. to the Rest, now recommend that a Final Dividend of £9 per cent., less Income Tax, be declared for the Year ended 31st December, 1927, which will absorb £208,730 15s. 5d., making, together with the Dividend paid on the 1st of August, 1927, a distribution of 17½ per cent., less Income Tax, for the year 1927, leaving a surplus of £83,349 8s. 10d. to be carried forward.

The Dividend will be paid on 1st February, 1928.

ALEXANDER D. STEWART, Secretary.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

We have examined the above Balance Sheet, with the balances on the books at the Head Office in Dublin and with the Returns from the Branches, as certified by the Agents and Sub-Agents. We have satisfied ourselves as to the correctness of the Cash Balances at the Head Office and at the Bank of England; we have verified the Investments of the Bank as well as the securities held against Cash at Call and Short Notice; and the Bills Discounted held at the Head Office have been produced to us.

We have obtained all the information and explanations we have required, and, in our opinion, such Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the Books of the Head Office and the Certified Returns from the Branches.

SUBMITS SOLUTION IN LAND GRANT CASE

Justice Department Suggests Congress Declare Title So Northern Pacific Can Sue.

FORFEITURE TO BE UPHELD

Then With Lands Revested in the Government, the Courts Could Adjust the Controversy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—In an opinion on the land grant case of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company the Department of Justice today recommended that Congress declare title to the disputed 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres forfeited and then suit be brought in the courts for final adjustment.

The Government contends that the railroad company should turn back about 5,000,000 of the 44,000,000-acre grant because it had absorbed land belonging to forest reserves, Indian reservations and mineral deposits.

The railroad company contends that the Government should cede to it an additional 3,750,000 acres to which it claims title under the original grant.

The case, a long pending one, grew out of the claims by both the Government and the railroad that they were entitled to part of the land and the opinion of the Department of Justice was submitted at the request of a Special Joint Congressional Committee appointed at the last session of Congress to investigate the grants.

Conditions of Adjustment.

All questions of authority would be eliminated and the way cleared for a judicial determination of the whole matter just to both sides, the opinion read, if the following were carried out:

That Congress shall declare its determination that the grant be forfeited for "breach by the railroad company of conditions subsequent."

That the lands remaining in the possession of the company be revested in the United States, making proper provisions for readjustment of the grant.

That proper suit for an equitable adjustment of the whole controversy be instituted.

That the executive branch of the Government institute in court proceedings directed to accomplishment of the same end.

"The United States by virtue of the reserved right to add to, alter, amend or repeal the grant," the opinion added, "has the right to revest in itself and repossess all or any part of the granted lands remaining in the ownership of the company, having due regard for the rights of the company. The power to alter, amend or repeal the granting acts rests only in the Congress."

Right to Declare Forfeiture.

"The United States, by reason of the breach on the part of the company of conditions subsequent contained in the grant, has the right to declare the grant forfeited," the opinion continues, "thereby revesting in the United States the legal title to any part or all of the granted lands remaining in the ownership of the company.

"As to lands wrongfully acquired by the company from the United States and now disposed of and as to lands rightfully acquired but wrongfully disposed of, the company can be required to account to the United States on an equitable basis. The company is entitled to credit for all it has earned under the grant.

"Whether the effective power to declare a forfeiture and revesting in the United States of lands granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for breach of conditions subsequent rests in the legislature or executive branch of the Government has been the subject of conflicting court decisions.

"Whether some of the conditions under consideration here are conditions subsequent, requiring legislative declaration of a purpose to insist on a forfeiture for their breach, is a question that might be litigated with consequent delay and expense. Whether the executive branch can make necessary provision for an equitable adjustment of the grant is not certain."

PRICES GENERALLY FIRM IN UNLISTED MARKET

Resistance to Selling Maintains Levels of Previous Close—Insurance Group Strong.

Trading followed routine courses in the over-the-counter market yesterday as more resistance to selling held prices at much the same levels as prevailed at the previous close. Insurance shares were firmer and chain store stocks appeared well sustained. In general the market was in a hesitant mood.

Among the industrials Crocker-Wheeler issues, Winchester first preferred, Niles-Bement-Pond preferred and Manhattan Rubber were higher at the close. Markdowns appeared against Celulose Products, Magazine Repeating Razor, Gorham Manufacturing common, Joseph Dixon and Industrial Finance common.

Chief gains among the insurance shares were in New Hampshire, North River, Mechanics, United States Fire, Aetna Life, Rhode Island and Lloyds Plate Glass. The markdowns were fractional. In the bank and trust company sections America, Bowery and East River, First National of New York and Chatham Phenix moved forward.

New Niquero and National Sugar Refining were again marked lower, reflecting again the softness of the sugar shares. The communications group was dull, with losses in Peninsular Telephone preferred A, Tri-State Telephone and Telegraph common and Porto Rico Telephone preferred.

Wisconsin Investment Co. Elects.

George A. Morison, Vice President of the Bucyrus-Erie Company; Mackey Wells, President of the Kerner Incinerator Company, and T. Westley Tuttle, Milwaukee manager of Folds, Buck & Co., have been elected directors of the Wisconsin Investment Company. C. Gale Welch was elected Vice President. Net earnings for 1927, transferred to surplus, amounted to $19,878, after State and Federal taxes, compared with $9,909 in 1926. Gross earnings were $32,665, against $14,018.

BALDWIN'S INCOME ONLY $5.21 A SHARE

SURPLUS DOWN $3,000,000

Ratio of Assets to Liabilities Higher Than Year Ago—Work at Eddystone Nearly Done.

The report of the Baldwin Locomotive Works for 1927 shows a net profit available for dividends and surplus of only 41.9 per cent. of the figure for 1926 but the highest since 1923 with the exclusion of that year. The decline was due to the low rate of demand for locomotives throughout 1927 and a consequent decline in productive activities which fell as low as 10 per cent. of capacity last Fall.

The net income in 1927, after interest, depreciation, taxes and deferred profits, amounted to $2,442,200, equivalent after preferred dividends of $1,400,000 to $5.21 a share earned on the outstanding $100 par common stock. This compared with $5,883,907, or $22.42 a share on the common in 1926.

The gross sales of the Baldwin company last year have been exceeded in ten years of the company's history, and last year showed a decline of nearly $15,000,000 from 1926. Sales were $5,000,000 and $7,000,000 greater than in 1925 and 1924 respectively, however, but were practically $70,000,000 lower than in 1923, the second best year in the company's history.

In 1927 sales were $32,901,143, against $47,891,669 in 1926, $102,762,075 in 1923, and $123,179,252 in 1918, the high for all time.

Operating Profits.

The company's operating profit has followed closely the gross sales in each year, amounting to $3,705,446 for 1927, against $5,492,422 in 1926, $196,264 in 1925, $1,920,027 in 1924, $11,951,522 in 1923, and $18,262,112 in 1918, the record.

The setting up of heavy reserves from 1916 to 1923 was followed by dividend payments from reserves in the years 1924 to 1927 inclusive. In these years, however, reserves of $1,263,247 were set up in 1927, $608 515 in 1926 and $600,000 in 1924, while only in 1926, of the four years referred to, were net profits after reserves higher than the $5,600,000 dividends.

The surplus after all dividends and adjustments stood at $15,852,059 at the close of 1927, against $18,847,740 at the end of 1926 and $15,763,333 at the end of 1925.

Current assets at the close of 1927 amounted to $28,908,120, compared with $38,375,403 the year before, and current liabilities were $2,957,271, against $4,851,842. The ratio is now 9.1 to 1, against 7.9 to 1 a year ago. While details of the current assets and liabilities were not given last year, this year cash of $3,457,176, inventories of $3,941,703, receivables of $9,362,842 and the balance in foreign and other securities are shown. Quick liabilities include only $1,563,727 accounts payable and $1,393,543 depositors' saving fund.

Decline in Assets Offset.

Total assets at the end of 1927 are $73,252,099, against $84,850,870 at the close of 1926, a decline of $11,400,000. Plant and equipment were about $834,000 lower, investments about $1,000,000 lower, and deferred charges and sinking fund were also reduced.

On the liability side, the retirement of the entire $1,400,000 outstanding bonds of the Standard Steel Works Company, which also reduced accrued and advance interest on bonds, and the reduction of surplus and reserves from $28,126,781 to $19,843,345, balanced the decline in total assets.

In his report, S. M. Vauclain, President of the company, says:

"The foreign business was satisfactory.

"The transfer of equipment and operations to Eddystone has been continued and will be completed by July, 1928.

"Due to obsolescence of machinery and tools, that account has been depreciated $1,000,000.

"The Standard Steel Works Company issued 20,000 shares additional capital stock, which was purchased by the Baldwin Locomotive Works at par. All outstanding bonds of the Standard Steel Works Company have been retired."

	Sales.	Net Profit.	Earned Surplus.

Doubles Insurance for Employes.

Supplementing $500,000 of group life insurance arranged for employes early last year, the National Broadcasting Company has provided an additional $500,000 of insurance for them on a cooperative basis. The policy, underwritten by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, affects approximately 200 persons.

REPORT BENEFITS IN ST. PAUL PLAN

Stock Exchange Houses Issue Statement to Security Holders of the Road.

ADVISE ON ASSESSMENTS

Urge Protection of Interests by Sale of Bonds and Shares or Entering Reorganization.

In connection with the reorganization of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, a number of Stock Exchange houses have prepared a joint statement to be sent to security holders of the road informing them of the benefits to be derived from the financial plan of the reorganization. This is said to be the first time that a group of financial houses has banded together for the purpose of explaining a company's plan of reorganization to security holders.

The houses include Smith & Gallatin, Tefft & Co., Wellington & Co., Mabon & Co., Billings, Olcott & Co., Parrish & Co., Thomson & McKinnon, Walker Brothers, E. F. Hutton & Co., and Taylor, Bates & Co.

The statement prepared for the holders of St. Paul securities, which was designed to clarify the apparently complicated financial arrangement under the reorganization plan, says:

"We call your attention to the fact that your property has been sold under foreclosure by judicial sale for a sum not sufficient to pay its obligations, which leaves no equity for the preferred and common stockholders. The holders of these stocks have the privilege of becoming parties to the reorganization by paying certain assessments. This is a valuable privilege and expires Feb. 16, 1928. Therefore, unless this privilege is extended by the reorganization managers, your stocks become valueless. We urge stockholders to protect their interests, either by entering the reorganization or by selling their old securities."

In connection with the assessments, the statement says:

"One hundred shares of St. Paul preferred pays $2,800 assessment and therefor receives $2,400 of new St. Paul gold 5s and 100 shares of new St. Paul preferred stock. By the sale of the bonds, when issued, and of fifteen shares of the new preferred, when issued, the assessment can be paid, leaving the holder with eighty-five shares of the new preferred. One hundred shares of St. Paul common pays $3,200 assessment and receives $2,800 of new St. Paul gold 5s and 100 shares of new St. Paul common. If these bonds and twenty-five shares of the new common, both when issued, are sold, the assessment can be absorbed, leaving the holder with seventy-five shares of new St. Paul common. The above rates are subject to change, due to fluctuation of the market price of the securities in question."

CURB ADMITS NINE ISSUES.

Lists Preferred and Common Stock of U. S. and Foreign Securities.

The New York Curb Exchange has admitted 250,000 shares of $6 cumulative first preferred no-par stock of the United States and Foreign Securities Corporation and 1,000,000 shares of no-par common stock to listing.

The following issues were admitted to unlisted trading privileges: The Butterick Company rights to subscribe to additional no-par common stock, when issued; International Shoe Company no-par common stock, St. Louis Car $10 par common stock, McCord Radiator and Manufacturing fifteen-year sinking fund 6 per cent. gold debentures, due 1943, with stock purchase warrants, when issued; Nippon Electric Power first mortgage 6½ per cent. gold bonds, due 1953, when issued; the Ohio Power Company additional issue first and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent. gold bonds, Series D, due 1956, when issued, and Purity Bakeries Corporation twenty-year 5 per cent. sinking fund gold debentures, due 1948, when issued.

CURB MARKET'S SALES PASS 600,000 MARK

Trading Unusually Heavy and Price Movements Wide—Bancitaly a Leader.

Trading on the New York Curb Exchange yesterday was marked by great activity and startling price movements. Most of the wider movements were forward, however. Transactions totaled 618,124 shares. It was the seventh time that the 600,000 mark has been passed on the Exchange. The record is 763,960 shares, made on Jan. 27.

Bancitaly was once more the leader and continued its upward swing, reaching a new high point and closing within a fraction of it. Electric Bond and Share, Shattuck Denn Mining, Standard of Indiana, Bohn Aluminum, Mavis Bottling and American Rolling Mills also were active shares that moved forward.

On the down trend were Anglo-American Oil, Hudson Bay Mining, at a new low; Gulf Oil, Newmont Mining, Sheaffer Pen, Celanese and Northern Ohio Power.

St. Paul rails were firmer in active trading. Swift International touched a new high for the year. Sparks Withering also reached a new peak. USL Battery, Aluminum Company, Atlas Plywood, at a new high; Deere & Co., Gobel and Sanitary Grocery were strong features.

American Gas and Electric, Northern States Power A and Lehigh Power Securities were firm in the utility section. Among the oils, International Petroleum, National Transit and Ohio Oil eased. Venezuelan-Mexican Oil advanced to a new high price.

$1,973,917 for American Snuff.

The American Snuff Company's net profit in 1927 was $1,973,917, after all charges and taxes, equal after preferred dividends, to $15.73 a share earned on 110,000 shares of common stock, as compared with $1,673,449, or $13.05 a share, earned in 1926.

WHEAT PRICES GAIN; CORN AT A NEW HIGH

Removal of Hedges Against Milling Sales Sends March Wheat Up.

LARGER TRADE DEVELOPS

Heavy Buying and Short Covering Are the Day's Feature in Corn.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—The removal of hedges against milling sales of around 325,000 bushels of cash wheat sold by local handlers caused the March delivery to tighten further today and it went to ¾ cent over the May, compared with ⅝ cent under at the finish on Tuesday. There was a material enlargement in the trade, both local and commission house, and with short covering in volume. There was also buying of wheat to close spreads with corn and prices advanced sharply. The finish was at net gains of ⅝ to 1⅜ cents, with March leading.

Bullish sentiment was more in evidence after the close, although the March was regarded as in a stronger position than the May, as when delivery time comes for the latter Duluth grain can be brought down by lake. There is no pressure of cash wheat here, and premiums on red Winter were 1 cent higher and hard Winter ½ cent higher for the day. No. 2 red sold at 19 cents over May. There was some selling early on the weakness in Liverpool, but the latter market turned strong later and closed ¼ to ⅜ pence higher.

Winnipeg was up ⅛ cent for the day, with Buenos Aires ½ cent higher and Rosario unchanged to ¼ cent lower. Large Argentine exports are expected for the week. Export demand was slow, with sales of 300,000 to 400,000 bushels in all positions.

Primary arrivals today, 764,000 bushels; week ago, 876,000 bushels; last year 806,000 bushels. Shipments, 548,000 bushels; week ago, 532,000 bushels; last year, 459,000 bushels.

Corn sold at a new high on the present movement, with May touching 95½ cents, the best figure since Dec. 12, 1927, and the July at 96⅝ cents was in new ground on the crop. There was heavy buying by local professionals and some increase in commission house trade. With short covering the advance was easily attained, and the close was within a fraction of the top, with net gains of ⅞ to 1 cent. Sentiment was decidedly bullish during the day and profit-taking sales were readily absorbed.

Local spot basis was 1 cent higher to ¼ cent lower, with Kansas City unchanged to ¼ cent lower. Argentine corn in April-May shipment was reported offered at 97 cents c. i. f. New York and Montreal, and at 96 cents for May-June. This figured out about 84 cents for No. 2 mixed here, but the duty of 15 cents per bushel prevented any business at the present time. Buenos Aires closed unchanged to ¼ cent higher and Rosario 1 cent lower to ½ cent higher.

Primary arrivals today, 1,724,000 bushels; week ago, 2,508,000 bushels; last year, 437,000 bushels. Shipments, 1,064,000 bushels; week ago, 1,011,000 bushels; last year, 345,000 bushels.

Oats were ¼ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower. A long line was liquidated early, while the strength in corn and buying by cash and commission houses caused a rally toward the last. Rye was unchanged to ¼ cent higher with wheat.

Prices for the principal grains were as follows:

COTTON CONTINUES ITS UPWARD TREND

Prices Advance Into New High Ground for Movement on Quiet but Steady Buying.

The better tone which has been apparent in the cotton market since the break to approximately the 17-cent level early this month was in evidence yesterday, and, if anything, appeared to be gaining somewhat in strength. The buying was by no means active or aggressive, but it was sufficient to rally prices from an early decline and send the market into new high ground for the present movement. March contracts which had sold off to 16.87 on Feb. 2, advanced to 17.77, making a recovery of 90 points from the recent low level, while October sold up from the recent low point of 16.96 to 17.75—a recovery of 79 points. The close was several points off from the best under realizing, however, and the final tone of the market barely steady at net advances of 7 to 12 points.

There was a little selling at the start and on the decline during the day on the forecast for showers in West Texas, together with private reports of rains at a few points in that section. These offerings were comparatively light, with nothing to indicate any renewal of spot liquidation, and after showing net declines of about 7 to 10 points during the early trading the market firmed up on a scattering demand which appeared to come from the trade and shorts, while there may also have been some commission house buying. The advance which carried the active months 13 to 16 points net higher was considered a reflection of increased confidence in values following the declines of nearly 3 cents a pound from the high prices touched toward the end of last December and was accompanied by reiterated reports of a steadier spot situation in the South and of rather a better tone in the cotton goods market. Closing prices showed reactions of about 5 to 8 points from the best under realizing.

A report on sales of fertilizer tax tags for the month of January, indicating an increase of 18 per cent. over last year's, but a decrease as compared with the January sales for 1926 and 1924, received rather a bullish interpretation. Evidently the figures were regarded as indicating that there would not be as great an increase in the use of fertilizers on cotton this season as anticipated a month ago and this impression naturally increased the disposition to question whether the coming acreage would realize bearish expectations.

DISCUSS BUSINESS TRAINING

Members of Management Association Continue Sessions.

The American Management Association, a national organization of business executives, continued its Winter convention yesterday in the ballroom of the Hotel Roosevelt. There was an informal luncheon in the foyer and parlors adjacent to the ballroom.

At the morning session, when "Developing Executive Talent" was under discussion, C. R. Dooley, manager of the Personnel and Training of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, presided. Speakers included Dr. W. W. Charters, Professor of Education at the University of Chicago, who made an investigation of the subject for the association; John Mills, Director of Publication, Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc.; Edgar J. Kaufmann, President of the Kaufmann Department Stores, Inc.; Guy W. Faller, Vice President of the Public Service Company of Colorado, and T. G. Woolford, President of the Retail Credit Company, Inc.

At the afternoon session E. C. Johnson, President of the H. A. Johnson Company, presided. "The Technique of Training on the Job" was discussed by H. G. Kenagy of the Life Insurance Sales Bureau; Richard Whitcomb, an engineer in the operating and engineering department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Jay Reamy, Assistant Superintendent of Agencies of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, and W. E. Thomas, manager of the Labor Training Division of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

There will be an office executives' conference this morning and another discussion in the afternoon.

LOSES $1,000,000 PROPERTY

Philadelphia Attorney's Holdings Go in Sheriff's Sale.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—Because he failed to comply with conditions mandatory under a court order permitting him to retain ownership of five properties on South Eighteenth Street, this city, which he valued at $1,000,000, Isadore Stern, an attorney and real estate dealer with offices here, lost the properties today when Judge Finletter vacated a writ setting aside a Sheriff's sale.

The Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, with other first mortgagees, foreclosed, and the properties were sold by the Sheriff Jan. 3 to satisfy a judgment of $527,500. Mr. Stern petitioned the court to set aside the Sheriff's sale, averring that a bid of $780,000 was inadequate. He said he had a purchaser at a figure that would give him an equity of $900,000.

After a conference with all parties, Judge Finletter ordered the Sheriff's sale set aside on Jan. 31, conditional upon the payment by Mr. Stern of interest, taxes and other items. The time limit for the payment expired last night without payment being made. It was said these payments would have aggregated about $75,000.

PARK DEVELOPMENT OVER TRACKS URGED

FREIGHT YARDS NECESSARY

But Group Holds Area Between 155th and 154th Streets Could Be Beautified and Utilized.

The Merchants Association announced yesterday that it would recommend to the Board of Estimate the adoption of the original plan for improvement of the Hudson River waterfront, submitted last May by the West Side Improvement Committee of Engineers. The Merchants Association would embody in the original plan a provision that the track space of the New York Central Railroad between 135th and 154th Streets be covered so that it could be used for park and playground development.

The recommendations offered by the directors of the Merchants Association are based on a report of its Committee on Control of Street Traffic, of which Charles Strauss is Chairman. The report maintains that additional west side freight yards for the New York Central are an economic necessity, that the railroad's right under irrevocable franchise to maintain its tracks upon the Hudson River waterfront dominates the whole freight rate structure in the New York district and that the New York Central's tracks exercise a direct influence upon the cost of living in Manhattan inasmuch as they are used almost exclusively for transporting food.

It is further maintained in the report that the plan now advocated by the Merchants Association provides more adequately for the demands of electrification, elimination of grade crossings and beautification of the west side, as well as for the food traffic expansion of the railroad company. The report among other things says:

"The improvement now under consideration is intended to last for generations and will profoundly affect the future growth of the business and industry upon which the continued prosperity of the city depend. To make provision in planning such an improvement for the estimated growth of railroad traffic during only the next four years, as under Plan Three, is extremely shortsighted. It yields too much to the undesirable compromise. Even the ten-year period allowed for under Plan One is regrettably short, and if advisable at all, is advisable only as a last effort to secure an essential compromise.

"Your committee believes the business and social advantages which would be derived from the maximum additional freight facilities included under Plan One, inadequate as they appear to be for more than a short period into the future, would unquestionably greatly outweigh the loss, if any, to parks and recreation, provided the whole of the new yard facilities were covered in such a manner as to permit effective landscaping of this area and its use for ordinary park and recreation purposes.

Would Cover Entire Area.

"Your committee, therefore, recommends that the association urge the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the New York Central Railroad Company to adopt the engineering plans for this great improvement substantially in the form in which they were presented in the report of the West Side Improvement Engineering Committee on May 13, 1927, except that provision be made for covering all new freight yard facilities between 135th and 154th Streets in such manner that the covered area can be landscaped and used for park and recreation purposes.

"The New York Central Railroad Company has indicated that Plan 3, the 'compromise plan,' would be acceptable, and the Board of Estimate has instructed its chief engineer, Arthur S. Tuttle, to prepare detailed maps of the compromise plan for the Board of Estimate as a preliminary to final action in the matter.

Estimate Board to Get Miller Highway Plan Next Week.

Approval or disapproval of Borough President Julius Miller's project for the building of a vehicular elevated express highway along the Manhattan Hudson River waterfront from Canal to Seventy-second Streets as a collateral part of the projected west side improvement is likely to be determined definitely next Thursday by the Board of Estimate.

In closing public hearings on the subject yesterday, Mayor Walker had Feb. 16 set as the date for a final determination of the question.

In the meantime, the Mayor declared, he will try to ascertain whether the conceded advantages to be derived from the proposed express highway in relieving traffic congestion on Manhattan's central avenues would be sufficiently important to outweigh the disadvantages that might be imposed upon trucking and shipping interests at the waterfront by reason of the obstructing columns required to support the elevated highway.

Borough President Miller, who has been trying for several weeks to get action on the project, made another fruitless effort to bring it to a vote. The Mayor turned to Arthur S. Tuttle, Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate and inquired: "Just how much will the supporting columns of such a structure make for obstruction of existing conditions along Twelfth Avenue and in the approaches to the river piers?"

"The columns will be so located as not to obstruct traffic lanes," replied the Chief Engineer.

But the Mayor was not yet satisfied. "In providing an overhead highway for through traffic," he persisted, "will it be a serious detriment to trucking and shipping interests, and will it interfere with access to the piers? Already we have insufficient pier space and, as regards commercial congestion, the situation on the waterfront is becoming alarming."

"There is no question," answered Mr. Tuttle, "that the surface of the street would not be so convenient for trucking as would be a street surface free from supporting columns."

Gets French Rayon Rights.

The du Pont Rayon Company has acquired manufacturing and sales rights in the United States for "Rhodiaseta," an acetate rayon produced by the Société pour la Fabrication de la Soie Rhodiaseta in France. The product will be sold here by du Pont Rayon pending the erection of a manufacturing plant.

LIVE STOCK AT CHICAGO.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—Hogs advanced 15 to 25 cents today, to the best figures since Jan. 9. The close was rather slow. Top advanced 20 cents to $8.65, while the general average was 15 cents higher at $8.35. Bulk of the 170 to 210-pound averages sold at $8.45 to $8.55, with some late sales as low as $8.30. Main sales of 220 to 300-pound butchers were at $8.15 to $8.50 and packing sows at $7.25 to $7.50. Packers bought 14,000 and shippers 15,000, with 13,000 estimated for tomorrow. Receipts 36,000, with 40,000 estimated for tomorrow.

Cattle steady to 25 cents lower, with best steers at $16.50, and yearlings at $15.25, with bulk of beef steers at $12.50 to $14.75. Receipts 8,000. Fat lambs closed easy after being strong to 15 cents higher early. Top was $16, with bulk of sales at $15.50 to $15.75. Sheep strong at $8 to $9, quality being poor.

LIVESTOCK AND MEATS.

(Reported Daily by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Jersey City and New York Markets.

CATTLE—Off day, no trading.

CALVES—Vealers slow, weak to 50c lower; good to choice, $17.50 to $18.50; common sort-offs, $12 to $13. Heavy calves too late for market.

HOGS—Scarce, steady; 121-pound pigs, $9.50.

SHEEP—Lambs slow, strong to 25c higher; quality only fair; 87-pound weights, $15.75; mixed offerings, $15; culls, $10 to $11.

Automobile Shipments Increase.

Generally heavy schedules by manufacturers who exhibited new cars at the shows are holding the total output for the automotive industry to levels slightly larger than those at this time last year, Automotive Industries says. High sales totals were recorded at many of the shows and there is a considerable movement of cars into owners' hands. In view of the good retail condition, factory shipments to dealers are increasing.

Virginia Textile Mill on 4-Day Week

Special to The New York Times.

DANVILLE, Va., Feb. 9.—The Dan River Mills, one of the largest textile plants in the South, employing nearly 6,000 persons, will go tomorrow on a four-day week basis as the result of an executive order posted today. It was said that the curtailment was temporary. The plant went on a five-day week basis a fortnight ago.

URGE STORE OWNERS TO CHANGE METHODS

Department Store Executives Warn of Pace Set by Chain and Mail Systems.

2,000 DEALERS MEET HERE

Better Educated Employes Advised —'Markdowns' and Grotesque Advertising Are Attacked.

Two thousand department store owners, meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania for the annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. They were told yesterday by two store executives that they must change their merchandising methods if they wish to keep pace with chain stores, mail order firms and other competitors. The speakers were John B. Swinney, merchandise manager of the Shepard Stores of Boston, and Homar J. Buckley, President of the Buckley-Dement Company of Chicago.

Mr. Swinney said that statistics of the Federal Reserve Banks and other authorities led him to believe that department stores as a whole made no gain in sales in 1927, Chain stores, on the other hand, showed gains of from 7 to 30 per cent., he said. Only three chain systems failed to enlarge their business last year, while mail-order firms also had a successful year, with gains of about 3 per cent. in sales, he said.

No Increase Is Expected.

"We have no reason to expect an increase in department store profits for 1928," Mr. Swinney said. He said dry goods firms had to contend with too many forms of competition—with the automobile industry, which absorbed 17 cents of the consumer's dollar in cities like Syracuse; with manufacturers who were seeking to sell goods direct to the consumer, and with cons ners' buying clubs. The growth of instalment purchases has also restricted the extension of department store business, he said.

To counteract these forces Mr. Swinney recommended that the stores improve their personnel by hiring better educated employes, especially for the buying staff.

"The buyers' general intelligence today," he said, "is below that of the average customer, to which all but the most popular priced stores cater. The buyers' social development is so limited that they are frequently not equal to the task facing them today."

He urged the improvement of the New York buying organizations of out-of-town stores and declared that whenever possible stores should be in direct contact with their mills, eliminating mill agents and other intermediaries. He advocated cooperative buying by groups of stores because it enables purchasers to "pool their judgment." Attacking the stores' policies of holding reduction sales Mr. Swinney said:

"We are fast coming to a realization that there is no economic justification for the 'August fur sales,' and for similar out of season price reductions. I don't see why we should put out some of our merchandise in January at reduced prices."

Mr. Buckley, in supporting Mr. Swinney's statement that the department stores had failed to increase their sales volume, declared that the stores must change their merchandising methods because of the decentralization process going on in American cities.

"I do not believe the retail store has the proper appreciation of the value of its customers," Mr. Buckley asserted. "The average business loses 15 per cent. of its old customers each year, while it strives to gain from 15 to 25 per cent. new ones.

"The customer on the books of a clothing store is worth $85 a year to the store. The customer on the books of a department store is worth $363 a year. The customer on the books of a specialty store is worth $236 a year. The shoe customer is worth from $35 to $68 a year. The furniture store's customer is worth $37.

"It is a fallacy that the public will seek the best, or knows what it wants. It is a fallacy that the public will demand over any great length of time what it is not reminded of." He said that stores should make an "inventory" of their customers, to expand their business.

Decries Cut in Advertising.

E. H. Scull, President of the E. H. Scull Company of Chicago and this city, declared that operating expenses of retail stores are increasing steadily with a resultant reduction in profits in recent years. He decided the tendency of merchants to slash their advertising budget when the total expense of the store became excessive.

"Advertising costs," he said, "must be analyzed as carefully as salaries or any other expense if you expect to reduce them in a practical manner."

Speaking on the great progress which has been made in mechanical additions to store operation, Sheridan Gorton, assistant general manager of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., warned the merchants that the customer must be considered the prime factor in all store activities.

"We are under obligation to develop a better technique in all our contacts with our customers," he said. "Our scientific researches concerning customer complexes are rather limited."

A criticism of "advertising for the advertiser" was made by E. A. Sullivan, Sales Promotion Director of L. S. Ayres & Co., Indianapolis.

"I hope none of the loud art work and smarter and less sensible advertising which is prevalent in New York will reach Indianapolis," he said. "What we are after is to advertise to our customers and not to our competitors."

A similar criticism was made by Beatty Stevens, Publicity Director of Abraham & Straus. He said the futuristic French figures used in window displays here were not desirable because they were too grotesque.

Governor Moore a Speaker.

Governor Moore of New Jersey spoke at the annual dinner of the association last night at the hotel. Announcement was made that the following officers had been elected:

President, Ralph C. Hudson, O'Neill & Co., Inc., Baltimore; Vice Presidents: for New England, F. E. Eastman, Eastman Brothers & Bancroft, Portland, Me.; for the Middle Atlantic States, Bernard Gimbel, President of Gimbel Brothers, New York; for the South, R. E. Kennington, the R. E. Kennington Company, Jackson, Miss.; for the Middle West, Frederic M. Ayres L. S. Ayres & Co., Indianapolis; for the West, F. McL. Tedford, the Bon Marché, Seattle.

Advisory Council of ex-Presidents: Herbert J. Tily, Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia; Bolton S. Armstrong, Mabley & Carew Company, Cincinnati; George B. Johnson, R. H. White Company, Boston.

Executive Committee: Chairman, Ralph C. Hudson; Edward N. Allen, Frederic M. Ayers, Edgar S. Bamberger, F. E. Eastman, A. Lincoln Filene, D. M. Jones, Managing Director and Treasurer, Lew Hahn.

The convention will close today.

SUGAR, COFFEE, COCOA.

Sugar.

Trading in raw sugar futures on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange was active at the opening yesterday, with irregular price changes. Initial quotations were 2 points higher to 2 points lower, and after scattered liquidation the market developed a firmer tone. Under short covering, the distant positions developed an easier tone. Business in the raw market was exceptionally active. Various operators bought 75,000 bags of Cubas, February position, at 2½ cents a pound c. and f. American Sugar bought 4,100 tons of Porto Ricos, prompt loading, at 4.24 cents c. i. f., equal to 2 15-32 cents c. f. for Cubas. The market closed unchanged to 2 points lower.

RUBBER PRICES IN VIOLENT BREAK

SALES HIGHEST IN HISTORY

Reaction Follows London Report of Move Thought to Mean End of Restriction Policy.

Amid scenes of wild excitement in which dealers, commission houses and the speculative fraternity combined to depress crude rubber futures, prices for the fibre broke violently on the Rubber Exchange yesterday and at the close showed losses ranging from 230 to 270 points.

Sales reached the heaviest turnover ever reported in the history of the Exchange, a total of 2,631 contracts changing hands, which exceeded by 554 contracts the previous high mark of 2,077 contracts on Feb. 2. Sales represented a value of more than $5,000,000.

The break resulted from a report from London that the British Government had asked the Civil Research Committee to investigate the operation of the Stevenson Restriction act. As this body has been known to be in close sympathy with the Board of Trade, which has consistently opposed artificial restriction, traders accepted the manoeuvre as the forerunner of the abandonment of the policy of restriction. Even were another course adopted, traders said, that of reducing the pivotal price to around 15d, such a fixed price would be equivalent to the virtual elimination of restriction.

London Reaction Reflected.

Opening prices here quickly reflected the reaction of the London market, where prior knowledge of the action of the British Government had swept prices off to new lows on this movement. Initial trades started 190 to 300 points down, and under the steady and persistent attack of the bear party all parts of the list of seven active deliveries bore striking witness to the severity of the selling movement.

Occasional checks to the reaction were encountered on profit taking, but this buying support was as quickly eliminated under the steady stream of offerings which flooded the market. Before the first hour had ended a new record for volume in that period had been established, when sales up to 11 A. M. totaled 873 contracts.

July was the most actively traded delivery and closed with the maximum decline of 270 points, after recovering 20 points from the low of 34.60. May was next in point of volume and finished 260 points down at 34.90. March closed 230 points off, while September and October were 250 and 240 points down respectively.

The London market opened sluggish, but almost immediately thereafter heavy sales broke the list to levels 2¼d down. Partial recoveries staged by previous "shorts" taking profits steadied the list, but the market turned weak at the close. Spot and February finished 1¼d lower and the distant months 1¼d to 1⅝d down. Singapore closed firm with levels ⅝d to 1⅛d down.

SEES BRITISH MONOPOLY ON RUBBER BROKEN

Firestone Calls Appointment of Inquiry Commission a Great Moral Victory.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—America's effort to produce her own rubber supply "has gone far to break the British grip" and the appointment of a British committee "to continue, tighten, modify or do away with restriction of rubber production was a great moral victory for America," Harvey S. Firestone, tire manufacturer, said here today.

Mr. Firestone was here en route to Fort Myers, Fla., where Thomas A. Edison is experimenting with a vine from which he hopes to produce rubber in commercial quantities.

"American efforts to assure an independent supply have caused the British to change their attitude of waving aside protests and regulating matters to suit themselves," said Mr. Firestone. "Here in Florida Mr. Edison is trying to develop domestic rubber. If anybody can grow rubber in Florida, it will be the inventor.

"In Liberia and the Philippine Islands—possibly in Florida—we can grow all the rubber needed for some time to come. It looks like we have won the fight against the British monopoly."

"In 1922 the raw product was selling at 15 cents a pound, and the British fixed the price at 30 cents. But it went to 37 cents in sixty days. Since then it has fluctuated up and down and, by means of further restriction, rose to $1.20 in 1926. What this means in dollars and cents to the American automobilist may be judged from the item of $8,000,000 added to his bill every time rubber goes up a cent a pound."

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—4 per cent. for the best names. Wednesday—4 per cent. for the best names. The quotations are for four to six months' paper.

Southern Underwear Reduced.

Effective at once, the Standard Knitting Mills and the Appalachian Mills Company yesterday reduced men's heavyweight ribbed union suits 37½ cents a dozen and men's shirts and drawers 12½ cents. Boys' "unions" were also cut 12½ cents a dozen. These reductions, which are retroactive to the opening of the lines late in November, are the second since that time. Men's suits show a total cut of 50 cents a dozen, while men's shirts and drawers and boys' suits have been reduced 25 cents a dozen since the opening. The new prices cover all delivery periods, styles and packing.

American Announces Openings.

Additional showings of men's wear Fall fabrics were announced yesterday by the American Woolen Company. On Monday the company will open lines of these goods in Department 1: Plain and fancy weave suitings in cheviots, unfinished and clear finished fabrics, fancy weave piece dyes, worsted overcoatings and piece dyes and mixtures. On Wednesday the offerings will comprise complete ranges of staple, fancy and fancy back overcoatings, shirtings and mackinaws, topcoatings and piece dye staple suitings in Department 3 and overcoatings and topcoatings in Department 7.

Foxes Best at Fur Auction.

Foxes sold best at the Huth & Co. auction yesterday. Red fox led with a top of $70 and a rise of 25 per cent. over the Autumn sale. Gray fox rose 20 per cent. and sold to $4.80. These comparative percentages were shown by the other furs sold, the best prices being given in parentheses: Raccoon, unchanged ($12.50); sundry fox, up 10 ($5.50); kit fox, up 10 ($7.90); Australian fox, unchanged ($4.30); barger, up 10 ($34); sundry cat, down 10 ($1), and house cat, up 20 (60 cents). Every skin in the house-cat collection was sold. Total sales to date are $2,400,000. Mink, mole and squirrel will top today's schedule in importance.

Broad Silks Holding Gain.

Production of silk fabrics has been steadily gaining. The goods, however, are quickly passing into cutters' and retailers' hands, and thus far trade factors see no signs of the effects of possible overproduction. The price situation is firmer, with the exception of certain plain weaves on which competition is keen. Prints and sheer goods are said to be taking particularly well, and it is generally agreed that an extremely big print season lies directly ahead. Greige goods suitable for conversion into these cloths continue in limited spot supply. Crêpes de chine and satin crêpes continue to meet with a good staple demand.

Colored Sheets Selling Well.

Although there has been a slow but general improvement in the jobbing call for white cotton sheets of late, it was said here yesterday that the demand for colored sheets is increasing rapidly. All sections are taking them, sales to conservative New England being proportionately equal to those of other parts of the country. Pink continues the favored color. One feature of the demand for colored sheets is the noticeable trend in favor toward the longer ones. While 81 inches is still the favored width, the best selling lengths are now 99 and 108 inches. The 90-inch length, for many years the standard is steadily slipping backward.

Place Bathing Suit Orders.

Buyers of bathing suits are placing larger advance orders this season, having in mind that they were caught last year with a demand for new models and had only staple lines in stock. Two-piece styles are in biggest demand. Women's garments in gay colored shirts with dark trunks are leading. In men's suits, white shirts with navy trunks are wanted almost exclusively. In the children's lines, the one-piece suit made up to look like the two-piece garments are outselling the plain-colored models.

Toy Imports Watched.

Domestic toy manufacturers are trying to curb the importation of merchandise which they claim should be classed as toys, but is imported, as other types of goods, at lower duties. Frequent hearings have been held in connection with the matter at the United States Custom Court, one being scheduled for next Friday. An instance of what American manufacturers object to was cited in the importation of certain items filled with candy. The goods were brought in as "containers," but the domestic manufacturers claim they should be assessed as dolls.

Antique Intaglio Seals Featured.

One of the high-grade novelty jewelry firms is featuring antique intaglio seals in a new line of bracelets, chokers, necklaces and earrings. The seals are all genuine old pieces in real and synthetic stones. The selection is limited to cornelians, amethysts, sardonyx and turquoise. Mountings are plain and elaborate and are in either gold or silver following the Spring trend in metals. These seals are used in various ways, as links in bracelets and flat chokers, or suspended on fine chains for earrings and necklaces. These items are priced from $30 a dozen upward.

Ask Data for Wool Institute.

In order to obtain data for the first meeting of the Wool Institute, Inc., to be held next Wednesday at the Hotel Roosevelt, a questionnaire was sent out yesterday by A. D. Whiteside, temporary Chairman. The questionnaire deals with the terms of sale, special discounts, peak and low manufacturing months and the disposal of surplus stocks. The mills are asked to name the other fabric producers with whom they would like to exchange information and for suggestions as to the topics to be discussed at the initial meeting and of the special fabric groups. The back of the questionnaire contains a standard cost sheet designed to afford a basis for a discussion of cost comparisons.

Gray Goods Sales Fair.

A fair volume of business was put through in the local gray goods market yesterday. February-March deliveries of 38½-inch 64-60s were sold at 7⅜ cents, and there was trading in February 38½-inch 60-48s at 6¼ cents. Spot business in 32-inch 64-60s was also done at the latter figure. Near-by sales of 38½-inch 44-40s were put through at 5¼ cents. Sheetings were quiet but steady on the basis of 7¾ cents for 37-inch 48-square, four-yard goods. For 30-inch 3.25-yard drills buyers paid 9⅝ cents, and they also took 37-inch 3.95s at 8¼ cents. Sales of specialties included spot 34-inch three-yard warp sateens at 12⅜ cents. Important business in fine-yarn cloths was lacking.

SHIP BOARD POLICY OUTLINED BY TELLER

Commissioner, Speaking for O'Connor, Says Government Is Getting Out of Business.

TASK TOO BIG FOR HASTE

Buildings, Yards, Railways, Ships Have Been Sold, He Declares, but Much Remains to Be Done.

Commissioner P. S. Teller of the Shipping Board, as spokesman for Chairman T. V. O'Connor, described the task of removing the Government from the housing, street railway, marine railway and a score of other branches of business created by the wartime shipbuilding emergency in an address last night aboard the Leviathan, at the annual meeting of the Jersey Marine Club.

The Government, he said, does not desire to remain in the ship-owning business, but, he added, "we are building a merchant marine ultimately to be privately owned and until we can safely transfer it to private capital the Government will carry on the operation." Commissioner Teller read an address that was to have been delivered by Chairman O'Connor.

Commissioner Albert H. Denton, also of the Shipping Board; members of the South Jersey Port Commission and public officials of Hoboken, Weehawken, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth, Newark and Bayonne were at the speakers' table.

Mr. Teller told of the Shipping Board's efforts which realized in a reduction of the total of 2,500 Government-owned ships at the close of the war to the present total of 800, of which 300 are in active service on trade routes deemed essential to American foreign commerce. The other 500 are in lay-up and being sold as fast as possible, he said. The war caused the American shipyards to grow from 61 with 240 launching ways to 341 yards and 1,200 launching ways, many of which were built or financed by the Government through the Shipping Board.

Entire villages were built or leased for 385,000 shipyard workers, the property at the close of the war including 95 apartment houses, 8,666 separate dwellings and numerous hotels, cafeterias, stores, garages and marine property of all kinds. The Government financed in whole or in part eighteen dry docks and twelve marine railways, and owned property in 400 different locations. Since the war the Shipping Board has disposed of all the housing facilities and withdrawn completely from the dry dock and marine railway business, said Mr. Teller.

"The problem is not merely to get the Government out of business," he declared, "but to get it out in such a way that the business will fall into the hands of private American citizens and not into the hands of British, German, Italian, French, Norwegian and Japanese citizens. Furthermore, we must see to it that American citizens after they have acquired the business, are enabled to carry it on permanently in spite of everything that these other people will do to take it away from them. The problem is not so simple, after all. Nor is it made any more simple by those who insist that we get out of business at once.

"We are getting out as fast as we can under present conditions, but in my opinion the people of the nation do not realize how far we have gone since 1920 in leaving the operation of commercial tonnage or in disposing of vessels, dry docks, shipyards, housing properties and miscellaneous properties. After all, the Shipping Board developed the greatest industrial plant in world history during the war and the board feels that it has done well in its work of disposing of it."

STRAUS PLANS SUIT TO HALT FERRY LINE

Says Permit to Operate Boats From 79th St. and the Drive Would Be Illegal.

Former State Senator Nathan Straus Jr., speaking at a meeting of the Woman's League for the Protection of Riverside Park, declared yesterday that if the proposed permit was given to an electric ferry company to operate ferries from Riverside Drive and Seventy-ninth Street to the Palisades for a payment of $1 a year to the city, he would bring suit as a taxpayer to test the legality of that action.

He contended that the operation of such a ferry would not aid the welfare of the city, and that the proposal was illegal and in violation of the zoning laws. Furthermore, he said that if the ferry were allowed to operate, a large tract of land would be needed for automobiles, and that this land would be taken from the space marked out for tennis courts and playgrounds in the new Riverside Park plan. He also attacked the method by which the ferry company sought its permit, saying the proper procedure would be open competitive bidding for a lease with a fixed time instead of an application for a temporary permit at a $1 a year rental.

Mr. Straus construed Park Commissioner Herrick's endorsement of the Riverside Park plan as opposition on his part to the proposed ferry, and said that Mr. Herrick was "fearful of strong political opposition from those behind the ferry project."

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. Charles Appleton Terry at 310 West 105th Street, with Mrs. John Clapperton Kerr, President of the league, presiding.

Woman Chose Police Pallbearers.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 9 (AP).—Because she had been assisted in her travels in this and other lands by many policemen, whom she had always found considerate and kind, Margaret Sweeney, who died here, directed in her will that six police officers should be selected as pallbearers at her funeral and that they should each receive $25 for the service. This provision was carried out by her attorney, J. E. Kerrigan, it was revealed today with the filing of her will.

Urge Quebec Gasoline Tax Rise.

QUEBEC, Feb. 9 (AP).—A Liberal Party caucus has voted in favor of an increase in the gasoline tax in Quebec from 3 to 5 cents a gallon. It also voted that the pay of members of the Legislature should be increased from $2,000 to $2,500 and the salaries of the Ministers from $6,000 to $8,000.

LEXINGTON AV. FLAT SOLD TO MERCHANT

Retailer Invests in a Six-Story Flat at the Southeast Corner of Thirty-fourth Street.

MORE DEALS IN YORKVILLE

H. Kramer Assembles a 50-Foot Plot on 77th Street—Upper Broadway Offices Sold.

Rest, Inc., representing a retail merchant, has purchased the southeast corner of Lexington Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, a six-story elevator apartment house. The buyer, represented by Charles Jaffa, acquired the property from the 231 Lexington Avenue Corporation, which held the parcel for ten years.

The building is known as 231-233 Lexington Avenue, a plot of 39 by 75 feet. It was acquired for investment through O. O. Offenberg & Co., Inc., brokers.

A continued demand for tenement properties in Yorkville was indicated in reports of transactions in that section announced yesterday. H. Kramer acquired, through the Oberlander Realty Company, the tenement house at 339 East Seventy-seventh Street, 25 by 102 feet.

The same brokers sold 341 East Seventy-seventh Street to Mr. Kramer, giving him control of a plot of fifty feet on East Seventy-seventh Street.

The Oberlander Realty Company, as broker, sold to S. Lapin the tenement at 324 East Seventy-seventh Street. The same broker also sold for a Mr. Rosen the flat at 330 East Seventy-seventh Street. The sale was made in conjunction with the Yorkville Realties, Inc.

The five-story tenement property at 326 East Eightieth Street was sold by the Oberlander Company to E. Gross.

A deal involving a five-story flat at 523 East Eighty-eighth Street, just west of Carl Schurz Park, was closed by Joseph Goldsmith and Frank Schwartz, brokers, to a buyer who now controls a plot of 75 by 100 feet.

O'Sullivan & McCarthy, Inc., sold for Miriam Roth the northwest corner of West Eleventh Street and Greenwich Street, known as 752 Greenwich Street, to a Mr. Lopez, who will alter. They also sold for the same owner the adjoining property, 754 Greenwich Street, to Vincent Castro.

M. C. Berg, Inc., sold to Margaret Anne Marshall the house at 110 West Eighty-fifth Street. The buyer intends to make extensive improvements.

This is the second house this firm has sold to Mrs. Marshall this year, having sold 23 West Ninety-fourth Street last month.

The eight-story office building with stores at 2,061 Broadway, northwest corner of Seventy-first Street, was sold by the 2,061 Broadway Corporation (Charles and J. E. Goldman) to the Alwyn Improvement Corporation, Charles Alexander, President.

The building was erected in 1925 on land leased from Christ Church for twenty-one years with renewals for forty-two years. It shows a gross rent roll of about $116,000 a year and was held at $650,000. The building has a frontage of seventy-two feet on Broadway. The Wood, Dolson Company was the broker.

City Club Meeting on Housing.

BUILDERS PURCHASE VACANT BRONX SITES

Properties Are Acquired for Improvement With Various Types of Construction.

HIGHBRIDGE DEAL PENDING

Jacob Goodman Is Reselling Sedgwick Avenue Plot for Apartments —Taxpayer Site Is Sold

Vacant properties in the Bronx were acquired yesterday by builders for various types of construction. One deal involving a resale to a builder was that completed by Jacob Goodman, who bought a large plot on Sedgwick Avenue opposite the Highbridge station of the New York Central Railroad.

The site is 165 feet on Sedgwick Avenue by 110 feet, about 250 feet north of 207th Street. It is being resold to a builder for improvement with apartments and stores. Ruilman Brothers were the brokers in the transaction.

A plot of 100 by 100 feet at the northwest corner of Guerlain Street and White Plains Road was sold by Leo Silver to Yetta Silbowitz for a taxpayer. The brokers in the deal were E. Marcantonio, A. Rottenberg and N. Camisiti.

The southwest corner of Wilgus Street and White Plains Avenue was sold by the Houlihan Exchange, Inc., for the Ghidember Realty Company to Dougherty Brothers. The buyers are planning to improve it with a two-story garage.

The Axe-Mann Holding Corporation sold to Sol Teitelbaum, builder, the northwest corner of Westchester and Colgate Avenues. Mr. Teitelbaum will erect a two-story taxpayer consisting of stores and lofts. The H. Oscar Company was the broker.

Henry Schneider sold through Albert D. Phelps to Joseph Paulding the southwest corner of Eastern Boulevard and Waterbury Avenue. Albert D. Phelps was the broker.

Rubin Birnbach, operator, yesterday sold the property at 404 Claremont Parkway, which he was under contract to purchase, to an investor. Morris Somers was the attorney for the seller.

Max N. Natanson, through Jacob & Emil Leitner, Inc., as brokers, purchased the southwest corner of Courtlandt Avenue and 148th Street, fronting 77 feet on the avenue and 94 feet on the street. The property is improved with three four-story flats, which are tenanted, but immediate possession may be had. The property was held at $170,000 and was sold for all cash above existing mortgages. The seller was Tancourt Realtors, Inc., H. Bennett Salomon, President.

BROADWAY CORNER IN LEASEHOLD DEAL

Business Building at Seventy-first Street Is Traded—Lease by Nathan Wilson.

A leasehold covering the eight-story business building at 2,061 Broadway, northwest corner of Seventy-first Street, has been acquired by the Alwyn Improvement Corporation, Charles Alexander, President, from Charles & J. E. Goldman. The building, held at $650,000, was erected in 1925 on land leased from Christ Church for twenty-one years, with renewals for forty-two years. The Wood, Dolson Company, Inc., was the broker.

Virginia C. Erdman leased to Nathan Wilson 28 West Forty-seventh Street, a 5-story building on a lot 20 by 100 feet. The lease is for twenty-one years, with three renewals, at a gross rent of $225,000 for the first period. A new building is planned for the plot. Peter Grimm was the broker.

Henry London sold to an investing client a sixty-year leasehold on the twelve and three story commercial buildings at 147-151 West Thirty-Sixth Street, in the garment centre.

H. H. Uris and A. I. Kaplan leased the two-story building being erected on the Spingler-Van Beuren property, 19-27 West Fourteenth Street, to the Roselov Realty Corporation, controlled by Murray M. Rosenberg, a retailer of shoes who operates 24 stores in the metropolitan area. Adams & Co. were the brokers.

Harry Rappaport leased for twenty-one years to the Stan Garage Corporation, Harry Yarrow, President, a three-story garage at 406-8 East Seventy-ninth Street. Nathan Levy was the broker.

Textile Factors Move Northward.

Further movement of the textile industry northward is marked by a lease under which L. F. Dommerich & Co. will occupy three floors, 16,000 square feet, at 271 Madison Avenue. The lessees, among the oldest and largest factors in the trade, will move their entire executive personnel to the new quarters, but will continue to occupy their present space at 254 Fourth Avenue. The Stephen H. Tyng Company arranged the lease with the Loring M. Hewen Company, Inc.

Buys Site at Chappaqua.

William Schley of Chappaqua, N. Y., has purchased from Burhoward, Inc., a plot on the east side of Greeley Avenue, next to the Chappaqua Bank Building, at Chappaqua. The purchaser contemplates building a brick store to house his present business. George Howe, Inc., was the broker.

West Side Dwelling Leased.

The Dant Realty Corporation has leased the four-story brownstone dwelling at 8 West Ninety-third Street for ten years at a rental of $51,000. The house contains twenty-six rooms. Frank Saracco was the broker.

Good Reasons Why You Should Use KOPPERS SEABOARD COKE

1—It gives more heat ton for ton than any other solid fuel known today.
2—It contains the least amount of ash—about one ash-canful to a ton.
3—It is an exceptionally clean fuel, always correctly sized.
4—It responds instantly to damper regulation giving quick or slow heat as needed.
5—It reduces labor because of the long firing period and absence of ash and clinker.
6—It burns best with very little draft.
7—It is manufactured up to the highest quality—not down to the lowest price.

Over 30,000 building owners in this metropolitan center have found the genuine Koppers SEABOARD COKE to be the most economical fuel they have ever used. They are using it in preference to other fuels which are claimed to be "just as good." It costs less in the long run.

LONG ISLAND HOME DEALS

Business and residential properties were involved in New Jersey realty deals reported yesterday. Long Island trading was confined to dwellings and homesites.

The business parcel—known as 42-6 Park Place, Newark, N. J.—was acquired for personal investment by Thomas N. McCarter, President of the Publis Service Corporation of New Jersey. The sale was made by the United Hotel Company, which some time ago purchased the property from the Essex Club, which occupied a large frame structure on part of the site for over thirty years.

The hotel company owns the Robert Treat Hotel, which is separated from the parcel in the present deal by space used for parking by hotel guests. The property originally was acquired for a possible addition to the hotel unit. In addition to a frontage of 96 feet on Park Place, the parcel runs through 450 feet to a frontage of 72 feet on Division Place, where a three-story brick storage building is located. Feist & Feist, Inc., were the brokers.

Clara Louise Banton of Philadelphia sold her home at 43 Hathaway Avenue, Deal, to Hortense I. Kessler of Newark. The house, on a plot 100 by 150 feet, contains twelve rooms and three baths, and was held at $80,000.

Davis S. Meyer, Inc., the broker, also sold to Dr. Thomas D. Keegan of Jersey City a house on Crosby Avenue, West Deal, containing fourteen rooms and three baths, and held at $25,000. The plot is 140 by 185 feet.

In the Kenilworth section of Great Neck, L. I., Floyd Retmier, builder, sold to C. N. Kreiser of Brooklyn an English manor residence of brick and stucco overlooking Manhasset Bay. The property, including a three-quarter-acre plot, was held at $65,000. Kavanagh & McElvers, Inc., and I. G. Wolf were the brokers.

Ellen McBride bought from Daniel McKenzie a one-family dwelling on Seventy-eighth Street, between Roosevelt and Polk Avenues, Jackson Heights, through the Rodman Homes Corporation, which also sold a two-family dwelling at Jackson Heights Manor to Lenora Brennan for the Greater New York Housing Corporation.

Lena Marotta bought a 100-foot plot at Douglaston Terrace, a development by H. A. Lockwood & Co. at Douglaston. Other buyers were George Cooper, Cologero Orlando and Rita Bisson.

Mabel Spinelli and William O'Connor rented cottages at Belle Harbor to I. Cooperman and Thomas Carty through W. F. Brunner, Inc.

RESULTS AT AUCTION.

Garages and Coal Pockets on the Harlem River Bring $381,321.

A sale resulting from a foreclosure action brought by the Interstate Land Holding Company against the H. & C. Holding Corporation and others to recover claims aggregating $386,315 was held in the Vesey Street Exchange yesterday by Henry Brady, auctioneer. The sale involved the one-story brick garages and coal pockets at 421-435 East 100th Street, through to 422-436 East 101st Street and fronting on the Harlem River.

The property was sold to the Harlem Realty Holding Corporation, Jacob H. Greenberg, President, for $381,321.

Other sales by Mr. Brady resulted as follows:

East Sixth Street, 752, 22x97; five-story tenement and store; Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank against Whit-Ros Realty Corporation and others; due, $10,802; taxes, &c., $734; to the plaintiff for $10,500.

East Twelfth Street, 415, 20.9x103; six-story tenement and stores; sheriff's sale of all right, title, &c., which Gaspari Celeca Realty Corporation had on Nov. 3, 1927, or since, to J. William Mangel for $1,750.

East 230th Street, south side, 380 feet east of Kepler Avenue, 40x100; vacant; Harold Gass and others against Frank B. Newell and others; due, $41,630; taxes, &c., $853; to the plaintiff, for $4,000.

By JAMES R. MURPHY.

Commonwealth Avenue, west side, 200 feet north of Lodlow Avenue, 50x98.10; vacant; Murray Barkan against Frances Levy and others; due, $850.90; to Morris Izenberg for $.75.

By THOMAS F. BURCHILL.

Faile Street, west side, 200 feet south of Spofford Avenue, 75x100; vacant; Brayton Holding Corporation against Mojay Realty Corporation and others; due, $6,645; taxes, &c., $220; subject to a mortgage of $2,230 to John Robinion for $8,250.

Mortgage Loans Total $9,218,800.

The Executive Committee of the Lawyers' Mortgage Company yesterday accepted first mortgage loans totaling $9,218,800, divided as follows: Manhattan and Bronx, $5,302,500; Brooklyn, $1,602,950; Queens and Nassau, $1,384,250; Westchester, $929,100.

Of this total, $460,500 was for one-story business buildings, the balance being for housing.

BRONX PROPERTIES IN QUICK TURN-OVERS

Elevator Apartment on Washington Av. Figures in $170,000 Deal—Taxpayer Sale.

The six-story elevator apartment house accommodating thirty-three families, with a store, at 2,000 Washington Avenue has been resold by the Nouskajian Realty Company, as broker, to a client. The property was sold by Anton Szilagyi and was held at $170,000.

Another resale of a Bronx housing property was announced yesterday, when Everett D. Husted and John Lodes disposed of the realty at 856, 860 and 864 East 172d Street for the Goodman-Selser Building Corporation. The buyer is a Mr. Crane.

The property consists of three houses, each accommodating twenty families. The houses are on plots 40 by 100 feet each. These houses were involved in the trade last week of Norden Hall. The yearly rental of the three houses is $32,000. They were held at $180,000.

Sol Simons has sold to Irving Bachrach and Ira Rosenstock for the Optimus Realty Corporation, Max Herzfeld, President, the one-story taxpayer, size 47 by 100 feet, at the northeast corner of Jerome Avenue and 182d Street.

This parcel has ten stores and rents for $10,000 per annum. The property was held at $75,000 and negotiations for a resale are pending.

George I. Galitzka sold for a client to the Mere Holding Corporation (Golding & Moran) the plot, 147 by 110 feet, at the northeast corner of 230th Street and Bailey Avenue; also plot, 100 by 100 feet, on West Tremont Avenue, between Montgomery and Sedgwick Avenues, for the Squire Realty Corporation. A resale is pending.

Buy Brooklyn Charities Building.

The four-story Brooklyn Bureau of Charities Building, at 1,658 to 1,660 Fulton Street, has been purchased by the Commercial Community Organization, a group of Brooklyn colored persons, who will use the structure for meetings, a day nursery and offices. Willard J. Price is President of the organization.

To Improve Queens Block Front.

Fred G. Randall has sold to the Camet Construction Corporation a block front 200 by 100 feet on Queens Boulevard, between Lowery and Van Buren Streets, in the Thomson Hill section of Queens. The buyer will immediately improve the plot by the erection of stores and dwellings. Matchett & Davis were the brokers.

Investor Buys Brooklyn Flats.

An investor has purchased from the Babette Holding Company, Inc., Alfred W. Norek, attorney, three four-story apartment and store buildings at 1,358, 1,362 and 1,366 St. John's Place, Brooklyn. Harry J. Appel was the broker.

Prudential Buys in Newark.

The Prudential Life Insurance Company has purchased from the Irvwax Realty Company 74 Warren Street, Newark, N. J. The property, 18 by 117 feet, adjoins the buying company's printing establishment.

BUYS IN CONNECTICUT.

Liggett Purchases Exchange Building in New Haven.

Louis K. Liggett, owner of a chain of drug stores, has completed the purchase of the Exchange Building at the corner of Church and Chapel Streets, New Haven, the most crowded street intersection in Connecticut. The estimated cost of the entire parcel is about $2,000,000.

The brick building which occupies the block will be torn down and replaced by a modern structure, it is said, although details of the new owner's plans have not been fully matured. The Exchange is one of the oldest in the city centre, and is surrounded by buildings of modern type.

The purchase was made by Mr. Liggett from Mrs. Susan Sanford Howland of Baltimore, widow of the late Dr. John Howland. Mr. Liggett purchased the Chapel Street frontage of the property several months ago from George D. Watrous, Macdougal Hawkes and Dr. Forbes Hawkes of New York City.

EXCHANGE IN THE BRONX.

Flat on Stebbins Avenue Traded for Decatur Avenue Dwelling.

Edward Marcantonio and N. Caminiti have effected an exchange of the five-story apartment at 1,863 Stebbins Avenue for a three-story dwelling at 3,044 Decatur Avenue. A. E. Carretta represented the previous owner of the flat.

Edward Marcantonio sold the five-story apartment at the northwest corner of 183d Street and Bassford Avenue and also the southwest corner of 178th Street and Crotona Avenue, a four-story brick flat, to the Crisafi Holding Corporation, for Samuel Alkoff.

The S. J. Levitt Company sold 1,195 Sherman Avenue to the Glant Realty Corporation. The house is a five-story building about two years old. It was sold subject to mortgages totaling $134,000.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co., Inc., agents, announced yesterday that the last apartment has been sold in the Campanile, the new 100 per cent. cooperative building, completed January 1 last, on the East River, at the foot of Fifty-second Street.

Revell McCallum, a member of the staff of the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial, purchased through the Elliman firm the last apartment, which is on the twelfth floor and consists of seven rooms and three baths.

Title to the General Motors Building, occupying the block front on Broadway to Eighth Avenue, Fifty-seventh to Fifty-eighth Street, has been transferred to Samuel Keller Jacobs. Title has also been passed to the eighteen-story office building at 320 Broadway, corner of Pearl Street, to Irving I. Lewine, and title to the sixteen-story Armion Building, southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street, has been transferred to Robert W. Evans and associates.

Gus Coulafacos is the buyer of the building at 39 West Forty-sixth Street, sold by Argyle R. Parsons through Douglas L. Elliman & Co.

TRANSFERS RECORDED.

IN this era of business growth in the Grand Central Zone, it was inevitable that one building should be erected outstanding in quality of details and appointments. This distinction is merited in the superb, new Salmon Tower Building. Quality of finish is not confined merely to the outside and in the lobby where it will show, as is customary, but in every appointment on every floor throughout, for it was built for permanent investment and is not for sale.

The appointments in every detail are such that your office will not only be handsome and fine when you move in, but will remain so through the years of your occupancy. And yet, with this superiority, with service on the highest plane, front doors on both 42nd and 43rd Streets, at a location that is prominent and accessible in the extreme, you will find rentals most reasonable and a wide choice of the finest office space in the Grand Central Zone.

HOUSES AT COST—NO PROFITS.

I have five new houses for sale. They all go at the same price.

Some are stucco, others frame. Regardless of size, outlook, position, they are, for the time being, all one price—$15,000. All of them are new and attractively designed outside and in and built under my supervision as model houses to set a standard for this property.

They will be sold at cost price and any one of the five is a shrewd buy. I will be glad to show the costs.

One has seven rooms, some six with sun porch and others six with sizable unfinished attic. They are beautiful to look at and are situated on a hillside within 250 feet of bus line.

I will sell them in order of selection. That means the man who decides first gets the pick of size, location and outlook.

Several of them are still in process of building, and decorations during construction may be altered to suit individual tastes.

Property office located at 214th St. and hillside Av. Open daily and Sundays or telephone Cortlandt 0740.

HOUSE BILL ASKS PRIVATE SHIP AID

Differing From Senate Government Control Measure, It Proposes Modified Subsidy.

BOARD SUPERVISION KEPT

Contracts Would Be for Essential Trade Routes and Mail Subventions Designated.

LOANS TO BE LIBERALIZED

And Pay Differential Provided for Men Who, With Vessels, Would Be in Naval Reserve.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—A new shipping bill designed to upbuild the American merchant marine under private control and understood to be looked upon with some favor by the Administration was introduced in the House today by Representative Wallace H. White, Republican, of Maine, Chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee. Among other provisions it contains a modified form of subsidy. The bill will be pushed in the House committee in an effort to sidetrack the Jones Merchant Marine bill, which the Senate recently passed.

The White bill adopts various alternatives to the idea of Government ownership and operation provided in the Jones bill. According to Mr. White, who outlined his plan to President Coolidge at the White House yesterday, "it proceeds upon the assumption that the people prefer private operation of ships to Government ownership and operation and are willing to pay reasonable amounts to effect the transfer of existing Government lines to private hands."

Four Chief Provisions of Bill.

The four major provisions of the bill are:

1—To liberalize Government loans in order that American citizens may obtain money to build ships at interest not in excess of 2½ per cent.

2—To authorize the Shipping Board to enter into contracts for the establishment of trade routes essential to transportation of the products of American industry and agriculture."

3—To authorize payment of subventions for carriage of foreign mail on American ships on routes to be designated by the Shipping Board.

4—To authorize payments to officers and men of the merchant marine in order that this private personnel may be carried on the rolls of the navy as a reserve to be impressed into service in the event of war.

A fifth provision of the bill authorizes the Shipping Board to create the Insurance Fund provided in Section 10 of the Merchant Marine act of 1920, and use this money for reinsuring any vessel owned and operated by a United States citizen at a rate not exceeding ½ per cent. less than the rate by which such vessel was insured by the insurance company.

Under the bill the Shipping Board would have authority to enter into contracts for the construction of four-day liners to Europe under private control.

Hearings on the White and Jones bills and like measures will begin before the House Merchant Marine Committee this month. All shipping interests concerned will be invited to participate.

In explaining the first provision of his bill, Chairman White said:

"The bill liberalizes the construction loan fund authorized by present law so as to make it more completely available to the American citizen who desires to construct ships in American yards.

"Specifically, the proposal is that citizens may borrow from this fund to a maximum of three-quarters the cost of the ship, may have not to exceed twenty years in which to repay, the loan to bear a rate of interest not lower than 2½ per cent."

The bill also authorizes loans from the Treasury when the $125,000,000 construction loan fund shall have been exhausted, but loans from the Treasury must bear interest not less than the rate the Government currently pays for funds.

Policy of Other Nations Cited.

"Citizens of other countries have built great ocean liners through the aid of liberal loans from their Governments at low rates of interest," said Mr. White. "What others have done we should be willing to do.

"The bill provides an aid to cargo vessels operating upon routes essential in the movement of the products of American industry and agriculture. It authorizes the Shipping Board to determine what trade routes are essential and requirements of service and to enter into contracts with citizens in accordance with the specifications.

"With respect to cargo services now being operated by the board, it is provided that the contract price shall not exceed the annual average of the operating losses sustained by the particular line for the period of the preceding three years.

"With respect to other routes which the board might determine to be necessary, it is provided that the contract price shall not exceed an amount which would overcome the differential between the particular American ships to be operated on the route and comparable foreign ships on the same or a like route.

"Under this form of aid, the cash outlay of the Government would be no more than the present operation losses, or in the case of new lines, no more than the differential against the American ship as determined by the board.

"This form of contract service is not a subsidy in the ordinary sense of that term. It is a payment for definite shipping services determined by the board to be in the public interest."

The measure would authorize the Postmaster General to contract for carrying mail on a "graduated scale, based primarily upon speed."

"The bill provides that all of the vessels of the higher speed receiving contracts under this title shall be readily convertible into naval and military auxiliaries and shall be approved in construction by the Secretary of the Navy before contracts shall be made for their services," Mr. White continued.

The authorizing of payments to personnel, Mr. White said, was to "aid the private operator to meet the higher wage and subsistence standards on American ships and to build up in the merchant marine a naval reserve."

"The navy needs not alone a reserve of ships, but needs men to man them efficiently," he added. "If the merchant marine is to furnish men for the navy's use in time of necessity, the Government through the navy should make some contribution to the building up of this reserve."

The men in this Naval Reserve, regularly engaged in foreign trade, would be paid by the navy at a rate per annum not exceeding six and one-half months' base pay of their corresponding grades, ranks or ratings in the navy, this payment to be considered an integral part of the total pay of such officers and men.

In conclusion Mr. White said:

"This legislation does not seek to deprive the Shipping Board of authority to maintain and to operate the essential lines established by the board. It does endeavor to offer inducements to private interests to acquire and operate these and other lines.

"If citizens of the United States are not secured to operate essential services the bill expressly reaffirms the authority and obligation of the board to maintain the routes. The cost to the Government under the terms of the bill will be less than the present burden to the Treasury. It will save in years to come many millions."

GERMAN AIRPLANES WILL MEET LINERS

Ship Company Contracts With Luft Hansa—Also Sends Plane on Cruise.

The North German Lloyd Steamship Company announced yesterday that a contract had been closed with the Luft Hansa, greatest of the German air services, by which planes will meet its ships in German ports to transport passengers to Paris, Moscow and other points. The service will become effective within a month.

The Columbus of the North German Lloyd line left this port yesterday at noon on a month's trip to the West Indies and Panama, carrying an all-metal seaplane for the use of passengers who desire to make trips inland or who remain behind at the various ports and require quick means of rejoining the party. Before the ship left the harbor the plane was lifted into the water by block-and-tackle method and taken for a trial flight over Governors Island and the city by the pilot, Walter Hagen, who served as a scout with the German Navy during the war. Hagen will be in charge of the plane during the cruise.

Hagen has no license as an American pilot and so was not permitted to take any passengers with him. It was said that his flight was the first to be made over American fortifications by a German pilot since the war. Hagen experienced no difficulty yesterday and the process of taking the plane on and off the ship was found practicable. It was explained that the plane would be lifted off at each stop made by the ship and at a rate by minute charged for short flights and a fixed charge made for the longer trips. The idea is said to be new for the shorter cruises.

KARLSRUHE'S FOUR NAMES.

German Liner Due Tonight Has Had Varied Life and Christenings.

The North German Lloyd liner Karlsruhe, due late tonight from Bremen, has borne four names since she was built at Stettin in 1900. She came out first as the Prinzess Irene. In 1911 she grounded off Fire Island while in the New York-Mediterranean service.

After the war the liner became the Pocohontas and was used for carrying troops. Later she was in the passenger service of the U. S. Mail Lines. When the Shipping Board took over the vessels under that company's flag the Pocohontas was laid up at Gibraltar and later sold to the North German Lloyd, which had lost possession of the steamer in the World War. She was rechristened as the Bremen and has been running under that name until recently, when she was thoroughly overhauled and renamed Karlsruhe.

As the Bremen she rescued six of the crew of the steamship Laristan, which foundered off Sable Island in January, 1926, and her captain and crew were awarded medals for bravery.

The Karlsruhe is a twin-screw vessel of 10,896 gross tonnage, 523 feet long and 60 feet of beam and has two funnels.

Mexico Drops Vaccination Demand.

The Mexican Government has decided to eliminate the requirement of a vaccination certificate before granting a viss on the passports of tourists planning to visit the country and has instructed its consular agents to notify shipping and tourist companies to this effect, according to information received yesterday in shipping quarters.

McKinnon Refuses Another Term.

John W. McKinnon, President of the Hudson River Navigation Corporation, has notified the voting trustees that he will not be a candidate for re-election, as he will devote his time to other interests. The annual election will take place the latter part of this month.

CUTS PRICE OF KEROSENE

Atlantic Refining Lowers It From 14 to 13 Cents in Pennsylvania.

The Atlantic Refining Company has cut the tank wagon price of kerosene 1 cent a gallon to 13 cents throughout Pennsylvania, effective Feb. 8. It also has reduced kerosene 1 cent at Dover, Del., and 2 cents at Wilmington, Del. This is the first change in wholesale kerosene prices in Pennsylvania since last April.

The South Penn Oil Company has cut Somerset and Cabell crude oils 15 cents a barrel, making the former $1.45 a barrel and the latter $1.35 a barrel.

The weighted average price for all grades of United State motor gasoline in tank wagons at Tulsa, Okla., yesterday was 6.9347 cents a gallon, against 6 cents previously. Natural gasoline is being quoted at 6½@6½ cents a gasoline.

HENRY C. PEARSON QUITS HORACE MANN

He Resigns as Principal After 25 Years to Devote Time to Writing on Education.

HIS SERVICE IS PRAISED

Henry Carr Pearson resigned yesterday after twenty-five years as principal of the Horace Mann School of Teachers College, Columbia University, to devote his time to writing on educational subjects. His resignation becomes effective on July 15. It was accepted at the annual meeting of the trustees yesterday afternoon and Professor Rollo G. Reynolds, Provost of Teachers College, was named to succeed Mr. Pearson.

In accepting the resignation, Dean William F. Russell, himself a former pupil of Horace Mann, said:

"The resignation of Principal Henry Carr Pearson comes after twenty-five years of splendid service in the Horace Mann School. During Mr. Pearson's administration thousands of boys and girls have passed under his instruction and influence and have gone forth as useful citizens. By demonstrating its methods before thousands of graduate students at Teachers College it has influenced educational procedure throughout the world. One of the outstanding characteristics of the Horace Mann School is its cosmopolitan and democratic make-up. Mr. Pearson has been steadfast in his purpose to have it so. Our regret at his resignation is naturally great."

Mr. Pearson has written a score or more of textbooks of which more than 7,000,000 have been sold in the United States. He has had under his instruction more than 30,000 educators.

Professor Reynolds, the new principal, came to Teachers College after a varied experience in education. He had been principal of elementary and high schools in Vermont, served two years as assistant to the Vermont Commissioner of Education, and for two years was in charge of the Theodore M. Vail School of Agriculture. He has been Director of the Bureau of Educational Service, Professor of Education, and Secretary of Teachers College, besides serving as principal of Lincoln School of Teachers College. He holds the degrees of Bachelor of Arts from Dartmouth, Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy from Columbia. Of Mr. Pearson, he said:

"To have been at the head of Horace Mann School for twenty-five years is a great career. Professor Pearson in this important post has rendered outstanding service to education throughout the world. No school of elementary and secondary grade has so influenced educational practice as has Horace Mann. Professor Pearson has for a quarter of a century been responsible for this great international influence in education."

St. Ann's Parish to Have a Reunion.

St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church in the Bronx will hold its first parish reunion tonight at the Concourse Plaza Hotel. There will be a musicale in which the New York Glee Club and the chorus of fifty male voices will take part. The Rev. Martin F. Cavanagh is pastor of the church and the Rev. Michael J. Toner, assistant pastor. The proceeds will be applied to the building fund of the new church and school.

33 ALUMNI NOMINATED FOR HARVARD BOARDS

Election of Overseers, Directors and Fund Councilors Will Be Held by Mail.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 9.—Thirty-three nominations for the election of six members of the Harvard Board of Overseers, three directors of the Harvard Alumni Association and three members of the Harvard Fund Council were announced today by Ralph Lowell of Boston, Chairman of the Nominating Committee of the Harvard Alumni Association.

The balloting will be by mail, and the result will be announced at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association on commencement day in June in the Harvard yard. Five of the overseers will be elected for a term of six years and one for a term of four years to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of David F. Houston of New York City.

The men retiring from the Board of Overseers are Charles A. Coolidge of Boston, William S. Thayer of Baltimore, Henry James of New York City, Samuel S. Drury of Concord, N. H., and B. Loring Young of Boston.

Those nominated for overseers are: Edward Williams Atkinson, '81, of Boston; Homer Gage, '82, of Worcester, Mass.; Joseph Lee, '83, of Boston; Russell Tyson, '90, of Chicago; Jesse Isador Straus, '93, of New York City; Robert Homans, '94, of Boston; Wilson Marcy Powell, '96, of New York City; Philip Stockton, '98, of Boston; Clement Biddle Wood, '98, of Philadelphia; Mark Sullivan, '00, of Washington, D. C.; Nathaniel Horton Batcheldor, '01, of Windsor, Conn.; Greenville Clark, '03, of New York City; Nicholas Kelley, '06, of New York City; Samuel Hoar, '09, of Concord, Mass.; John Anderson Sweetser, '11, of Thompsonville, Conn., and Leverett Saltonstall, '14, of Chestnut Hill, Mass.

MRS. ELIAS GETS DIVORCE.

Justice Tierney Signs Decree for Wife of Retired Brewer.

A decree of divorce in favor of Mrs. Kate Leland Elias of the Plaza Hotel from William J. Elias, wealthy retired brewer and son of Henry Elias, founder of the Elias Brewing Company, was signed yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Tierney, who permits the plaintiff to resume her former married name of Mrs. Warren Leland Jr. The decree does not provide for alimony because the plaintiff did not request it.

The report is based on the decision of Official Referee Burr, finding the defendant guilty of misconduct on Oct. 21 last in the former Elias Brewing plant at 401 East Fifty-fourth Street, which he has fitted up as a residence. William F. McCumisky, a friend of the Elias family, testified that he visited the residence on the night in question with a detective and found a woman there who was not Mrs. Elias. The detective testified he had shadowed the house for many days and that the correspondent was there most of the time.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias, who were married in Jersey City in 1902, were separated last June, when they were living at the Hotel Buckingham.

Mrs. Hildreth S. Riddle Hostess.

Mrs. Hildreth Sisson Riddle gave a small dinner last night at the Embassy Club for Miss Eleanor Baxter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Baxter of Omaha, Neb., a débutante of last season. The other guests included the Misses Maude Merriman, Ruth Buck and Betty Riddle; Dudley Blossom, John Merriman, Allen Wood, Frank Righiemer and Ellis Laurimore Phillips.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—War Minister Painlevé in the Senate today pronounced against the Chamber of Deputies' provision in the war-time organization bill for calling the services of women, children and old people in the event of war. M. Painlevé declared that such a provision might be taken by the enemy as a license to include these groups among combatants and open to treatment as such in a siege or in the event of capture.

He said he approved the Senatorial Commission's action in suppressing the words "without distinction of age or sex" from the article in the bill pertaining to the organization of personal services.

"This suppression," said M. Painlevé, "was necessary, because we must not permit an unscrupulous adversary to contend that such a text in our bill allows all old people, children and women to be considered as belligerents.

"I likewise congratulate the commission for strictly avoiding the use of the word 'mobilization.' No one ever thought of mobilizing the civil population. It is only a question of drafting services, which is entirely a different matter in the military sense. Civilians thus drafted will remain under the authority of civil officials and under the jurisdiction of the civil courts. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that this law is in no respect a military law, but on the contrary proposes to regulate the status of the population which is not mobilized."

M. Painlevé indicated that the principal motives of the bill aimed at rapid and efficient adaptation of the nation to the necessities of defense and the elimination of war profiteering.

In introducing the measure before the Senate the commission's Chairman, M. Cheron, quoted President Coolidge in support of making adequate preparations for defense at the same time as sincerely working for world peace.

"Since the Senate's discussion of foreign policies important events have taken place in the signature of the Franco-American Arbitration Treaty," said M. Cheron, "and I render homage to the peaceful intentions of these Governments. But let us not forget that on the eighteenth of November last, Mr. Coolidge announced that the United States on the sea was going to increase the numbers of its submarines and cruisers, and on the land greatly develop aviation. 'Let us hope for peace,' he said, 'but we hold a great treasure and must see it properly protected.'

"We also hold a great treasure," exclaimed M. Cheron, in urging the immediate unanimous passage of the war-time bill.

Cosgrave Thanks Dr. Butler.

In reply to his message of Feb. 4, expressing regret at "false reports" of President Cosgrave's having been hissed at his Columbia University welcome, President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia received the following message from President Cosgrave yesterday: "Very grateful, kind message. I shall never forget wonderful reception at Columbia."

Long Island Bridge Authorized.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP).—Among the bridge applications approved today by the War Department was one from Samuel Eichen of New York City for a bridge over Hook Creek, near Cedarhurst, L. I.

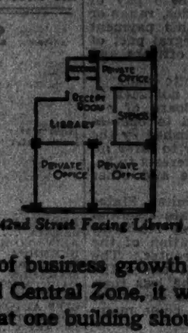
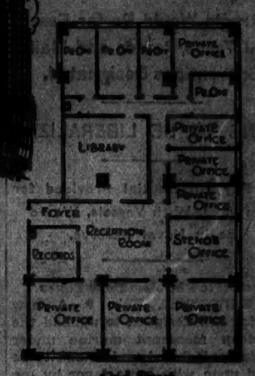
There is a Vast Difference in Office Buildings—



A fine suite of offices with South and East exposure, partitioned with steel and glass or plaster block—$5,000

42nd Street Facing Library

A splendid suite with 21 windows, and light from 3 directions. Ideal for concern requiring many private offices. Price, fully partitioned as shown $13,000



IN this era of business growth in the Grand Central Zone, it was inevitable that one building should be erected outstanding in quality of details and appointments. This distinction is merited in the superb, new Salmon Tower Building. Quality of finish is not confined merely to the outside and in the lobby where it will show, as is customary, but in every appointment on every floor throughout, for it was built for permanent investment and is not for sale.

The appointments in every detail are such that your office will not only be handsome and fine when you move in, but will remain so through the years of your occupancy. And yet, with this superiority, with service on the highest plane, front doors on both 42nd and 43rd Streets, at a location that is prominent and accessible in the extreme, you will find rentals most reasonable and a wide choice of the finest office space in the Grand Central Zone.

You may select your office from finished floors and obtain exactly the space you require,—from a choice single office or suite, to a vast floor of over 26,000 sq. ft.
